EGYPTIAN mappage or the Grecian urn
Did once perpetuate a father's clay;
Preserving through slow centuries and gray
The human remnant for the hope eterne.
And what the fires of funerals could not burn,
Nor Time's insidious tooth gnaw quite away,
Became a shrine of virtues, where might pray
The latest sons, and of their fathers learn.

But we, grown wiser, plant a family tree,
And 'neath its broadening branches sit us down,
Content to trace a noble pedigree
Unapt to urn a rich and high renown;
Content to dream of knights armed cap-a-pie,
Yet hoping from the sky to see a crown.

AUTHOR'S PREFACE.

I VENTURE the assertion that thus far no antidote has been discovered for the cure of the so-called "genealogical fever." My friends tell me I have it in an aggravated form and it would seem so. Last year I published the Whitney Genealogy, a volume of 700 pages, and now present "The Fiske Family." I have been greatly assisted in my work by Bond's Watertown and the volume compiled by Rev. Albert A. Fiske of Austin, Ill., on the Amherst, N. H., Fiskes. The family is noted for its strong religious proclivities inherited from its English ancestors, who on account of their Puritanic belief, were obliged to flee from their native land or be beheaded or burnt at the stake at the pleasure of their fanatical associates. One of the emigrant ancestors—a graduate of Immanuel College and an eminent divine—was secreted in a wood-pile for nearly a year and finally escaped to America in disguise, here to become one of the ablest preachers; and as Cotton Mather said, "Did he shine in the golden candlestick of Chelmsford, a plain, but an able, powerful and useful preacher of the Gospel." But few of the early New England families can boast of as many descendants who were in the various professions as the Fiske family.

Until this publication the many emigrant ancestors of the Fiskes have not been connected in any one publication. The matter has been arranged in the same manner as my previous publications, like the Register issued by the New England Historic-Genealogical Society. It is the simplest, most comprehensive and the best of any plan yet devised.

A number of abbreviations will be found in the book of which the following are explanations: ac., aged; abt., about; dau., daughter; dec'd, deceased; res., resides or resided, residence; w., wife; wid., widow and widower; yr., year; n. f. k., nothing further known; s. p., sine prole (without issue). There are a number of other abbreviations of such common use that their meaning will be readily understood. A name in parenthesis thus: Anna Fisk, dau. of Robert and Sybil (Gould) Fiske, indicates the maiden name of the mother. An interrogation point implies doubt or want of absolute certainty. Birthplaces of the children are not always given, but can be ascertained by reference to the residence of the parents which is always given. I wish to return thanks to all those who so generously furnished the requested information. If all had responded a number of the lines would be more complete. Thanks are especially due, Mrs. Silas A. Pierce, Grafton, Mass.; Miss Lou M. Pierce, Worcester, Mass.; F. L. Ora of Chicago, Ill.; Prof. John Fiske, Cambridge, Mass.; Col. Francis S. Fiske of Boston; Hon. Joseph Fiske of Wellesley Farms, Mass.; Rev. A. A. Fiske and others who rendered valuable aid and assistance.

It is the sincere wish of the writer that the descendants of the Fiskes will take as much pleasure in perusing these pages as I did in compiling them.

Very truly,

Chicago, July 30, 1896.

THE FIRST FISK.

The family of Fiske flourished for a very long period in England, in the County of Suffolk. So early as the eighth year of the reign of King John, A. D. 1208, we find the name of Daniel Fisc of Laxfield appended to a document issued by the King, confirming a grant of land in Digneveton Park, made by the Duke of Loraine to the men of Laxfield. The original is in the Public Record office in London and is dated May 1, 1208. The following is a copy:

Confirmation by King John, May 1, 1208, to the men of Laxfield of land in the Park of Digneveton, granted by the Duke of Loraine. The following are the names of those to whom the grant was made:

Robert Garenoise, Eustice Percario, Henry de la Hose, Walter de Holoc, William son of Robert, William Daniel, Jeffrey Daniel and Daniel their brother, Daniel Cuppario, Brithmaro, son of Brithwalden, Stephen Proest, Stephen Archer, Eustace son of Phillip, Melvine wife of Roger Gadermod, Picot son of William, Bernard son of Roger, Edmund son of Robert, Jordan son of Robert, William son of Gilbert, Robert son of Brithmar, Simon son of Edric, William Odonis, Godfrey and Herbert, Robert son of Jeffrey, Osbert a clerk, Ralph a clerk, Hadebrand Haiward, Robert son of William, Simon son of Turstan, Brithmar son of Godwin, Roger Haiward, Richard Haddoc, Reignald son of Godwin, and Robert and Daniel his brothers. John Emelin, Johnson of Roger, William Wudewell, Roger Crespi, Henry son of Ade, Roger Hunne, Matilda wife of Gilbert, Ernest de Radbrooke, and Robert his brother, Gerald son of Adwin and DANIEL FISC.

ORIGIN OF THE NAME FISKE.

The name Fisk is simply an older form of Fish. In Anglo-Saxon times the termination sh was regularly sounded hard, like sk. The breakfasting Englishman of those days ate his fisc from a disc. The name is one of a large class of appellatives taken from the animal world, such as Herring, Salmon, Pike, Crabb, Tench, Spratt, Peacock, Swan, Drake, Crane, Hawke, Bird, Lyon, Hart, Fox, Bull, Lamb, Kidd, Cheever (goat), Todd (fox), Purcell (piggy), Hare, Colt, Palfrey, etc.

The origin of this class of surnames is not perfectly clear. The largest and most familiar groups of surnames are either (1) patronymics, such as Johnson, Jones, Wilson, etc.; or (2) names of villages and estates, such as Washington, Frothingham (a corruption of Fotheringham), Greenough (green field), Holmes (meadow), Stanley (stony pasture), etc.; or (3) names descriptive of occupation or social position, such as Mason, Carpenter, Franklin (country squire), Baker and its feminine Baxter, Thatcher and Thaxter, Weaver and Webster, Draper, Smith, Fletcher (arrow-maker), Chapman (merchant), Cooper, Butler, Cartwright, Sargent, Waterman, Sawyer, Chandler, Bishon, Abbot, Clark, Constable, Spencer (steward) Grosvenor (chief huntsman), Woodward (forest-keeper), Youmans (yeoman), etc.

The earliest use of family names in England was about the beginning of the eleventh century. Long before that time, indeed, clan names were common, and such were always patronymics, e. g., Fotherings, the descendants of Fother; Beormings, the descendants of Beorm; Icklings, the descendants of Ickel. At the time of the Anglo-Saxon conquest of Britain (fifth and sixth centuries) it was customary for a clan to settle in a stockaded village by itself, and all English towns whose names end in ham or ton, preceded by ing, were originally the abodes of single clans; e. g., Birmingham, home of the children of Beorm; Icklington, town of the children of Ickel. Besides these general clan names no others were in use except individual names, such as Alfred or Edith.

The use of family names, beginning in the eleventh century, increased slowly. It was not until the fifteenth century that such names became nearly universal, and also stationary. At first they were shifting in usage. Thus, the same man might be called Henry Wilson, because his father was named William, or Henry Frothingham, because he lived at the village of Fotheringham, or Henry Draper, because of his occupation. If the son of this Henry were named Robert, and were any kind of a worker in metals, from an armourer to a blacksmith, he might be known as Robert Harrison or Robert Smith. Surnames had not ceased to fluctuate in this way until the fifteenth century, and it was not until late in the sixteenth that more importance began to be attached to the family surname than to the individual baptismal name. It appears, therefore, that in tracing back the Fiske genealogy into the fourteenth century, we are approaching the time at which difficulty must arise from fluctuations of surname. Thus the paternal grandfather of David Fiske might have been called David Johnson, if John were his father's name, or David Franklin, if he were a country squire. In the thirteenth century we should be quite likely to encounter such confusion and to find the helpfulness of surnames in tracing genealogies vastly diminished.

Surnames derived from estates or localities seem to have been the first to become stationary, and next after them the surnames derived from trade or office, since sons have so commonly followed their fathers in business. The class of names to which Fiske belongs is certainly quite different in origin from the three great classes above mentioned. What, then, was its origin? Why should a man be called Wolf, or Heron, or Pike?

We are at first struck with the fact that barbarians commonly use such names, both for individuals and for clans. Such individual names as Grey Wolf or Yellow Raccoon often owe their origin to some personal peculiarity or to some irrecoverable incident. Among American Indians, and in general among barbarians all over the world, the clans are apt to have such names as Wolf, Eagle, Salmon, Turtle, etc.; the totem, or symbol of the Wolf clan, the idol or image of its tutelary deity, is likely to be a rude image of a wolf or wolf's head; and in many cases the clan is supposed to have had a wolf for its first ancestor.

Shall we say, then, that animal surnames in modern English are survivals of ancient heathen clan-names? Are Fiskes descended from a Fish clan among the East Angles? To this view there seems to be a serious objection. The conversion of our English forefathers from heathenism to Christianity was completed in the seventh century, at least four hundred years before the earliest use of surnames in England. The old clan system, moreover, had crumbled to pieces long before the Norman Conquest. It is not likely, therefore, that habits of naming characteristic of the old heathen clans could have persisted long enough to give rise to a whole class of surnames so late as the eleventh and twelfth centuries.

Between the ancient systems of totem devices and the heraldry of the Middle Ages there were many analogies and doubtless some points of connection; though, on the whole, the former must be regarded as the predecessor of the latter, not as its ancestor. The mediæval heraldry was growing up in England during the eleventh and twelfth centuries, and it made an extensive use of conventionalized heads of familiar animals, not merely lions, wolves, and bulls, but many kinds of bird and fish, as well as such imaginary creatures as dragons, griffins, and cockatrices. For example, Lucy is the heraldic name for pike, and the shield of the De Lucy family bears on a field gules three lucies or. From this emblem the family surname is likely to have arisen, just as Geoffrey Plantagenet was so called from the sprig of broom or genesta plant worn in his helmet. The familiar name of Pike, as well as that of the Puritan magistrate, Sir Thomas Lucy, who arrested Shakespeare for poaching, has probably come from the heraldic use of pikes or lucies.

The explanation which serves for one of this class of animal surnames might perhaps serve for all; but there is another point to be considered. Heraldic devices were used not only upon banners and coats-of-arms, but also upon signboards, not merely of inns but of other places of business. In days when reading and writing were not common accomplishments, such devices were in general use, and they survived down to a recent time. For tavern signs they are not yet extinct. In old times, as often at the present day in Europe, the shop and the homestead were usually contained in the same building. Thus in the seventeenth century the father of John Milton, who was a solicitor, notary public, and law-stationer, had his office and his home in a certain house known as the Spread Eagle, in Bread Street, Cheapside. Over the front door was the figure of an eagle with outstretched wings. For four or five centuries before Milton's time, in going through any town, you would have passed by a succession of such signs of hawks, cranes, dolphins, salmon, lambs, and bulls, thus finding your way to the particular shop and homestead of which you were in quest. The principle upon which the signs were chosen is not always obvious. Sometimes a family name may have suggested the sign, as if a man named Crow were to paint a black crow over his door; but in early times the sign undoubtedly preceded and suggested the name. The family which dwelt at the sign of the crow came to be called Crow, in the same way that a family which dwelt at a country house called Greenough or Greenhalge (green field) came to be called by the name of the house.

There is nothing in the Fiske coat-of-arms, as used in the last three or four centuries, to suggest fishes or any occupation associated therewith. But if the name goes back into the twelfth century, as quite possibly it may, there is a chance that it may have been connected with some heraldic fish emblem since disused. It is quite as likely to have its origin in a sign. As I said above, it is difficult to determine with confidence the precise origin of names of this class.

The reader may be interested in the coincidence that Laxfield, the name of the parish where our Fiske forefathers dwelt for at least three centuries, means "salmon field." I think the name has been applied to the place for more than a thousand years, but I have no theory as to its origin. The name Stadhaugh (sometimes incorrectly written Stradhaugh) is compounded of stead and haugh. The former means station or home, so that the word "homestead" is a case of tautology. A haugh was a cleared field in the days when much of England was covered with virgin forest. Stadhaugh is thus equivalent to "home in a cleared field."

What Prof. Rasmus B. Anderson says:

Prof. Rasmus B. Anderson of Madison, Wis., ex-minister to Denmark, in writing sends the following:

Madison, Sept. 19, 1896.

Col. Fred Pierce, Chicago, Ill.

My Dear Sir:—I have your favor of the 13th inst., in regard to the name of "Fisk." Fisk means in Norwegian "fish" and of course the name may be of Scandinavian origin. I am pretty familiar with Scandinavian nomenclature, but I cannot recall any Dane, Swede or Norwegian by that name."

Dr. Henry Mortimer Fiske, a native of Sturbridge, residing in San Francisco, writing in September, 1895, says: "The name for long centuries back was Fiske. It is a Scandinavian name and is as common in Denmark and Sweden as Smith is here. The meaning of the name is 'fish' and all Scandinavians call a fish, fiske. The Danes have in Greenland a harbor called Fiskenares, and also one in the island of St. Thomas, one of the West Indies, of the same name Fiskenares, meaning in English fish harbor. I have also an old book published in London in 1760, called the young man's book of knowledge, which is dedicated to the Rev. James Fiske, a rector of the church of England. In an old book, a history of one of the counties of England, speaking of one of the civil wars there the name of lord or viscount Fiske is there mentioned as one of the civil magistrates. The book is one of the first printed and is nearly 300 years old. In both Sweden and Denmark the name is always spelt Fiske. I have satisfied myself the name was introduced into England at the time of the Danish invasion. I am further satisfied that the 'e' was left off in England more for the convenience of spelling on the part of our forefathers than any other cause, as those old fellows, even the most learned, had a habit of phonetic spelling in many instances a desire to cut things short."

The late Miss Fidelia Fisk of Ooroomeyah, Persia, a veteran missionary, informed the writer of this sketch that "there seemed to be some connection between the name and the word 'fiscal.' Somewhere she had been told that, before the appearance of the family name, 'the fisk' was one of the appointed public officers. Much of the revenue of those days was collected in dried fish, and Fisk, or Fiske, is the plural of fish in the Danish language. Quintals of fish were at that time used as currency even.

"A ministerial crank, whom I came upon once in traveling, claimed that 'there were few of the family names in N. E. that could not be traced back to the Greek!' Whereupon I replied, 'Let me hear you take my name over that course.' Without hesitation he replied, 'Your name came by way of Denmark, did it not? It is probably all one with Fish. Now, in the Greek, fish is ichtheus. Prefix the digamma and you have Fichtheus. Drop the termination, and you have Fich, or Fisch, or Fische, which would very soon be worn down to Fish, or Fiske-Fisk.'"

In reading a valuable article from Rev. Wm. H. Griffis, on the "Influence of the Netherlands upon the N. E. Emigrants," I found a statement to the effect that "many of the emigrants from Suffolk County, England, to Holland, in returning to England, or coming over to America, were found to have shortened their names to a monosyllable. Fisher thus became Fish."

This led to a brief correspondence, in the beginning of which that stalwart defender of the rights and honors of the Dutch expressed his confidence, that "the name of Fiske-Fisk was among those mentioned in the early literature of the Netherlands." Search, however, only discovered a "Fisker" in Holland, who came from and returned to England, but neither in England nor America was the name of Fisker found thereafter, but the name of Fiske-Fisk is there among the emigrants before 1640.

It only adds to the plausibility of this theory to remember that almost every one of the emigrant Fiske-Fisk name had a trade which must have been originally learned in Holland—weaver, tanner, spinner, dyer, etc.

Webster's Dictionary has this to say of the name: Fisk (fisk) verb irrelevant (ch. Swedish ijeska, to bustle about), to run about; to frisk; to whisk. "He fisks abroad and stirreth up erroneous opinions."—Latimer.

Fisk, fisc, fiskin, fyisk (Swedish ijeska). "What frek of thy folde fisketh thus aboute?"—Piers Plowman, c. x. 153.

Scots Law: The right of the crown to the movable estate of a rebel. (Encyclopedic Dictionary.)

Fish, fis, fisc, fisch, fiss, fische, fyche, fyisch, fysshe, s. (Anglo-Saxon, fisc; cognate with Dutch, visch; Icelandic, fisky; Danish, fisk; German, fisch; Swedish, fisk; Goth., fisks; O. LORD OF THE MANOR OF STADHAUGH.

Symond Fiske, Lord of the Manor of Stadhaugh, held lands in Laxfield Parish, and was probably grandson * of Daniel Fisc, before mentioned. He bore for his arms, chequy, argent and gules, upon a pale, sable, three mullets pierced, or. These arms, with a crest added, were confined to Prof. Nicholas Fiske, professor in Physic, of Stadhaugh, in Laxfield.

In 1633 a charter of confirmation was issued from Herald's College. It acknowledges the use of the arms by an ancestor to all the emigrants.

To all and singular persons to whom these presents shall come, Wm. Segar, Knight, Garter Principall, King of Arms of Englishmen, sendeth his due commendations and greeting in our Lord God everlasting. Know yea that anciently and gules, upon a pale sable, three mullets or, pierced and wanting further for an ornament onto his said coate of Armes, as diverse auncient coates are found to want, a convenient creaste or cognizance fitt for him the said Nicholas to beare, who hath requested me the saide Garter to assign him such a one as he may lawfullie use without wrong doing or prejudice to any person or persons whatsoever which according to his due request I have accomplished and granted in manner and forme followeth (that is to say), on a hearme a torse argent and gules a triangle, argent, above the upper angle an estoile, or, mantelled gules, doubled argent, as more plainly appeareth depicted in the margent hereof. All which armes and creaste I the said Garter King of Armes by power and authoritie of my office, under the great seal of England, due appoint, give, grant, ratifie and confirme onto the said Nicholas Fiske and to his posteritie forever and that it shal be lawfull for him and them to use and show forth the same in signet, shield, ensigne, or coate armor or otherwise at his or their pleasure, at all times, and in all places, according to the ancient laws or arms and laudable custome of England, without let or mollestation. In witness whereof, I the saide Garter have hereunto set my hand and seale of office, the 16th day of November, A. D. 1633, and in the 9th year of the raigne of our Souveraigne Lord Charles by the Grace of God, King of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, defender of the Faith, etc.

This motto is evidently taken from Virgil's Aeneid, the ninth book. In the 640th and 641st lines of this book you will find: "Atque his victorem affatur Iulum: Macte nova virtute, puer: sic itur ad astra."

Another authority describes the arms as follows: Fisk Armes: Checkie, Argent and Gules, on pale sable 1.88 by .43 inches, check $\frac{1}{4}$ inch Gules right hand upper corner alternate Argent. Form, Top & side 5 checks right lined and right angled; bottom, spade shaped, three Mulletts, or, pierced. Crest: Torse 1.03 by .1 inch Argent & Gules, Triange equilateral, .65 inch, above upper angle an Estoile, or, mantled Gules, doubled Argent, .1 inch.

The said arms and crest are registered in the Heraldry book of Middlesex, made by Sir Henry, signed George Knight Richmond. Hen: Lily, Rouge, Rose.

Heraldry, a relic of the feudal ages, took its rise in the crusades, and was employed to denote the manly virtues. Since then armorial bearings have served very much the same purpose of the modern diploma, and have been cherished because deemed the patent or respectability. Esteemed at first by the landed from the beginning it hath been a custome in all countries and common wealths well governed, that the bearing of certain signes in shields (commonlie called arms) hath been and are the only markes and demonstrations either of prowess, virtue and valour in times of war or peace, and of good life and conversation for learning, magistracy and civil government in times of peace diversley distributed according to the qualities and deserts of the persons demeriting the same, which order, as it was most prudentlie devised in the beginning, to stirr and kindle the hearts of men to the imitation of virtue and nobleness; even so hath the same been and yet is continually observed to the end that such as have done commendable service to Prince and country either in war or peace may receive due honor in their lives, and also devise after their deatthes successively to their posterity. Amongst the which number I find Nicholas Fiske of Studhaw in the parish of Laxfield, in the county of Suffolk, Professor in Phisick, son of Nathan Fiske of the same son of William, son of Thomas, son of William Fiske of Studhaw aforesaid that lived in the raignes of King Henry the sixt, Edward the III, Richard the third and King Henry the seventh, who beared for their coats armor, as followeth viz, checkey argent gentry at pleasure, they afterwards came under the regulation of law. The Herald's College was established, and a general registration took place in the sixteenth century, when pedigrees were accepted and registered, the disorder or irregularity or fraudulent bought rectified.

FISKE WILLS IN SUFFOLK COUNTY, ENGLAND.

In 1854 Col. Francis S. Fiske, of Keene, N. H., now a resident of Boston, Mass., and United States Commissioner, employed the well known American genealogist and antiquarian, Horatio G. Somerby, then residing in Camden Square, London, to thoroughly inspect and copy from the records in the various parishes in Suffolk County, England. He found a mass of very valuable data relating to the English ancestors of the American Fiskes from 1462 to 1635.

Mr. Somerby first visited the several Suffolk parishes where he knew the Fiskes had resided and made extracts from the parish registers which were of sufficient antiquity to suit his purpose. The registers of South Elmham and Weybread, however, in one of which he expected to find the baptism of one of the American emigrants, did not date back far enough to give it. He next consulted some of the wills of the early Fiskes and found sufficient to justify him in the belief that Nathan Fiske, of Watertown, Massachusetts Colony, was the eighth in descent from the first Simon of Laxfield, through Robert, of St. James, South Elmham, who was his great-grandfather. Simon was Lord of the Manor of Stadhaugh, in Laxfield, Suffolk County, England, in the time of Henry the Sixth.

Between the years 1462 and 1635 he found some fifty wills of Fiskes proved in Suffolk County, all of the same family, abstracts of which were furnished and are inserted in their proper places, others of this family are as follows:

WILLIAM FISKE, OF RENDHAM. Will presented July 17, 1472. Mentions his sons, William, Robert, Thomas and John and Walter Fiske, of Peasenhall. Wife Margaret.

THOMAS FISKE, OF BADENHAM. Will dated Sept. 13, 1488. Wife Agnes. Sons, William and John.

JOHN FISKE OF DISS CO., NORFOLK. Will dated in 1488. Speaks of his wife, Elizabeth, and Mr. John Fiske, clerk.

WILLIAM FISKE, OF BEEDES. Will dated 1505. Wife, Jane. Witnessed by John Fiske and others.

RECOLLECTIONS OF A VISIT TO LAXFIELD.

(By Isabella H. Fiske, of Wellesley Farms, Mass.)

To the member of the family who is interested in its early history, and is taking a trip in England there will be hardly anything more fruitful of enjoyment than turning aside a little from the beaten track and visiting his ancestral home of Laxfield, in Suffolk, from which the American branch of the Fiskes emigrated.

The town and its vicinity make an interesting study. The nearest railroad town, and one with which the Fiskes themselves were early identified, is Framlingham, some eight miles distant, and with twenty-five hundred inhabitants. The town itself claims through tradition to date from the time of Redwald, king of the East Angles. It is certainly as early as the Norman period, as the structure of its castle shows.

This is a fine old ruin, one of the largest in England, covering over an acre of ground, with its thick walls, arched gateway, and rising towers. It has a most interesting history, having been held since the earliest records till through the thirteenth century by the baronial family of the Bigods, these being bestowed by Edward I. upon his son Thomas, of Brotherton, and still later coming into the hands of the Mowbrays and Howards: families later represented by the earls and dukes of Norfolk. It was at one time surrendered into the hands of John, and again, much later, was seized by the crown and became the residence of Queen Mary of England, being afterwards restored to the Howards by James I. Coming, in the seventeenth century, through purchase, into the hands of Sir Robert Hitcham, it was considerably dismantled, and was finally, on the hard terms of its entire demolition given over by his will into the possession of Pembroke College, Cambridge.

There is also in Framlingham, the fine old church of St. Michael's, dating in part from the thirteenth century, and harboring as its chief treasure the altar tombs of the Howards; the most noted among whom are the two earls of Surrey, one victor of Flodden field, the other, the gifted poet of the Tudor era, and a victim of Henry VII.

Modern Framlingham is quiet enough, boasting as its chief interest, the Albert Memorial College, a large school for boys. It still keeps its antiquarian interest as central, however.

The name of Fiske is by no means an unknown one here. It may be found upon the stones in St. Michael's churchyard, which is comparatively recent, occurring about half a dozen times. It is to be seen in the town records also, and over shop doors and the like, occasionally. In one instance, however, the proprietor—whose name was Fisk—of one of the stores there, on being interviewed in regard to his family was unfortunately unable to trace back his lineage even so far as his own grandfather. But we may feel ourselves quite justified in identifying the early history of the family with that of the town in all the stirring scenes that were witnessed there.

In Framlingham we have a strong recollection of the past. In Laxfield we have the past itself, as something still present, not yet outgrown. It is all delightfully typical of England. In the first place, we have the real English country. We have behind us all thought of time and press of circumstances, and stroll leisurely along the winding lanes, shut in by green hedgerows from the sloping hillsides where the sheep and cattle graze peacefully. We have the country life of centuries ago, too. It is all just as it was when, as an old play tells us: "Prince Charlie came riding down to hunt the deer at Laxfield with his men," or when Cromwell and his men came riding along that way on their destructive mission.

Come they did, most probably along this route, for the little church at Laxfield bears traces of vandal hands, which marked the overzeal of the Roundheads. As we enter the little town, of about five hundred inhabitants, the whole atmosphere is delightful, this stepping out of the whirl of traffic, the rush of modern life, and breathing this quieter air, with its suggestions of lavender and musk, its folds and creases of the past still lingering. The great charm is the quaint unconsciousness of it all. The centuries have slipped by unnoted, and the old church still waits for the awakening touch that seems as far away as ever. The handful of houses grouped around it are true English country homes. The rectory one would wish particularly to visit: a charming little place, which, with its bowers of green and rosevines and suggestions of perpetual summer, has all the romance and quaintness of the setting of the "Vicar of Wakefield." The rector seems the Vicar himself, gray and gentle as he is; a most hospitable man, who keeps up from his little retreat with the movement of the world's forces, yet with a contemplative, rather than an active interest.

We have a strong sense of ownership in this ancestral home of ours as we linger along its shaded street, on our way to the churchyard. This grows upon us as we find upon the mossgrown stones half obliterated epitaphs, containing the familiar family name. It is something set off from the thoroughfare of the ceaseless throng of tourists; a little by-way in which we can take an especial pride, and something as deserving of study as many a better known object of attention.

As we enter the exquisite little church, we note the rich, time-darkened carving, the finely executed stone-work of the fourteenth century, and the later Jacobin influence in the work. It is all genuine from the quaint baptismal font within, to the square tower without, rising amid the trees.

In the parish register, which is hardly ever opened, the records begin with the sixteenth century and the name of an Elizabeth Fisk is found to be one of the first entries, in 1510. Thus the old register bears witness that the Fiskes were identified with the town at the earliest account, and suggests a far-stretching past as a fertile field for the imagination.

The feeling of ownership culminates, of course, in visiting the old homestead, Stadhaugh perhaps a mile distant. It is a fine old estate, with its hundreds of acres still kept up and well stocked with sheep and cattle, and its traces of manor-house dignity. Its quaintly arranged chambers, its rambling roominess, and low-reaching rafters make an effective background for the bright laughter and merry sport of the rosy checked English children in the family now occupying it. We may look back here in imagination upon the environments of the Stadhaugh Fiskes in the old days of Henry IV. and Henry VI., when they were persecuted for their loyalty, and picture the lives of our own ancestors there to whose deeds of highmindedness Cotton Mather has made stirring allusion, naming this very estate of Stadhaugh as the scene of the events he has narrated to us. Surely the old homestead, arousing as it does our pride and patriotism, is a fitting link in the past and present of the family history.

Typical as Laxfield and its environs are, it is hard to describe even in detail without seeming to generalize. The associations are of course of more immediate interest than the objects themselves. Yet one gets a great deal of satisfaction, in this particular instance at least, by going back to the haunts of his family's childhood. If you can not do this in person, take down your Oliver Goldsmith and read over again some of the descriptions of Wakefield and its vicar. You will hardly be far from the truth. If you can go, do. You will see no reason, if you are a lover of freshness in quaintness, of the historic past, and of rural England of today to regret having visited your family's early home, Laxfield.

Scoble, Henry Fiske

THE MANOR OF STADHAUGH.

(Rev. Franklin Woodbury Fisk.)

Extracts from my notebook of travel, describing a visit made in July, 1872, to the Manor of Stadhaugh, town of Laxfield, county of Suffolk, England, for several generations in the possession of the Fisk family:

July 23, 1872, Laxfield, at "The Royal Oak" hotel.—Leaving Cambridge at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, I came by rail to Framlingham, the nearest station to Laxfield, six miles distant. Calling on two brothers, Henry and George Fisk, the first a glazier, and the other a shop-keeper, to see if I could learn anything respecting their ancestry. I found that I could learn absolutely nothing except that their father, many years before, came from the neighborhood of Laxfield. I ordered dinner at "The Crown" hotel, at 5 o'clock, and meanwhile visited the old castle, now in ruins, to which Queen Mary fled when Lady Jane Grey was placed upon the throne. It must have been a very strong castle in its day. I also visited the ancient church in which is the tomb of the celebrated poet, Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey, beheaded by Henry VIII. After dinner I started off at 6 o'clock to walk to Laxfield. It was a sweltering day, and I had a hard walk, though in many respects a pleasant one, reaching Laxfield about 8 o'clock. I called at once on the rector of the church, Rev. John Dallas, a gentleman of some 60 years of age, who has been pastor of the church here twenty years. He received me very courteously, and kindly offered to go with me in the morning to the old church and inspect the records of the baptisms, marriages and deaths of persons who had lived in the parish since the time of Queen Elizabeth, as the records did not extend back of that date. After engaging lodgings at "The Royal Oak," I called, at the suggestion of the rector, on an aged gentleman (Mr. Brightly), who for many years has been an officer in the church, and has known the inhabitants of the town for sixty years. He kindly gave me all the information about the Fisk family he possessed, and said that there had been no one of that name living in the town for the last twenty years.

Woodbridge, July 24.—After breakfast yesterday morning, I accompanied Rev. Mr. Dallas and his accomplished daughter to the venerable church edifice, with its ancient Norman tower. We opened the rusty iron chest, took from it the old records, and pored over them for hours, till 12 o'clock, trying to decipher the almost hieroglyphic characters of the writing. We turned first to the records of baptisms, which we found did not extend back of 1579, and these records, as nearly as we could make them out, were as follows. (There is copied into my notebook a list of twenty-seven baptisms extending from the year 1579 to the year 1651, which was as far as I copied.) The name Fisk stands the second one of the names on these records, and is almost uniformly spelled for some years, "Fyske," but when a new minister or clerk came to enter the name, he spelled it differently, and often without the final "e." Indeed, in one or two instances the name seemed to have been spelled differently in the same entry of a baptism, thus: "Mary Fyske, daughter of Nicholas Fysk, was baptized the 8th day of Nov., 1581." After the entry in the year 1514, the "y" in the name becomes changed into "i," thus: Ffiske or Ffisk.

I noticed this record of a marriage: "Married, Henry Ffiske and Margarett Smith, the 20th day of Sept., 1590."

I find that the "Studhaw" estate (or as it is indifferently spelled, "Studhaw," "Sudhaw," "Stadhaugh"), was in the possession of a Mr. John Smith, and I suspect that he came into its possession through the marriage connection of the Fisks and Smiths referred to above. This Mr. Smith appears to have been a man of intelligent and benevolent views, as he willed the whole estate, consisting of about 112 acres of excellent land, with good buildings, to the town of Laxfield in trust, the income of which should be forever appropriated to the support of a school for the training in the common branches of an English education, of forty poor orphan boys of the town of Laxfield, or if necessary, of the county of Suffolk, after which these boys were to be taught some useful trade. The bequest was made, I think, in 1718, and ever since the school has been doing this noble work. It is under the care of seven trustees, of whom the Rev. John Dallas is chairman. I visited the school and was much pleased with it.

I walked out with Mr. Dallas to the estate, lying about half a mile from the village, and was politely received and hospitably entertained by the tenants, Mr. Thomas Reed and wife, who showed me through the house, which must have been quite a grand one in its day, though changed from age to age, not always, as I think, for the better. In the garret of the house I saw fine old oak wainscoting that generations ago adorned the lower rooms of the manor house. The building is of stone, of very ample dimensions on the ground, and has a very large kitchen, and butter and cheese rooms, and has commodious outbuildings. The rent of the estate is £170 a year. Mr. Reed's father and grandfather lived as tenants on the estate, in all for ninety years. After spending a very pleasant hour at this delightful house of my ancestors for several generations, I returned to the quaint little village of Laxfield, and bidding "good-bye" to my kind friend, Mr. Dallas, walked back to Framlingham, and taking a railway train to this place (Woodbridge), stopped here over night to call on Mr. Samuel Fisk and his two sons, whom I found to be prosperous business men. The father had left Laxfield forty years ago, and had established himself in Woodbridge, in the cabinet-making business, in which he had been very successful.

VISIT TO FRAMLINGHAM, DENNINGTON AND LAXFIELD.

(By Prof. John Fiske, of Cambridge.)

With regard to an article on the English Fiskes, I hardly think I know anything which you do not know already, but with regard to the Manor House, I can tell you briefly of a visit which I made there in June, 1880. I had been giving some lectures in London, and was going thence to Edinburgh to give a course of lectures there. I stopped at Ipswich and passed a night at the Great White Horse Inn, immortalized in "Pickwick Papers." Took the train next morning for the quaint old market town of Framlingham. The English, by the way, do not pronounce that "F", and I suppose that our Framlingham was named after it. At Framlingham, my wife and I took a dog cart and drove through Dennington, where Nicholas Fiske lived in the days of "Bloody Mary," to Laxfield, which is nine miles from Framlingham, and almost within the salt smell of the German Ocean. I felt very doubtful whether there would be anything to see at Laxfield more than a meadow or potato patch, but it would be something to see even the site which one's forefathers left when they came to New England. I inquired of a man working on the road, and learned that the Manor House of Stadhaugh was still standing, and that information on local history might be obtained from Mr. Aldrich, the parish clerk. After a pleasant call at the house of this gentleman, I continued on my way until at the end of a very long hedgerow I saw the quaint farmhouse known as Stadhaugh Manor. The present occupant, Mr. Thomas Read, was standing at the gate. On my mentioning my name, he invited us into the dining-room, a long, low-studded room with large fire-place, tall clock well stocked bookshelves, plants in the window, and all the appearance of comfort. I learned from Mr. Read that the house was built in the time of Henry VIII., apparently at a season when window taxes were high. Fiskes had lived on the spot since the time of Richard II., and how much earlier I do not know. They came to America in such numbers that the name became nearly extinct in Suffolk. The last Fiske of Stadhaugh died about 1675. The estate then passed into the hands of John Smith, Esq., who died in 1715, leaving the Manor House and farm of about three hundred acres to the Parish of Laxfield with a provision that the income should be devoted to preparing poor boys for the University at Cambridge. The place was leased by the parish to a family named Read on a ninety-nine year lease, and at the expiration of that period, the lease was renewed for another century.

My entertainer belonged to the sixth generation of Reads who had lived in that house. He was a fine, tall, stately man, quick in mind and well informed, very like the best type of New England deacon. He seemed interested in seeing a descendant of the ancient Fiskes, and said that it was not often that he had such visitors.

We called upon the vicar, Rev. William Mothersole, who said that we would find on the floor of the parish church the names of some Fiske ancestors buried beneath. The little parish church was built about the time of King Alfred, 1,000 years ago. The floor was covered with strips of a kind of hemp carpet, and on raising them, there was a good deal of dust to be cleared away, and as my time was limited, I gave up the search for Fiske graves. I, however, saw that of "John Smith, Armiger."

The vicar's son, a bright boy of twelve, who was much interested in the proceedings, took me to the village green where the one martyr of Laxfield was burned in the evil days of Mary Tudor. This victim was the Rev. John Noyes, and Fox, in his "Book of Martyrs," tells how his brother-in-law, Nicholas Fiske, of Dennington, visited him the evening before his execution.

I believe there is nothing more of interest to be said about my visit. The country at Laxfield and all about it has that finished, pastoral beauty so characteristic of the English landscape.

ANCESTRAL AND HISTORICAL.

(By Rev. Albert A. Fiske.)

The Fiskes in America are descended from an ancient family of that name, which for centuries and until a recent period, had its seat and manorial lands in Laxfield, in the county of Suffolk, England. As early as 1422, one Symond Fiske resided there as Lord of the Manor of Stadhaugh, and entitled by grant to coat armour. Several of his descendants appear to have justly gained repute for piety and education, both among churchmen and non-conformists, and numbers of them during the protracted struggle of the Reformation, and especially in the days of Queen Mary, endured severe persecutions on account of their staunch adherence to Evangelical principles.

Robert Fiske, of Laxfield, son of Simon, and fourth in descent from Symond Fiske, of the same, married Sibyl Gold, and had sons, William, Jeffrey, Thomas and Eliezer. These parents were the progenitors of all the Fiskes that settled in New England, so far as known, before 1640. In considering their posterity here, we must trace them as descended from two distinct groups, coming over about the same time (1637), one group settling in Wenham, and the other in Watertown, Mass. William Fiske, eldest son of Robert, married Ann Anstye, and had children, John, Nathaniel (who died young), Eunice and Hannah, the last of whom married William Candler, and was the mother of Rev. Matthias Candler, whose manuscripts, now on file in the British Museum, furnish the records from which the early history of the Fiskes in England have been compiled. John Fiske, the eldest son of William, above, and grandson of Robert and Sibil Fiske, married Ann, a daughter of Robert Lantersee, and had children, John, William, Anne and Martha, all of whom, with their mother, embarked for America in 1637. Their father had died previously (in 1633), and during the passage the mother died also. The two brothers, having married in England, settled with their families in Wenham, then a village of Salem, Mass., about 1640. John, who had been already ordained in the English Church, became a noted and influential minister in the colony, and was settled as the first minister of the church in Wenham. Cotton Mather, in that quaint volume entitled "Magnalia," makes honorable allusion to him, both as scholar and preacher, and said that "like the beloved Luke, his praise was in all the churches." His brother, William, became also a man of mark, filled various public offices, was representative to the general court of Massachusetts, but died in the prime of his powers and usefulness, under 40 years of age. Both were able and useful men, were zealous Puritans in religion, and left descendants who perpetuated their good name for several generations.

About the same time that Rev. John and his brother established themselves in Wenham, several of their relations became also emigrants to the colony. David Fiske, of Watertown, who settled there with his son, David, and nephews, John and Nathan; and Phinehas Fiske, of Wenham, who brought with him sons, James (afterwards of Haverhill), John and Thomas—these two separate groups of families were respectively descended from Jeffrey Fiske and Thomas Fiske, the third sons of Robert and Sibil, previously mentioned; their cousins, Rev. John and William, being descended, as we have already shown, from William Fiske, the first son of the same. From these brothers and cousins, eight in all, who were thus early colonized in the commonwealth, have sprung a numerous, widely scattered, and very respectable posterity. Over one hundred and sixty of their number, bearing the family name, are on the roll of college graduates, while very many of them have variously attained distinction as divines, authors, scholars, and public men, two having been prominent candidates for the Presidency of the United States. There is not a university or collegiate institution in this land, which has not had at some period a Fiske filling a prominent chair on its board of faculty, while four of them have been elected to the presidency of such corporations. And as to ministers and deacons of churches, their number is almost beyond enumeration.

We will now consider more particularly the Wenham group of Fiskes. Rev. John Fiske and family arrived in Cambridge, Mass., in 1637. There he engaged for awhile in teaching school, and afterwards in Salem, where he conducted the first grammar school with remarkable success, his pupils being able, it is said, to compose readily in Latin, verse or prose. In 1643 he removed to Wenham (adjoining Salem), gathered a church, and became its first pastor, in 1644, and continued such for more than twelve years. In 1655 he removed to the pastorate of the church in Chelmsford, in which he continued till 1677, when he died at the age of 76, leaving a family. Rev. John Fiske was twice married. His first wife, after living with him about thirty-seven years, died in 1771. Such was her remarkable knowledge of Scripture that she was called her husband's concordance. She was the mother of his children.

Moses, only son of Rev. John Fiske that arrived to maturity, graduated at Harvard College in 1662—the first of the Fiske alumni in this country; was licensed to preach in 1671, and ordained and settled over the church in Braintree (now Quincy), Mass., the following year. He was a preacher of considerable power and animation. Several of his sermons were published, and may be found in the archives of the Massachusetts Historical Society. Rev. Moses Fiske was twice married. His first wife was Sarah, a daughter of William Symmes, of Charleston, whom he married in 1671. Of his fourteen children those that lived were named as follows: Mary, Sarah, Ann, Elizabeth, Moses, John, William, Samuel. Mrs. Sarah, wife of Rev. Moses Fiske, died in 1692. In 1700, Jan. 7, he married Mrs. Quincey, a daughter of the distinguished Rev. Thomas Shepard. By her he had, Shepard Fiske, born April 19, 1703; Margaret Fiske, born Dec. 15, 1705. Shepard Fiske, youngest son of Rev. Moses Fiske, graduated at Harvard College in 1721, and died a physician at Bridgewater, Mass., in 1779. Mr. Fiske's daughters, except the last, all married clergymen. Two of his sons also, John and William, were clergymen. But the subsequent history of their brothers, Moses and William, is not definitely known.

John Fiske, second son of Rev. Moses Fiske, of Braintree (Quincy), graduated at Harvard College in 1702, preached awhile in Braintree Church, and was ordained pastor of a church in Killingly, Conn., October 19, 1715; his brother-in-law, Rev. Joseph Baxter, of Medfield, preaching the sermon. Here he remained until 1741, when disaffection arising in the church, he was dismissed and retired upon his large landed estate in Killingly, where he died in 1773, in the 89th year of his age. He is reported to have been a good scholar, an able preacher, and wise counselor. His wife was Abigail, a daughter of Rev. Nehemiah Hobart, of Newton, Mass. Of his five children only one was a son, and he died in infancy.

Samuel Fiske, youngest son of Rev. Moses Fiske, of Braintree, graduated at Harvard College in 1708—where his name appears on the roll without the vowel termination—and was ordained minister of the First Church, in Salem, Mass., in October, 1708. Says Bentley, in his memorial sermon: "Rev. Samuel Fiske was a man of eminent talents in the pulpit, of firm and persevering mind, and held in high esteem until disaffection sprang up in his church from the ill-defined discipline then existing in our churches. He was a preacher of real abilities, but his high notions of church authority were repugnant to many persons, and interfered with his usefulness. He was dismissed from the First Church, in 1735, and accepted the charge of a new society established by his friends. He preached the first centenary lecture of the First Church, August 6, 1729. The election sermon delivered by him before the Governor and Legislature, in 1731, may be reckoned as among the best. It was published and a copy is preserved among the state archives. He was dismissed from the Third Church in 1745, when he retired from the ministry. By wife, Anna Gerrish, he had five children, but only one of his sons reached maturity, John, born May 6, 1744. Rev. Samuel Fiske died in Salem, in 1770, at quite an advanced age.

John Fiske, only surviving son of Rev. Samuel Fiske, of Salem, engaged in commercial pursuits and acquired property. At the time of the Revolution he commanded the first vessel of war commissioned in the service. At the close of the war, he was commissioned a Colonel, then a Brigadier, and finally a Major General in the State Militia, which position he held until his death, in 1797. He was a man of princely hospitality, of enterprising spirit, and of benevolent impulses. He took great interest in the various religious and charitable movements of the day, and contributed freely to their support. He was thrice married, but left no male issue.

Peter Fiske, a grandson of Rev. Moses, of Quincy, married Sarah Perry, of Grafton, Mass., November 15, 1758. Four of their children were there born, Moses, Nathaniel, Peter, Sarah, John. Of these the eldest, Moses, graduated at Dartmouth College, in 1786; was licensed and preached awhile, but never ordained to the pastorate. He was a tutor in Dartmouth College from 1788 to 1795, when he removed to Helham, Tenn., and died there about 1842. He remained single until 50 years of age, and then reared a family of nine children. He ever manifested a strong disapprobation of negro slavery, although living in the midst of slavery all his days in the south. He was the author of several published works on slavery. John Fiske, brother of above, graduated at Dartmouth College, in 1791, studied theology with Rev. Dr. Lyman, of Hatfield, and was ordained to the ministry at Hadley, Mass., in May, 1794. Preaching for awhile as an evangelist, he accepted a call to the church in New Braintree, and was installed pastor, in August, 1796. In 1809 he enjoyed with his church a remarkable revival, which was repeated in 1818, 1819, 1826, 1831 and 1842. The fruits of these awakenings were numerous additions to the church. He preached his half century discourse October 26, 1846, which was published. He took a deep interest in the cause of education; was one of the efficient helpers in the building up of Amherst College, and received the degree of D. D. from that institution in 1844. He continued to preach with the assistance of a colleague, until October, 1854. In March following, he died in great peace, after a ministry of sixty-one years with the same people. He made a fine figure in the pulpit, being tall, dignified, of serene and intelligent countenance. He possessed a clear and well balanced mind, and a general completeness of character seldom found. His pulpit efforts were marked by eminent good sense and great appropriateness, especially in prayer. Several of his discourses were published. Mr. Fiske married, in 1796, Elizabeth Mellen, of Milford. They had children: John M., Mary W., William, Sarah, Abby and James. The youngest daughter married George Merriam, one of the publishers of Webster's Dictionary. William Fiske, son of Rev. Dr. John, was ordained to the ministry in 1865, and for years did good and efficient service among the Freedmen.

William Fiske, Esq., who emigrated to America in 1637, in company with his brother, Rev. John Fiske, was born in England, about 1614, and was there married to Bridget Musket, by whom he had several children. He was admitted Freeman (at Wenham), in 1643, and chosen town clerk of the same during the following year. He was elected Representative to the General Court of the Commonwealth in 1647, and continued in that office by annual election until 1652. He appears to have enjoyed to a large extent the confidence and respect of his townsmen, but was cut short in his career by death, in 1654, in the prime of his life, under 40 years of age; having during the eleven years of his residence in Wenham, repeatedly served in all the positions of trust within the gift of the people. He died intestate, and therefore most probably of some sudden and acute disease. Letters of administration were granted to his widow, in July, 1654, by which provision was made for the following children, therein named: William, Samuel, Joseph, Benjamin, and Martha. William, the eldest, was born 1642. Other children may have been born previously, but must have died young. The above named were evidently the only living heirs at the time of their father's decease. No records of births, marriages or deaths were kept on the town books of Wenham before 1686, when Capt. Thomas Fiske was instructed to commence their registration. Consequently the facts respecting the early generations are derivable only where private sources are wanting, from the public records of the land and probate offices. These records, for the entire counties of Essex and Middlesex, and covering a period of over two hundred years, in connection with various town records, have been carefully examined, and the results of the investigation, after much study, have been compiled in the following pages.

William Fiske, Jr., the eldest son of William Fiske, the emigrant, born in 1642, was married to Sarah Kilham, of Wenham, Jan. 15, 1662, and by her had several children, the record of whose names and births was found among the private papers of his grandson, William Fiske, Sr., of Amherst, N. H.

Mr. Fiske, by occupation a weaver, was admitted a Freeman in 1670; was chosen deacon of the Congregational Church, of which his uncle, Rev. John Fiske, was first pastor, in 1679. He also held various public offices, such as clerk, moderator of the town for many years. He also represented the town of Wenham for eleven different sessions in the General Court of Massachusetts. Indeed, he and others of the family, for fifty years consecutively, were the sole representatives of the town in that body, and until 1720. He inherited to a large extent his father's ability and worthy character, being deacon of Wenham Church for above forty years, and died at a good old age, in his 86th year. In his will, dated 1725, and proved 1728, all of his children are mentioned as legatees, except those who had died previously. But to his sixth son, Ebenezer, who was principal heir and legatee, and also his immediate successor in the deacon's office, was bequeathed "the original homestead," which property became by inheritance the residence also of his grandson, William Fiske, fourth son of Dea. Ebenezer, and remained in the family until March, 1773, when, upon the removal of said William Fiske to Amherst, N. H., it was sold to one Wm. Webber. Nothing now remains to mark the spot but a heap of stones, and the family name becoming extinct in Wenham, only the venerable slabs in the cemetery are left to bear witness to the fact that here was the ancestral seat of an ancient and honorable family, whose descendants, widely scattered but still maintaining the high character of their lineage, constitute today the main body of the Fiskes in America. To this source may be traced five distinct branches, which in this work are classified as the Amherst, Upton, Shelburne, Rhode Island and Connecticut lines.

William Fiske, fourth son of Dea. Ebenezer, of Wenham, principal heir of his estate and sole executor of his will, resided at the ancient homestead in Wenham, where probably his father, himself and his own children were all born, until the decease or removal of his own immediate relatives. Of himself personally little is known, except that in his character and principles he was a staunch Puritan. And considering that the characteristics of race and parentage stamp the individual, it would be strange were the case otherwise. His ancestors from a remote period were Puritans or Reformers, a lineage illustrious for their piety and inflexible virtues. His father and grandfather were successively deacons in the original Wenham church, for upwards of seventy years; the same ancient church of which the Rev. John Fiske himself, was the original pastor. More remotely still the family had been identified with that great reformatory struggle in England, from which were gathered the rich fruits of a purer faith and constitutional liberty. Such were the forefathers of William Fiske, and such the ancestral virtues, a goodly measure of which he inherited with his patrimony. That he was a man of strong religious convictions and most exemplary life is manifest from the admirable parental discipline by which his children were trained to become excellent citizens, godly men and women, and enabled to exert a wide and beneficent influence in their day and generation. And in this respect they but bear emphatic testimony, alike with other collateral branches, to the strength of that moral principle which, taking root with the parental stock in Wenham, over two centuries ago, has marvelously spread and diffused itself, like a spiritual leaven, through the various descendant and divergent lines, to this day. Mr. Fiske—to resume the thread of family history—having been appointed sole executor of Dea. Ebenezer's will, remained in Wenham long enough to settle the estate and dispose of the homestead, and various tracts of land, when (in 1773) he removed to Amherst, N. H., with his wife Susanna, and nine children, and two daughters-in-law, Mary Bragg, the wife of their son, Jonathan, and Eunice Nourse, wife of their son, William. The father, William, Sr., purchased a tract of land on the south side of Walnut Hill, and there the original homestead of the Amherst Fiskes was established. Having lived to see his country proclaimed free and independent, and his family settled in comparative comfort, he died in 1777, in the 52d year of his age.

Of their sons and daughters, all, except Anna, married, and she and two others excepted, William and David, remained in Amherst; all eventually removed and settled elsewhere. Some of them raised large families, and all more or less prospered in circumstances, and the good esteem of their fellow citizens. Of them all, it is believed, it may be truly said that their lives were blameless before God, and their end calm and full of peace. Among the descendants of William Fiske, Sr., of Amherst, may be mentioned Judge Jonathan Fiske, his son, Hon. Jonathan Fiske, Hon. William Fiske, Hon. Francis N. Fiske, Rev. Dr. Franklin W. Fiske, Rev. Dr. L. R. Fiske, Rev. Dr. William Allen Fiske, Rev. A. A. Fiske, and a long roll of deacons and other church officers.

FISKES AND FISKS IN THE REVOLUTIONARY WAR.

During the past few years it has been quite the fad to look up one's Revolutionary ancestors and at once make application for membership in one of patriotic hereditary societies. Following I give a list of all persons by this name who actively participated in the struggle for American independence. Three of this name were killed at the battle of Bunker Hill; another was the Surgeon who attended the wounded at Lexington.

SOMETHING OF THE ENGLISH AND AMERICAN FISKES.

(By Rev. Thaddeus Fiske, of North Cambridge, Mass.)

The most remote ancestors of the Fiske family that have come to our knowledge lived in a village or parish of St. James, in the County of Suffolk, England, in the reign of Queen Mary, in the sixteenth century.

There were six brothers, three were Papists and three were Protestants. Their ancestors, parents, grandparents, and great-grandparents, as far as history gives an account, are said to have been eminently pious and religious people. Those of Protestant religion were grievously persecuted. One of them, to avoid being burned at the stake, was hid many months in a wood-pile, and afterward half a year in a cellar where he worked by candle light at manufactures and remained undiscovered. But his many hardships shortened his life. In 1637 four of his children, two sons and two daughters, in consequence of the persecuting spirit of that day, left their home and came over to New England and took up their abode in Salem. John was the eldest of the four, and his father at his death committed to him the charge of his mother, two sisters and youngest brother. John had been educated at Immanuel College, England, and became a preacher of the Gospel, but on account of his non-conformity, being advised by his friends, he relinquished the ministry and turned his attention to the study of medicine, and obtained license for public practice as a physician. On arriving at Salem, however, he recommenced the work of the ministry, his favorite pursuit. He was both a preacher of the Gospel and tutor and instructor to divers young men in Salem, and was also employed as a physician whenever he would consent. Their mother died before they arrived in New England. They came well provided with servants and all sorts of tools for husbandry and carpentry, and with provisions for their support for three years, out of which they helped others, whom they found in want and distress. They remained together at Salem about three years. John then went to a new village in Salem, called Wenham, where he gathered a church and congregation, and continued their pastor about fourteen years. About the end of the year 1655 he removed to a town called Chelmsford, where he lived the greater part of his days. He died Jan. 14, 1676, aged seventy-five. He left four children, two sons and two daughters. John lived with his father in Chelmsford and was a very useful and respected citizen. Moses was brought up at school, graduated at Harvard University in 1662; was settled in the ministry at Braintree. On the 14th of February, 1671, the wife of Rev. John Fiske died, which was the greatest of all his trials and afflictions. She was endeared to him by forty-three years of mutual care and toil, affection and piety. By her incomparable knowledge of the Scriptures she became his concordance of the Bible and he needed no other. She could refer him to any passage of the Scripture that he wished to find. The youngest brother of John Fiske who came over with him settled in Watertown and was mechanic or farmer. His name probably was Nathan, for mention is made in Watertown records of Nathan Fiske there in 1664 and of Nathan Fiske, Jr., in 1728, who was representative of the town. Nathan, the son of the above named Nathan Fiske, went from Watertown and settled at Weston. He was the grandfather of Rev. Thaddeus Fiske, of West Cambridge. On Oct. 9 he married Anna Warren, by whom he had three children: Anna, Nathan and Sarah. Having lost his wife he married, Feb. 21, 1738, for his second wife widow Mary Fiske, of Sudbury, by whom he had seven children, namely: Jonathan, Ezra, Samuel, Thaddeus, Mary, Hepzibeth and Nathan, the eldest, who graduated at Harvard in 1754 and was settled in the ministry in Brookfield. It appears that the name of Nathan was uniformly given to the firstborn son, a practice transmitted from generation to generation. Jonathan married Abigail Fiske, of Waltham, Mar. 10, 1760, by whom he had nine children: Nathan, Thaddeus, Micah, Ebenezer, Abigail, Jonathan (who died in infancy), Jonathan, Abigail and Isaac. Among the descendants of Nathan there are eight who have received collegiate educations, seven Hummises of Harvard University, one of Dartmouth

FISKE MANOR HOUSE, STADHAUGH, ENGLAND.

College, namely, 1st, Nathan Fiske, D. D., his eldest son, minister of Brookfield, graduated 1754; 2d, Thaddeus Fiske, his grandson, son of Jonathan Fiske, minister of West Cambridge, graduated 1785; 3d, Oliver, M. D., his grandson, son of Nathan Fiske, D. D., physician of Worcester, graduated 1787; 4th, Samuel, A. M., his grandson, son of Nathan Fiske, D. D., trader in Claremont, N. H., and alternately senator and representative to the general court, graduated 1793; Isaac, A. M., his grandson, son of Jonathan, register of probate court in the county of Middlesex, graduated 1798; 6th, Nathan W. Fiske, A. M., his grandson, son of Nathan, son of Jonathan, professor of intellectual and moral philosophy in Amherst College, graduated at Dartmouth College 1817; 7th, Robert Treat Paine Fiske, M. D., son of Oliver Fiske, M. D., son of Nathan Fiske, D. D., physician in Hingham, graduated 1818; 8th, Augustus Henry Fiske, son of Isaac Fiske, son of Jonathan, attorney-at-law in Boston, graduated 1825. Such are the ancestors and some of the descendants of the Fiske family to which I, Rev. Thaddeus Fiske, of Cambridge, am more immediately related. There are other branches from the same stock, which are spread out in various directions over the United States.

NAMED FOR FISKES.

There are a number of places in the United States named Fisk and quite a number of postoffices of this name. In all cases the names were given in honor of a person by this name. Below will be found a few illustrations:

FISK, VT.—In the years 1765 and 1766 a French general from Canada named Lamathe built a large fort and had it garrisoned with soldiers and implements of war in what is now called the town of Isle La Mott, which is an island surrounded by the waters of Lake Champlain, containing 4,883½ acres by the original survey, and was named in part after the said French general Lamathe, they changed Lamathe to La Mott for some reason not now known. The town being an island, hence it was called Isle La Mott. There were enlightened, educated French officers occupying said fort from 1766 to some time unknown at this time, when it was evacuated for at least fifty-seven years before a blow had been struck elsewhere within the present domain of the state of Vermont by civilized man. I do not know as you care to have an account of the war for which this fort was built and I have not time to give it. In 1802 Samuel Fisk, Esq., representing said Isle La Mott in the legislature of Vermont, had the name changed from Isle La Mott to Vineyard. In 1830 it was changed back to Isle La Mott. The present postoffice is Fisk, named in honor of Hon. Nelson W. Fisk, lieutenant-governor of Vermont.

FISKDALE, MASS.—Chase's History gives the following account of Fiskdale, which is a village in the town of Sturbridge: "Two brothers, Henry and Josiah J. Fiske, sons of David, of Fiske hill, and grandsons of Henry, bought Moses Allers' farm, erected the first factory and laid the foundation of the village that bears their name. Moses Allen's farm was deeded to them in 1826." Frederick D. Fiske, office 87 Milk Street, Boston, is at present at the head of the business.

FISK, MO.—Fisk, Mo., Sept. 4, 1895. Dear Sir: Your letter of 28th addressed to town clerk is handed me for a reply. The postoffice here was given the name of "Fisk" for the reason it was a short name, and as a compliment to me, having done quite a mill business here for several years, and am now the postmaster here. I came to this place twelve years ago from Kalamazoo, Mich., or near there, in Van Buren County. My parents originally came from Rhode Island. I was born in Vermont in 1831. My father's name was Samuel B. Fisk. Am cousin to James Fisk, Jr., who was shot by Stokes some years ago. I suppose I have a cousin living in Chicago by name of C. W. Fisk. If I can be of any help to you in compiling your work shall be glad to do what I can.

Very truly,

S. W. FISK.

The Fiske Family.—In editing the transcript of the Parish papers of Cratfield, Suffolk, England, made by the late Rev. W. Holland, M. A., Rector of Huntingfield, it became necessary to examine the original documents. Among them I found an indenture of the register for the year 1565 containing among entries of the Plimpton, Mills, Baker, Grimsby-Newson, Gilberde, Brokbanke, Saunders, Button, Curdie and Long families, "William Fyske, sonne of Jeffrey Fyske and of Christian his wyfe, was bap. the last daye of Sept. 58. ROBERT FISKE (Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Stadhaugh, Eng., about 1525; m. Mrs. Sybil (Gould) Barber. For some time he was of the Parish of St. James, South Elmham, Eng. Sybil, the wife of Robert, was in great danger in the time of the religious persecution, 1553-58, as was her sister Isabella, originally Gould, who was confined in the castle of Norwich, and escaped death only by the power of her brothers, who were men of great influence in the county. Robert fled for religion's sake in the days of Queen Mary to Geneva, but returned later, and died at St. James. His will is dated Apr. 10, 1590, and proved July 28, 1600. Robert Fiske had by Sybil Gould, his wife, four sons and one daughter. The sons were William, Jeffrey, Thomas and Eleazer. Eleazer had no issue, but the progeny of William, Jeffrey and Thomas in whole or in part settled in New England. About this time was a season of great religious persecution. From the "Magna Britannica" we learn that Waybred is a town in Suffolk County, England.

John Noyes, of Laxfield, Suffolk County, shoemaker, was burned at Laxfield Sept. 21, 1557. Vol. V., p. 303.

To his wife Elizabeth he gave lands, etc., in the parish of St. James, South Elmham, during her life. Gave property to nephews Nathaniel and David, sons of brothers William and Jeffrey, and legacies to the other children of said brothers, and to the children of his brother Thomas. The widow d. in 1629. Her will is dated Jan. 9, 1629. Made bequest to Elizabeth, dau. of Samuel Fiske, ten shillings. Her will was witnessed by Nicholas Bancroft and others.

86. v. ELIZABETH, b. in England; m. Robert Bernard. It will be remembered that Robert and Sybil Fiske, of whom their descendants were accustomed to speak with respect as Protestant confessors in the reign of Queen Mary, had beside the four sons a daughter Elizabeth, who married Robert Bernard, who was a farmer of the estate of Custrick Hall, in Wecky, County Essex, which he held of Sir Edward Coke, the lord chief justice. And, having mentioned this marriage, Candler brings before us a genealogical fact of great curiosity and importance. It is that a daughter of this Bernard married a Locke, and was the mother of John Locke, who writing about 1660, he describes simply as "John Locke, M. A." Very little is known of Locke's father, but, any one who has written on his life has not had the slightest knowledge of the mother to whom we owe this eminent man. The mother of Locke was brought up among the more zealous Puritans of the Counties of Essex and Suffolk, and heard from her infancy stories of religious persecutions. She must have seen near connections of her family leaving their native homes to find, as they supposed, security and peace in a distant land, and the feeling thus engendered in her mind we may easily believe to have been communicated to her son, who in due time became the great defender of the principles of the utmost tolerance in dealing with men in force of conscience and religious opinion. This is a digression, but perhaps it will not be unacceptable to see the name of so illustrious a person now for the first time placed in public in family connection with so many of the Puritan settlers in New England. Bernard stood in the relation of great-uncle to Candler, who records the facts which I have now brought from their hiding place, and to all the Fiskes who laid the foundation of the families of that name in the New England states. John Locke (grandson of Robert Fiske), English philosopher, was born at Wrington, Somersetshire, Aug. 29, 1632, died at Oates, a country seat in Essex, Oct 28, 1704. The moderate inheritance of his family was considerably reduced during the civil wars, in which his father was a parliamentary captain. Under the brief political ascendancy of the Puritans he imbibed the religious principle and spirit of liberty which actuated that body of men. His education began at Westminster school, from which he was elected in 1651 to Christ Church College, Oxford, where he graduated bachelor of arts in 1655 and master in 1658, continuing to reside in that city till 1664. In after life he regretted that he had spent so much of his time in the university, chiefly from his contempt of the scholastic philosophy and methods which were there upheld; yet he applied himself diligently to the classics, read in private the works of Bacon and Descartes, and enjoyed the friendship of persons whose society and conversation first suggested the idea of his greatest work. His companions were chosen rather from among the lively and agreeable than the studious and learned, and his early correspondence often displays wit and irony. The precise and scientific method of Descartes seems to have given the first impulse to his speculations, but Bacon exerted a more permanent and congenial influence, and he may be called the metaphysician of the Baconian philosophy. After receiving his degrees he devoted himself principally to medicine, which occupied much of his attention through life, and his eminent proficiency in which is attested by Dr. Sudenham, the greatest authority of his time. In 1664 he accepted the post of secretary in a diplomatic mission to the court of Brandenburg, and, returning to Oxford within a year, was in doubt whether to begin the practice of medicine as a profession, to continue in diplomatic employment, offers of which both in Spain and Germany were made to him, or to enter the church, a considerable preferment in which was promised through the duke of Orleans, lord lieutenant of Ireland. He was engaged in studies of experimental philosophy, when in 1666 he became acquainted with Lord Ashley, afterward earl of Shaftesbury, who was then suffering from an abscess in the chest. Locke divined the nature of the disorder, which no one else had been able to discover; the life of the nobleman was believed to have been saved by a surgical operation which the philosopher advised; and the result was a close and permanent friendship between them. Locke accompanied him to London, and in his house enjoyed the society of the duke of Buckingham, the earl of Northumberland, Lord Halifax, and others of the most distinguished characters of the time. Ashley united engaging manners with distinguished ability, and was an admirable talker; and Locke, whose esteem for conversational capacity led him to assign it a first place in the formation of a man's mind, was probably attached in this instance very much by his quality. While residing with him, he superintended the education of his son, and subsequently of his grandson, the third earl of Shaftesbury, the elegant philosophical writer of Queen Anne's reign. In 1668 he accompanied the earl and countess of Northumberland on a tour in France, and after his return was employed by Ashley to draw up the fundamental laws of Carolina, which province had been granted to him and seven others. The scheme of government which was prepared, aristocratic and conformed to monarchy, yet tolerant of all religions, indicates the cautious and practical tendencies of his mind, since, though a lover of freedom, he proposed to establish it in a new country only in so far as it had been realized in England. In 1670 he made the first sketch of his "Essay concerning Human Understanding," which was finished in 1687 and published in 1690. In a discussion with five or six friends at his chambers in Oxford, he suggested that the dispute and perplexity could only be solved by a preliminary examination of our own abilities, and of what subjects our understandings are or are not fitted to deal with. He set down several thoughts on the subject previous to their next meeting, and the work thus begun was often resumed and often neglected during his various avocations, and was ultimately completed in retirement and leisure. While Shaftesbury was lord chancellor, Locke held the appointment of secretary for the presentation of benefices, and afterward of secretary to the board of trade. In 1675 he went to France for the benefit of his health, residing at Montpellier, where he became acquainted with Mr. Herbert, afterward earl of Pembroke, to whom his "Essay" is dedicated, and in Paris, where his conversation was welcomed by the most eminent literary and scientific men. He was recalled to England when Shaftesbury regained power for a brief season in 1679; and when that nobleman charged with high treason had taken refuge in Holland, he followed him thither in 1683. He continued to reside there after the death of Shaftesbury, having incurred the hostility of the court by his connection with him. At Amsterdam he kept aloof from the British exiles who were plotting the rebellion of Monmouth, auguring their ill success, and joined with Limborch, Le Clerc, and others, in the formation of a philosophical society for the weekly discussion of important business. Spies were set about him to suggest irritating topics, and to report his words to his ruin, but they were foiled by his steady silence concerning the politics of the day. The court therefore resolved to punish him in the only point where he was vulnerable, and ejected him from his studentship in Christchurch College. Still he refused to take part in the schemes of invasion, and concealed himself at Utrecht, where he was employed in writing his letter "On Toleration." In the Bibliothèque universelle et historique of Le Clerc he published in French in 1686 a "New Method of a Common-place Book," in 1687 an abridgement of his "Essay on the Human Understanding," which was published in England in the same year, and in Latin at Gouda in 1689. Its liberal views were attacked by an Oxford theologian, and were defended by Locke in two additional letters. Adopting the theory of a compact, he maintained that the state relates only to civil interests, has nothing to do with matters in the world to come, and should therefore tolerate all modes of worship not immoral in their nature or involving doctrines inimical to good government. Conscious of no crime, he refused to accept a pardon which William Penn promised to obtain for him from James II., but returned to England after the revolution of 1688 in the same fleet which brought the Princess of Orange, and obtained through Lord Mordaunt the office of commissioner of appeals. In 1690 appeared his "Essay concerning Human Understanding," the first work which attracted attention in England to metaphysical speculations, except on the part of merely studious men, and one of the greatest contributions in modern times to the philosophy of the human mind. The celebrity of the author as a friend of religious liberty, the attacks upon it, and the attempts made at Oxford to prevent the students from reading it, were among the secondary causes of its success. Six editions appeared within fourteen years, and through translations into Latin and French the fame of the author was made European. He published in 1690 two "Treatises on Civil Government," written to support the principles of the revolution by establishing the title of King William upon the consent of the people as the only title of lawful government. In 1693 his "Thoughts Concerning Education," in which his object is to fashion a gentleman rather than a scholar, and therefore he lays less stress on learning than on virtue, breeding and practical wisdom; and in 1695 "The Reasonableness of Christianity," the object of which was to determine what points of belief were common to all the Christian sects, in order to facilitate a plan of the king for the reconciliation and union of them all. He published a vindication of this work against the charge of Socinianism, and conducted a controversy with Stillingfleet, who in his work on the Trinity denounced some of the principles of the "Essay" as opposed to fundamental Christian doctrines. In 1700 he resigned his commissionership in consequence of his failing health, and, declining a pension offered him by the king in a personal interview, returned to the mansion of his friend Sir Francis Masham at Oates, in Essex, where he devoted the remainder of his life to the study of the Scriptures. Among the fruits of his later labors were a "Discourse on the Miracles," "Paraphrases, with Notes, of the Epistles of St. Paul," and an "Examination of Father Malebranche's Opinion of Seeing all Things in God," which were published posthumously. His excellent treatise on the "Conduct of the Understanding," which may be regarded as the ethical application of his "Essay," being a scheme of the education which an adult person should give himself, also appeared after his death. He received during his last years, while suffering under an incurable asthma, the affectionate attentions of Lady Masham, a daughter of Ralph Cudworth, and died ultimately in his chair, from the natural decay of a constitution originally weak, while she was reading the Psalms to him. The course and circumstances of Locke's life were in every respect favorable to the production of such work as the "Essay Concerning Human Understanding." Early imbued with a zeal for liberty and with the principles of a severe morality, his whole life was a warfare against the enemies of freedom in speculation, freedom in worship, and freedom from every unnecessary political restraint. Acquainted by his studies both with scholastic subtleties and the physical sciences, he was in mature age admitted to the society of wits and politicians, and became a man of business and of the world. The "Essay" was the product of meditation continued through many years, was composed at intervals, and is in a studied colloquial and rather racy style, which, however attractive to the reader, is too figurative, ambiguous, various, and even contradictory, for the purposes of philosophy. The essential character and tendency of his system has therefore always been a matter of dispute between metaphysicians of different schools, and different passages suggest very opposite conclusions. His object was to inquire into the origin, certainty, and extent of human knowledge, and his method was purely psychological, by the patient and tentative observation of the phenomena of consciousness. In the first book he confutes the Cartesian doctrine of innate principles or axioms, which would conflict with his whole theory of the empirical origin of our ideas. This theory is fully developed in the second book, in which he shows that our natural faculties are capable of forming every notion that we possess, that the action of these faculties takes its rise from experience, and that the mind may therefore be compared to a sheet of white paper void of all characters till the events of time inscribe them. Having thus stated the principle that all the materials of our knowledge come from experience, he explains it more particularly by making a distinction between sensation and reflection as sources of ideas. The former is observation of the external world, the latter of our own mental operations. Though he uses the term reflection in a wavering and indefinite sense, it does not plainly appear that he ascribed to it any other power than that of a mere formal and logical mechanism, to act upon, to combine and compare, and to extensively modify the materials primarily afforded by the senses. In long and acute processes of reasoning he aims to bring the ideas of space, time, infinity, causality, personal identity, substance, and good and evil within the limits of experience. The third book is a treatise on the nature, use and abuse of language. In the fourth book he passes from ideas to knowledge, from psychology to ontology, treating the question as to the adequacy of our ideas and the reality of our knowledge. He held a representative theory of perception, maintaining that the mind does not know things immediately, but by the intervention of ideas; that knowledge is real only in so far as there is conformity between our ideas and the reality of things; and that ideas may be entirely inadequate, however distinct they are, thus rejecting the criterion of Descartes. This theory contains the germ of utter skepticism, and was the ground on which Berkeley denied the existence of the material world, and Hume involved all human knowledge in doubt. The distinction established by Kant between the cause and the occasion of our conceptions, making the former to exist in the original constitution of the mind, and the latter in the circumstances of experience, would have removed the fundamental error involved, perhaps without design, in the system of Locke. There are indications in many passages of his work that he was not satisfied with that tendency to sensationalism, which when rigidly developed bore fruits of utilitarianism in morals, materialism in metaphysics, and skepticism in religion. A biography of Locke was published in 1829 by Lord King, a lineal descendant of his sister, and added to Bohn's "Standard Library" in 1858. The best complete edition of his works is in 10 vols. (London, 1823). His philosophical works have been published by J. A. St. John (2d ed., 2 vols., London, 1854). A new biography by H. R. Fox Bourne was announced in 1874. 65. RICHARD FISKE (Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Stadhaugh, Suffolk County, Eng., about 1510; m. Agnes Crispe, dau. of Edmund. According to Cotton Mather he lived in the reign of Queen Mary and endured grievous persecution. There were several branches of Fiskes in the southern parts of the County of Suffolk, England, all springing from a Richard Fiske, who lived at Broad Gates, in Laxfield, a rural village north of Framlingham, where the inhabitants were so zealous for the reformation that one of them, John Noyes, was most barbarously put to death in the reign of Queen Mary. Fox, in his account of the burning of Noyes, speaks of Nicholas Fiske, who was one of the sons of Richard. Two other of his sons, Robert and William, fled in the time of that terrible persecution. It does not appear that Nicholas had any issue. William who had fled was the subject of a parricide, for which his son, Joseph Fiske, suffered the penalty of death at Bury St. Edmunds. Of this branch of the family nothing more need be said, or of the descendants of other sons of Richard, than Robert, from whom sprang all of the name who were in the early emigration. He resided in Laxfield and made his will Sept. 7, 1572, which was proved Nov. 5, 1572. His wife was Agnes, son Elias, daus. Mary, Margaret, Anne, Elizabeth and father-in-law Edmund Crispe. William is described as of St. James in South Elmham, and it is said of him that he fled with his father for religion's sake. His wife was Anne, dau. of Walter Anstye, of Tibbenham, Long Row in Norfolk. They had John, Nathaniel and Eleazer. Eunice, Hannah and Esther. Eunice died unmarried. Esther married John Challie, or Chalke, of Road Hall, and Hannah, William Candler, and was the mother of the genealogist, the compiler of the Candler manuscript in the British Museum. Of the sons, Eleazer settled at Norwich and had female issue only. Nathaniel was of Waybred, and had children who appear to have remained in England; but of the children of John all that lived to grow up, four in number, transferred those to the new country. An old record says: "William fyske has livery of the manor and advowson of Hekingham, in County Norfolk, lately belonging to Robert Fyske, his father." His will is dated Nov. 25, 1616, and was proved May 17, 1623. He was of Ditchingham, County Norfolk. The instrument mentions now wife Alice, To the poor of Ditchingham and Bungay. Two others of the early settlers from Suffolk County, England, were related to the Fiskes. These were Joshua and Anthony Fisher, who took their freedom, Joshua in 1640 and Anthony, Jr., in 1646. They were brothers, sons of Anthony Fisher, of Syleham, by his wife Mary, who was another dau. of William and Anne Fiske, of South Elmham; but this is another instance in which we have to regret that Candler in his manuscript did not draw his pedigrees with more precision. Candler does not give us any further information respecting them, but we may form some idea of the class of society from which they sprang from the notice which he takes of two of their brothers who appear to have remained in England: Cornelius, who was M. A. and taught the school at East Bergholt, and Amos who farmed an estate called Custridge Hall in the Parish of Wesley, which is in the hundred of Tendring between Colchester and the sea. Cornelius left no issue, and his widow remained with George Smith who was one of the ministers at Dedham, a famous city of Puritan piety. Amos married Anne Morice, the relict of Daniel Locke, and had several children, settled in those parts of Essex, of whom it is not known that any of them followed in the steps of their two uncles.

83. JEFFREY FISKE (Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. at Laxfield, Eng., ———; m. Sarah Cooke. Jeffrey was another son of Robert Fiske and Sibil his wife. The account of his family is not so clearly given in the Candler manuscript in the British museum as to remove all doubt respecting the true descent as Mr. Candler understood it; but it appears that Jeffrey had a son David Fiske (see will of his uncle Eleazer) of this branch of the family, who emigrated, whose wife was Sarah Smith, a dau. of Edmund Smith, of Mentham. He took his freedom in 1638, and possibly again in 1647. ("David, 1647, was no doubt son of the freemen of 1638-39.") He d. 1628. His will is dated Oct., 1628; proved Nov. 25, 1628; res. Metfield, Eng.

This engraving represents the estate as it was when occupied by Henry and Martha (Fiske) Bright. In Thurston church there are monumental slabs with arms and inscriptions beautifully sculptured to the memory of the Brights.

These are the four persons of one family, two brothers and two sisters, all married, and who Mather speaks of in the Magnalia, part 3, page 141, and what had not been related, corresponds with what he says of this family being descended of prosecuted ancestors. 165. iii. ANNE, b. in England; m. Francis Chickering. The same, who came to America in 1637 and who was made freeman May 13, 1640. Who this Francis Chickering was I know not, further than is to be found in the Candler manuscript in the British Museum, which gives no description of him; but in Savage's Winthrop, note to Vol. 1, page 84, the Rev. Mr. Chickering, minister of Woburn, is mentioned, who might be supposed to be a relative. Candler, in his manuscript, speaks of another Chickering, whose Christian name was unknown, to whom he married the widow of a first cousin of Candler's father, Benjamin Smith, farmer of Northall, in Wrentham. (Our Henry Chickering, of Dedham, was probably a brother of Francis.) This Mr. Chickering, he further says, went to New England after the death of his wife. Benjamin Smith was brother to Sarah, wife of David Fiske, emigrant. They res. in Dedham. He belonged to an artillery company in 1643 and later was Ensign. He was representative in 1644 and 1653. Anne, the wife, died before 1650, for he then married, June 16, 1650, Mrs. Sarah Libby.

166. iv. MARTHA, b. in England; m. in England Capt. Edmund Thompson, a son of John Thompson, of Holkham, in Norfolk, by Anne, his wife, dau. of John Hastings of that place. They had four ch. born in New England: Martha, Edmund, Thomas, bap. Feb. 12, 1643; and Hannah, bap. July 4, 1647. They returned to England and resided at Yarmouth, where they had three ch. born to them: John, Esther and John, who all d. in infancy. Candler informs us that Captain Thompson, who was a sea captain, served the States of Holland after the death of King Charles the First. He first resided in Salem, Mass., in 1637. Dec. 29, 1639, he was admitted to the church.

134. DAVID FISKE (Jeffrey, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond). He was of Watertown, was admitted a freeman of the colony in Mar., 1637-8. He had come to America, probably the preceding year, as he was not a proprietor until Feb., 1637. Before 1644 he was a grantee of one lot and a purchaser of six other lots. His homestead of twenty-two acres was granted to John Kingsbury, of whom he had purchased it just prior to his removal to Dedham. This latter property was bounded on the north by the Cambridge line and the property of J. Coolidge; south by the highway (Pond Road); west by land of J. Coolidge, and east by that of B. Bullard. The total amount of his real estate was 227 acres. He was a man of standing in the community and early held office. In 1639 he was elected a member of the Board of Selectmen, and again in 1642. Was a juror in 1652-4-5-7. His will is dated Sept. 10, 1660, and was proved in January following. The instrument does not mention the name of his wife, but one daughter, Fitch, and one son, David, who was sole executor and residuary legatee, giving him his "houses, lands, cattle and chattels." Signed the mark of David Fiske and seal. (So signed probably on account of age and infirmity.) Inventory Jan. 10, 1661, £78-9-1. Aug. 6, 1673, the son sold his homestall and two other lots of his land in Watertown to John Coolidge. His wife was Sarah Smith, dau. of Edmund Smith, of Wrentham, Co. Suffolk, Eng.

He was a cordwainer and resided in Boston. Was one of the merchants and traders of that city who petitioned for a bankrupt law in June, 1701. He was a freeman in 1666. He d. in 1678. 137. CAPT. PHINEHAS FISKE (Thomas, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. England, in Laxfield; m. there in 1638 Sarah ———; d. Sept. 10, 1659; m. 2d in Wenham, June 4, 1660, Elizabeth Easterick. Phineas Fiske, a freeman in Wenham, 1642, one of the first settlers, and until his death a leading citizen of that town, was the youngest son of Thomas Fiske, of England, and a grandson of Robert and Sybil (Gould) Fiske, of Laxfield, County of Suffolk. He was a captain of the militia in Wenham, and constable in 1644; Representative to the General Court in 1653; appointed "Commissioner to end small causes"—probably a Justice—in 1654; and his estate was settled upon his decease in 1673. Phineas-Fiske (sometimes spelled Phinehas) was twice married. His first wife, Sarah, and mother of his children, died in 1659; and in 1660 he married Elizabeth Easterick. His will—the first of the Fiskes found on the records—was made in March and proved in June of 1673, in which mention is made of sons James, John and Thomas Fiske, but not of wife (perhaps deceased) or daughters. Among his legatees were "nephews Samuel, who was to have his great Bible, and Mark Fiske." All of the foregoing were evidently born in England some years before emigration, for son James was freeman same year with his father (1642), and Thomas, the youngest, according to a certain deposition, was at that time about twelve years old. The family most probably came out in company with their relatives, Rev. John and William Fiske, as their names appear simultaneously (in 1641) on the records of Salem Church.

Wenham, Massachusetts, where he resided, was the last of the seven towns in Essex County that was set off from Salem, and is situated about twenty-two miles northeast of Boston. The general surface of the country is level, the soil fruitful, well watered and productive. In olden times the village of Wenham was recorded as remarkable for its quiet arcadian beauty, and its principal lake has obtained celebrity for the purity of its waters. The town was incorporated in 1643. Its settlers and principal inhabitants, like those of the most of the older towns, were Puritans, taken from the great middle class of Englishmen who have always been the backbone of the nation. Intelligent, religious, hardy and industrious, they were undoubtedly the best as to character of any emigrants ever brought to this country. Their influence in shaping the destiny of the nation is apparent in the high rank Massachusetts has always taken among her sister states. From the Wenham town records it is learned that "Phineas Fisk was the first constable, and he, with Charles Gott and John Fisk, constituted the first board of selectmen; Wm. Fisk was town clerk." Capt. Phinehas was representative to the general court in 1653. His will was proved June 26, 1673. One witness was Samuel Fisk. Legatees son James to have one-half the house and land, sons John and Thomas to have the remainder, nephew Samuel to have his great Bible, and Mark Fisk some articles of bedding (above from Salem court records). He d. June 7, 1673; res. England, Salem and Wenham, Mass.

163. REV. JOHN FISKE (John, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. St. James Parish, South Elmham, Suffolk County, Eng., 1601; m. 1629, Ann Gipps, of Frinshall, in Norfolk, England; d. in Chelmsford Feb. 14, 1672; m. 2d, Aug. 1, 1672, Mrs. Elizabeth Henchman, widow of Edmund.

The earliest of the Wenham town records extant is a grant of twenty acres of land to the town, one-half of it by Mr. Smith, on one side of the meeting house, and the other half by Mr. John Fisk, on the other side of it. This grant, which was made March 2, 1642, appears to have been divided into two-acre lots, which were given to actual settlers on condition of building upon them dwellings for themselves and their families. But in case that any such should wish to remove from the village they were required to offer their places for sale first to "the Plantation." The object of this arrangement was to encourage actual settlers, and also to form a village about the middle of the town. From these votes it appears that a meeting house, at least a temporary one, had already been built. It is supposed to have stood on or near the spot occupied by that built in 1664, viz., upon the eminence near the house at one time belonging to Mr. Henry Tarr.

There cannot be a doubt that John is the "Mr. John Fiske" who was made a freeman at a court held in March, 1637-8 (Savage's Winthrop, Vol. 2, p. 367). Mather says that he was "the elder brother," and that he died Jan. 14, 1676. His wife was Ann Gipps, of Frinshall, in Norfolk. They had a child, who was born at Frinshall, but died in infancy. A son, Nathaniel, died an infant. Three other children, John, Sarah and Moses, were born in New England, and here Candler's account in his manuscript in the British Museum of this branch of family ends.

Rev. John Fiske (by Cotton Mather). Among the writers of the Gospel with which the primitive church was blessed was "Luke, the beloved Physician," of whom Jerom elegantly says that as the Apostles from fishers of fish became fishers of men; so from a physician of bodies Luke was made a physician of souls; and as his book is read in the church his medicine will not cease. So among the first preachers who rendered the primitive times of New England happy, there was one who might likewise be called a "beloved physician," one to whom there might also be given the eulogy which the ancients think was given to Luke, a brother whose praise was the gospel throughout all the churches. This was Mr. John Fiske. Mr. Fiske was born in the Parish of St. James, in the County of Suffolk, England, about the year 1601, of pious parents. His grandparents and great-grandparents were eminently zealous in the true religion. In the reign of Queen Mary, of six brothers of this name, three were Papists and three were Protestants. Two of the latter were grievously persecuted. The one from whom

John, the subject of this memoir, descended, was, to avoid burning, hid many months in a wood pile and afterward half a year in a cellar, where he wrought by candle light at manufactures and remained undiscovered. But his many hardships brought on excessive bleeding, which shortened his days and added to "the cry of the souls under the altar." John was the eldest of four children, who all came with him to New England and left posterity with whom God established His Holy Covenant. His parents having devoted him to the Lord Jesus Christ, sent him first to a grammar school at a distance of two miles from their abode. Being there fitted for the university, he was sent to Immanuel College, Cambridge, where he resided until he took his first degree. Having spent some considerable time in preparatory studies he entered upon the work to which he had been devoted and which was his favorite object, the preaching of the Gospel. In this pursuit he would have continued had not Satan hindered him. The conformity act was odious to him. Its friends and supporters "breathed out slanders and the silencers pressed so hard upon him for his non-conformity, that upon the advice of his friends he relinquished the ministry and turned his attention to the study of physics. After a thorough examination he obtained license for public practice. At the age of 28 years he married a virtuous and amiable woman, who did him good and not evil all her days. She was the sharer and soother of all his tribulations until about three years before his death, when she left him to go to be with Christ. In 1633 his father died and left him in charge of his mother, two sisters and younger brother. This event dissolved the strongest ties that bound him to his native soil and removed every obstruction that seemed to be in the way to the engagement of his favorite pursuit. He resolved on going to New England, where he saw an opportunity for the quiet exercise of his ministry. He went on board a ship in disguise to avoid the fury of his persecutors. After they had passed the land's end, he entertained the passengers with two sermons a day, besides other agreeable discourses and devotional exercises, which filled the voyage with so much religion that one of the passengers being examined about his trying to divert himself with a hook and line on the Lord's day, protested that he did not know when the Lord's day was; he thought every day was a Sabbath day, for they did nothing but pray and preach all the week long. Mr. Fiske arrived in New England in the year 1637. His aged mother died quickly after he came on board, and his only infant quickly after he came on shore. He came well stocked with servants and all sorts of tools for husbandry and carpentry, and with provisions to support his family in a wilderness three years; out of which he charitably let a considerable quantity to the country, which he then found in the distresses of a war with the Pequot Indians.

The most prominent name among the first settlers of the town of Wenham was that of Fisk. Rev. John Fisk, who came from the County of Suffolk, in England, was the first minister of the place. As the parish of Wenham, in England, lies in the same county, it is not unlikely that the name of the town was taken from the original residence of this family. Rev. Mr. Fisk, after a residence of twelve years in Wenham, removed to Chelmsford, where he died. Besides him, three others of the name of Fisk were among the original settlers, and did not leave with the colony that removed to Chelmsford. They appear to have been men of property, and acted an important part in the infant settlement. Capt. Phineas and John Fisk were two of the first board of selectmen, and Hon. Wm. Fisk was the first town clerk. From the frequency with which the name occurs in the early records of baptisms, the descendants of the family appear to have been numerous, and for an hundred years or more they acted a prominent part in town affairs. Three of them, at different periods, held the office of deacon of the church. Out of thirty-five times that the town sent a deputy to the General Court, before 1720, it was represented twenty times by some one of this name. The first schoolmaster and the first commander of the militia, appointed in Wenham, was Capt. Thomas Fisk, who, for a period of twenty or thirty years, appears to have been the most important man in the town. As early as 1655 he was appointed town clerk, and two-pence granted to him for every order he should record. The first book of the town records is mostly in his hand-writing, which is not quite as legible as that of the best writing masters. He was a prominent actor in the series of measures which resulted in the division of the common lands. There continued to be several of the name in the place until the latter part of the last century, when it was reduced to a single family. Several farms have been at different times in possession of the family. The place, however, where they lived longest, and which is the most identified with their name, was on a lane leading from the Ober place (so-called) towards Wenham causeway. An old cellar alone remains to mark the spot, where generations lived, labored, and passed away.

The next year, Mr. John Fisk, who had taught the first grammar school established in Salem, and while thus engaged had occasionally assisted Mr. Peters in his ministerial labors, removed to Wenham, and through his efforts a church was regularly organized on the 8th of October, 1644. He at once became its pastor, and continued his labors in the town till 1656, apparently much to the satisfaction of the people. To the duties of the pastor he added those of physician, so that Cotton Mather remarks concerning him: "Among the most famous preachers and writers of the gospel, with whom the primitive church was blessed, there was Luke, the beloved physician, the blessed scholar and colleague of the Apostle Paul."

This appears like high eulogy, but for the times in which he lived, Mr. Fisk was evidently a superior man. He was descended from pious ancestry, and was early devoted to the service of Christ and the church. His parents, after carefully instructing him at home, sent him to the grammar school and afterwards to the university. He graduated at Immanuel College, Cambridge, and after studying theology was engaged for several years in the work of the ministry. In consequence, however, of the persecution then carried on against the Puritans and the difficulties and annoyances in the way of preaching, in accordance with the advice of his friends, he turned his attention to medicine, and obtained the usual license to practice as a physician. Yet he was still so desirous to resume the labors of the ministry that he determined to remove to America. He had previously married a lady of high rank and uncommon worth. To her parents his purpose to come to America was so disagreeable that they resolved to deprive him of several hundred pounds, which were the just share of his wife in her father's estate. At the call of duty, however, he did not hesitate to sacrifice property and all the endearments of home and kindred. Disguising himself to escape the fury of his persecutors, he embarked, in company with the Rev. John Allen, afterwards the first minister of Dedham.

After arriving in this country, Mr. Fisk appears to have taught some years in Cambridge, and afterwards in Salem. Of his services in the latter city, the Mayor of Salem, in a public address in 1842 says: "We may all be proud of the honest fame of the first teacher of our grammar school. He was, by the concurrent testimony of the most learned and honored of his day and generation, ranked high in the list of able, useful and devoted ministers of the gospel. One of his scholars was Sir George Downing, who was a member of the first class that graduated at Harvard College, and who was afterwards minister for Cromwell and Charles II. at The Hague." His pupils, it is said, were fitted "to read any classical authors into English, and readily make and speak true Latin, and write it in verse as well as prose, and perfectly to decline the paradigms of nouns and verbs in the Greek tongue."

Preferring, however, the work of the ministry to the labors of the teacher, he gave up his school in 1643, and, removing to Wenham, joined his fortunes to those of the infant plantation. Upon what salary he was settled we have no means of ascertaining. A piece of land appears to have been granted to him, and in addition to this, he had probably such contributions as the people were able to raise. It is stated that "he drew largely upon his own estate for the benefit of the new plantation." (In 1643 he gave ten acres of land for the benefit of the church and society). In 1654 it was voted by the town that "the yearly maintenance of our minister shall be fortie pounds a year, whether Mr. Fisk stay among us, or we procure another:" and again, that "Mr. Gott, James Moulton and John Fisk are chosen to go to Mr. Miller, to give him a call in case Mr. Fisk leaveth us." December, 1655, it was ordered "that in case Mr. Brock be secured to stay amongst us, whatsoever the town hath engaged, or shall be levied on any land, shall be paid, two-thirds part in wheat, barley or peas, butter or pork, and the other third part in Indian corn." In consequence of the extreme scarcity of money, taxes and contributions were very generally paid in produce. According to the expenses of living and the means of the people, £40 a year would seem to be full as large a salary as is now usually paid in country towns.

From the previous votes, it appears that Mr. Fisk had already formed the purpose of leaving Wenham. He remained, however, till 1656, when, with a majority of the church, he removed to Chelmsford, where he lived for twenty years, discharging the duties at once of the minister and the physician. "For twenty years," says Cotton Mather, "did he shine in the golden candlestick of Chelmsford, a plain, but an able, powerful and useful preacher of the gospel, rarely, if ever, by sickness hindered from the exercise of his ministry." He died in his new field of labor in 1676, at the advanced age of 75.

Rev. W. Allen, in his history of Chelmsford, has given high testimony to the value of Mr. Fisk's labors in that town. The trials and hardships which he was there called to endure, might have disheartened youthful vigor, but were borne with fortitude and even cheerfulness. For the use of his flock, he wrote a catechism entitled, "Watering of the Olive Plants in Christ's Garden." This little work is moderate in doctrine, catholic in spirit, and admirably designed." His epitaph in Latin is as follows: "vixi et quem dederas cursum mihi Christe peregi, pertaesus vitae, suaviter opto mori." (I have lived and finished the work which Thou, Saviour, didst give me; weary of life, I long to depart in peace.)

Rev. John Fiske, of Chelmsford, made his will June 18, 1674, which was proved by Samuel Foster, Sr. and Jr., Feb. 22, 1676. The other witness was Edward Spalding. The inventory of the estate was taken 2, 11, 1676 by Samuel Adams, Samuel Foster, Sr., and Abraham Parker, £703-3-10, made oath to by his son Moses, the executor, April 4, 1677. Items, homestead, including a sheep pasture on each side of the brook, meadow on Beaver Brooke; thirty-four acres on great brooke; six acres on Merrimack river; upland on Great Tadnicket meadow at son's place; twenty acres at great pine playne, a part of Mr. John Fiske, Jr.'s, homestead, on which his father, the testator, had built a house for him; meadow purchased of Capt. James Parker; library, which was valued at £60; a still; gally patts; scales and wts., writing his will with his own hand. Legatees, wife Elizabeth brought when married to him household goods, also "bees." He gave to son John, who was the eldest son, and at that time had wife Lydia had a certain legacy which if they deceased leaving no children, one-half of it was to go to son Moses and one-half to daughters Sarah Martha Burton and Anne Thompson, who were then of Salem, and each a legacy, from Mr. John Evered, alias Web, deceased. She was the youngest daughter, also unmarried, and Moses, her brother, was to be her guardian.

Daughter Sarah was then the wife of John Farwell, of Concord, but at that time, it seems, had no children.

Brother William, late of Wenham, deceased, left William for his eldest son and other children, who had legacies.

Sister Rix, of Salem, who was called mother to said children, of brother William.

Sister Martha Thompson, formerly of Salem, deceased, had left daughters Martha Burton and Anne Thompson, who were then of Salem, and each a legacy.

Son Moses, the testator's youngest son, to be executor and have the residue, including the homestead, and he was to put up a stone monument where the widow should be buried.

Rev. John Fiske's bounds, etc., according to the evidence of Samuel Moulton, then Dec. 1, 1698, "of ye town of Rehoboth, formerly of Wenham, being fifty-seven years of age or thereabouts, & "ye bounds between ye lands of Mr. John Fiske & James Moulton senr., both of them formerly of Wenham now deceased which bounds are as followeth & lands in the possession of Samuel Kemball & John Porter is a rock now placed near ye house which was formerly ye said Deponents from thence northward to a red oake which was formerly ye said Deponents from thence northward to a red oake which was ye bounds between ye lands of Mr. John Fiske & James Moulton * * * * * as ye line runs between ye land of said Shipleys & Mr. John Fiske farme to Pleasant Ponde which was in the possession of Samuel Kemball & John Porter when I came from Wenham * * * * * in 1652—this was dated as above.

Nov. 3, 1661, Thomas Rix of Salem, surgeon. They had one child, Theophilus, b. Aug. 20, 1665. "William, the other son of John senior, and brother of John junior, who emigrated, is probably the William Fiske, who, in 1642, was admitted a freeman." (Candler's Manuscript in the British Museum.) I shall now forbear special reference to Mr. Savage's volume of these admissions. William died in New England in 1654. He married Bridgett Muskett of Pelham, by whom he had William, Samuel, Joseph, Benjamin and Martha. William Fiske was of Salem in 1637, which year he arrived from England and was brother of Rev. John, with whom he came over. He had a grant of land that year and was made freeman May 18, 1642, and member of the Salem church July 2, 1641. Soon after he removed to Wenham, where he was the first town clerk or clerk of the writs, from 1643 to 1660. In the Colonial Record is a settlement of rights between William and his brother John, by which it seems he was under 24 years of age in Sept., 1638. Endicott, Hathorne, and two others of the men of Salem made the terms of agreement. He was elected representative to the General Court of the Commonwealth in 1647 and continued in that office until the year 1652, being annually re-elected. He enjoyed to a large extent the esteem and confidence of his fellow citizens. He died quite suddenly in 1654, having served his townsmen in all the offices in the town. He died intestate, probably his death was caused by some disease. Letters of administration were granted by the court to "Widow Bridget Fiske July 16, 1654, and provision made for the children, viz.: Wm., Samuel, Joseph, Benjamin and Martha. There are no records of births in Wenham prior to 1686.

In 1643, according to the Wenham town records, Wm. Fisk received liberty from the General Court to keep an ordinary (public house), and in 1646 was licensed "to sell wine and strong water;" which privileges were a few years later transferred to Phineas Fisk. One of the appraisers of his property was Phineas Fisk and one of the items was a "sign with the sign post."

Gregory Stone, by whom he had three ch.; she d. Nov. 29, 1654; m. 2d, Sept. 6, 1655, Seaborn Wilson, of Ipswich, dau. of Theophilus Wilson. Wilson—Theophilus, of Ipswich, made his will Oct. 3, 1690, which was proved March 31, 1691. Inv. Jan. 28, 1690. He mentioned son Thomas, grandchild Elizth. Lovel, granddau. Elizth. Russell, grandchild Thomas Pinder, "and I do make my son John Pinder and my son David Fiske my executors." Cousin Nathl. Tredwell was overseer of the will.

Seaborn Fiske, of Lexington, Middlesex Co., Mass., for £8 in money sold to Alexander Lovell, cordwainer, and Thos. Lovell, currier, both of Ipswich, her undivided common right in Ipswich the "said right of land being left to me ye sd. Fiske by my Honored father, Theophilus Wilson, of Ipswich, deceased, for part of portion ye above granted premisses together with ye ways, uses," &c., making her marke March 3, 1717.

Seaborn Fiske, only surviving daughter and heir of Mr. Theophilus Wilson, late of Ipswich, decd., conveying to her kinsmen, Thomas and Alexander Lovell's, of Ipswich, &c., see above ack. before Jono. Tyng, of Middlex Co., July 3, 1719. She d. in Woburn Jan. 12, 1721. His will was dated June 23, 1708, and is proved Dec. 20, 1711. It mentions his wife, Seaborn; son Nicholas Wyeth, his dau. being dead; children David, Elizabeth, Anna, and Abigail; cousin Samuel, son of Dea. Samuel Stone. Inventory Feb. 14, 1710, £405-17-6. Oct. 16, 1676, he his wife Seaborn sold to Samuel Page 149 acres of land in Watertown, granted to his father. Oct. 6, 1663, the court allowed him 10s. each for seven wolf's whelps heads.

David, says Paige, in his History of Cambridge, rem. from Watertown to Camb. about 1646, and res. on the northerly side of Linnaea street, near the Botanic Garden, which estate he sold to Joseph Daniel 13 Dec. 1660, and prob. rem. to the Farms (Lex.) about the same time. He was a wheelwright, but much employed in public service, especially as a surveyor of lands. He was Selectman 1688, and Representative in the critical period of 1689. He was one of the most prominent men in the settlement at the Farms; precinct clerk and assessor; the first subscriber for erecting a meeting house there, and the first named member of the Church. In 1675 the work of settlement at Worcester was prosecuted with vigor, about the middle of April surveys were made of the lands by David Fiske, of Cambridge. Partial surveys were made in May, 1685 (at Worcester), a lot was laid out for Gookin of 100 acres on the east side of Pakachoag Hill and another lot of 80 acres on Raccoon Plain. There were present at this time David Fiske, the surveyor, and others. [History of Worcester.]

"David Fiske," says Hudson, in his Hist. of Lex., "was not only one of the first settlers, but became one of the most prominent and useful men in the precinct. He headed the subscription for a meeting house in 1692, and on the organization of the parish the year after, he was chosen clerk, and one of the selectmen or assessors. He was also chosen chairman of a committee to purchase of the town of Camb. a lot of land for the support of the ministry. These and other similar offices he frequently held under the Parish. He was also a member of the church organized in 1696, and his wife immediately after removed her relation from the church in Camb. to the church gathered in the precinct. He not only served his fellow-citizens in a civil and religious, but also in a military capacity, as appears by the prefix Lieut., which is often in the records connected with his name. He was often employed by the colony as a surveyor. He resided on Hancock St." A handsome monument was erected in 1856 by Benj. Fiske, Esq., with this inscription:

173. SERGT. JAMES FISKE (Phineas, Thomas, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Suffolk Co., England, ———; m. Anna ———; m. 2d Hannah Pike. James Fiske, Sr., eldest son of Phineas, was born in England, emigrated in 1637, joined Salem Church 1642, was same year freeman, and shortly after the family were established in Wenham, he removed to Haverhill, Mass., where he had several grants of land, the first being in 1640. He was a number of times a Selectman in Haverhill.

In the general division of lands, in 1661, James Fiske does not appear among the grantees; had probably then removed, as in 1669 he was one of a committee in Chelmsford appointed "to lay the land northerly of Groton," in which latter place he died. In his will in the Middlesex probate office dated June 14, 1689, proved July 26, 1689, all of the above children, save Ann and James, are mentioned as legatees, but other parties were executors. James Fiske, and Samuel Fiske, who appear on Groton records as heads of families—the first in 1690, the latter in 1704—were sons of the above. Among the descendants of Samuel, in the third and fourth generations, may be mentioned Hon. Levi Fiske, of Jaffrey, and Hon. Thomas Fiske, of Dublin, N. H., the former a State Senator, 1835-6; the latter, 1859-60.

The following data relative to James Fiske while residing in Haverhill is taken from the town records: Attending town meetings was evidently considered by our ancestors as a duty each voter owed to the community in which he lived, and for the neglect of which he deserved punishment. They even considered tardiness in attending as meriting rebuke, as we find by the record of Feb. 13, 1647, that John Ayer, Sr., and James Fiske were fined "for not attending the town meeting in season."

Considerable land was this year granted to individuals west of Little River, on the Merrimack, and among others James Fiske had liberty to lay down his land in the plain, "and have it laid out over Little River, Westward."

It was voted this year by the town "that all the meadows shall be laid out by the 12th of June next, to each man his proportion according to his house lot." At the same meeting it was "ordered that a committee, of which James Fiske was one, shall view the upland that is fit to plough, by the last of March or the tenth of April next, and that they bring in their intelligence to the town by that time." It was also ordered "that all the undivided land, after all the meadows and second division of plough land is laid out, shall remain to the same inhabitants the proprietors of the three hundred and six acres, to every one according to honest and true meaning, all commons remaining in general to them."

James Fiske and Anne, his wyfe, of Haverhill, for 100 pounds, sold to Rev. John Ward, of Haverhill, Nov. 22, 1659, a Dwelling house and house lot of nine acres in Haverhill, bounded by land of Richard Littlehale on the west, by Mr. Ward's on the east and south, by Michael Emerson on the north, etc., also five acres of planting land in the Playne, bounded on the south by Merrimack river and north by the common, etc.; two acres of east meadow, bounded on the east by a river; two acres of west meadow, with commonages, etc.

Following are the names of those who received a share in this division: "The lots or draughts for the second division of plough land, with the number of each man's accommodation: John Fiske, four acres.

Among the noteworthy incidents may be mentioned the case of Robert Pike, of Salisbury. The court had prohibited Joseph Peasley and Thomas Macy, of Salisbury, from exhorting the people on the Sabbath, in the absence of a minister. Pike declared that "such persons as did act in making that law, did break their oath to the country, for it is against the liberty of the country, both civil and ecclesiastical." For expressing himself in this manner, he was disfranchised by the General Court, and heavily fined. At the next May Court, a petition was presented from a large number of the inhabitants of Hampton, Salisbury, Newbury, Haverhill and Andover, praying that Pike's sentence might be revoked. Among the names of the Haverhill signers, as copied from the original petition in the State Archives, is that of James Fiske.

The lots in the fifth division of land were drawn Nov. 20, 1721, and it shows who, or rather whose representatives, were the commoners at this time. James Fisk is the forty-second in the list of fifty. They were the heirs and assigns of the original purchasers, and were at this time considered to be the proprietors of the undivided lands in the town. (P. 257, Hist. of Haverhill.)

From the Groton records are found the following entries:

His property, valued at 372 pounds, was by decree of court divided among the following: Widow Remember, and children John, Samuel, Noah, Waite, Elizabeth and Remember. He was familiarly known as "John, the Constable," to distinguish him from another of the same name. John Fiske was witness to the will of Thomas Payne in 1638. He was witness to the will of John Fairfield in 1646, also to will of Christ. Yongs in 1647, and in 1679 a John Fiske was in account with the estate of Edward Waldern. John Fisk died about one month previous to the 27th of the ninth month (November), 1683. Widow Remember and eldest son petitioned for letters of administration at the time of above date. Court ordered divided as above stated, Samuel having had considerable in father's life time. Son Samuel testifies he is about twenty-four years of age, had received twenty acres of land upon his marriage with Eliz., daughter of Lieut. Whipple, of Ipswich. Deed twenty acres says "John Fisk, carpenter, & wfe Rem'ber, &c., & dated Nov. 10, 1682. Witnessed by Thomas Fisk. Ipswich records show widow Remember's daughter. Remember mar. John Fiske of Wenham was in the company commanded by Capt William Turner, Apr. 6, 1676, and in the Falls fight he was left wounded by Capt. Lathroppe.

May 18. "This day that happened which is worthy to be remembered. For at North Hampton, Hadly, and the Towns thereabouts, two English Captives, efcap-ing from the Enemy, informed that a considerable body of Indians had (30) feated themselves not far from Pacomtuck, and that they were very secure: so that should Forces be sent forth against them, many of the Enemy would (in probability) be cut off, without any difficulty. Hereupon the Spirits of Men in those Towns were raised with an earnest desire to see and to try what might be done. They sent to their neighbors in Conn. for a supply of men, but none coming, they raised about an hundred and four score out of their own towns, who arrived at the Indian Wigwams betimes in the morning, finding them secure indeed, yea all asleep without having any Scouts abroad, so that our Souldiers came and put their Guns into their Wigwams, before the Indians were aware of them, and made a great and notable slaughter amongst them. Some of the souldiers affirm, that they numbered above one hundred that lay dead upon the ground, and besides those, others told about an hundred and thirty, who were driven into the River, and there perished, being carried down the Falls. The River Kishon swept them away, that ancient river, the river Kishon, O my foul thou hast troden down strength. And all this while but one English-man killed, and two wounded. But God saw that if things had ended thus, another and not Christ would have had the Glory of this Victory, and therefore in his wife providence, he so disposed, as that there was at last somewhat a tragical issue of this expedition. For an English Captive Lad who was found in the wigwams spake as if Philip were coming with a thousand Indians which false report being famed (Fama bella fant) among the Souldiers, a pannick terror fell upon many of them, and they hastened homewards in a confused rout: In the mean while a party of Indians from an Island (whole coming on shore might easily have been prevented, and the souldiers before they set out from Hadly were earnestly admonished to take care about that matter) assaulted our men; yea, to the great dishonor of the English, a few Indians pursued our Souldiers four or five miles, who were in number near twice as many as the Enemy. In this disorder, he that was at this time the chief Captain, whose name was Turner, lost his life, he was pursued through a River, received his fatal stroke as he passed through that which is called the Green River, etc. as he came out of the Water he fell into the hands of the Uncircumcised, who stripped him (as some who saw it affirm) and rode away upon his horse; and between thirty and forty more were lost in this Retreat.

These Falls we once suggested should have been named Mafacre Falls: but in all recent geographies and histories they are known as Turner's Falls, and we heartily acquiesce in thus designating them, as it commemorates a brave and excellent man. I do not remember to have met with an Indian name for These Falls. In early accounts they are called simply The Falls, the Falls in the Conn, etc. They were by some called Miller's Falls, as they were not far from Miller's river; they have also been called Deerfield Falls."

The power of the Indians was broken in this battle, but the war still continued in a desultory manner for two years. In these contests the people of Wenham bore their part in contributions of man as well as of money. The manner in which the state used to pay the services of its old and faithful soldiers may be seen from the following order of the General Court, Mar. 18, 1684: "In answer to the petition of John Fiske, of Wenham, a sore wounded soldier in the late Indian war, and thereby incapacitated to get his living, humbly desiring the favor of this honored General Court (having the approbation of the selectmen of said Wenham), to grant him a license to keep a public house of entertainment, therewith freedom from county rates, and also to sell drink free from imposts and excises." Consent was given.

John Fiske of Wenham, assignee of the committee of Salem, for the building the meeting house, plt. agst Christopher Babag Deft., attachment, 23rd, 9th m., 1675. Babbage, the constable, appealed to high court 21st, 10 m., 75. Ipswich Court Records.

NOTE—Massachusetts was divided into four counties in 1643, viz.: Essex, Middlesex, Suffolk and Norfolk. The last named, included all the towns north of Merrimack River, in Massachusetts, and New Hampshire as far as Portsmouth at first; but after the line between Massachusetts and New Hampshire was established what was left in Massachusetts was annexed to Essex County. Some years later when more counties were made outside of Middlesex and Suffolk one was named Norfolk. (See map of Massachusetts.) At first records were kept at Ipswich and at Salem, but now all records of the county are at Salem.

175. CAPT. THOMAS FISKE (Phineas, Thomas, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. England in 1632; m. Peggy ——. She d., and he m. 2d, in Boston, by Rev. Charles Morton, of Charlestown, May 14, 1695, Martha Fitch, of Boston. "Thomas Fiske, youngest son of Phineas Fiske, of Wenham, was born in England in 1630, was a freeman in 1661, and for above forty years afterward a citizen of great influence in Wenham. He participated very largely in public affairs, was repeatedly a representative to the General Court, and died in 1705, 'the Patriarch of the town,' as he was called, being in his seventy-sixth year. By wife Peggy, he had eight children. All the sons died while young, except the first, Thomas." From the Judicial Court records of Essex County it is stated that, "The wife of Thomas Fiske was presented for wearing a tiffany hood," and was sentenced to pay 10 shillings fine and two shillings six pence fees to the court in Oct., 1652. Verily the court must have had a royalty on another make of "hoodes." He came with his father from England, in his early youth. He was one of the prominent men of the town of Wenham. Was representative 1671-72 and often after, especially in the revolutionary times of 1689-91. Was captain of the Colony forces. Was foreman of the jury in that sad case of Rebecca Nurse, when after a verdict of not guilty had been given was prevailed on to convict by the wonderful perversity and extraordinary ignorance of the court. His shocking confession against himself and the judges is in Hutch, II., 52, Until 1719 one public school sufficed for the inhabitants of Wenham, which for many years was put under the charge of Capt. Thomas Fiske. For the better protection of the community "a trained band" was organized. Thomas Fiske was captain, and William Fiske, lieutenant. The emolument to military position in those days far exceeded the modern estimate, for in seating the congregation (the pew system being not yet introduced) the officers of the military next to the deacons always had precedence. In 1686 the town of Wenham instructed Capt. Thomas Fiske to keep a record of births, marriages and deaths, and he began this registration.

In 1695 Capt. Thomas Fisk was paid "for going representative, for service as an assessor, and a day going to Ipswich, £2 9s., by the town of Wenham. He held every office in the gift of his fellow citizens. Represented the town in the Great and General Court, 1671-72-78-79-80-86-94-97. Was moderator of the town meetings, 1700-04 and 1705; town clerk from 1661 to 1694, over thirty-three years. His age is determined from a deposition in regard to Joseph Axey willing property to Joseph Fisk in 1670. He then calls himself about forty years of age. As stated above Capt. Fiske was foreman of the jury that tried Mrs. Rebecca Nurse, a respectable old lady in Salem, on the absurd charge of being a witch. He subsequently made a confession, of which the following is a copy:

July 4th, 1692.—I Thomas Fisk the subscriber hereof, being one of them that were of the jury the last week at Salem Court, upon the trial of Rebekah Nurse, etc., being desired, by some of the relations to give a reason why the jury brought her in guilty, after the verdict not guilty; I do hereby give my reasons to be as follows, viz.: When the verdict, not guilty, was given, the honoured court was pleased to object against it, saying to them, that they think they let slip the words which the prisoner at the bar spake against herself, which were spoken in reply to Goodwife Hobbs and her dau. who had been faulty in setting their hands to the Devil's book, as they had confessed formerly; the words were, "What do these people give in evidence against me now? They used to come among us?" After the honoured court had manifested their dissatisfaction of the verdict, several jury declared themselves desirous to go out again, and thereupon the honoured court gave leave; but when we came to consider the case, I could tell how to take her words as an evidence against her, till she had a further opportunity to put her sense upon them, if he would take; and then going into court, I mentioned the words aforesaid, which by one of the court were affirmed to have been spoken by her, she being then at the bar, but made no reply nor interpretation of them; whereupon these words were to me a principal evidence against her.

THOMAS FISKE.

Mrs. Nurse, being informed of the use which had been made of her words, gave in a declaration to the court, that "when she said Hobbs and her daughter were of her company, she meant no more than that they were prisoners as well as herself; and that, being hard of hearing, she did not know what the foreman of the jury said." But her declaration had no effect.

The minister of Salem, Mr. (Nicholas) Noyes, was over zealous in these prosecutions. He excommunicated this honest old woman after her condemnation. One part of the form seems to have been unnecessary; delivering her over to Satan. He supposed she had delivered herself up to him long before. But her life and conversation had been such of which many testimonies were given, that the remembrance of it, as soon as the people returned to the use of their reason, must have wiped off all the reproach which had been occasioned by the manner of her death.

Daniel Gookin, assistant, Sarah Symmes, dau. of William of Charlestown and Woburn; d. Dec. 2, 1692; m. 2d, Jan. 7, 1701, Mrs. Ann (Shepard) Quincy, widow of Daniel of Boston, and dau. of the distinguished Rev. Thomas Shepard of Charlestown; d. July 28, 1708. Sarah Symmes was the daughter of William, Jr., b. Jan. 10, 1627, and his first wife, as his servant, John Warner, testified that his master was a widower when this daughter married in 1671. Of William's mother Capt. Johnson says: "Among all the Godly women that came through the perilous seas to war their warfare, the wife of this zealous teacher shall not be omitted." He was b. in Wenham, a village in Salem, Mass., and baptized at the latterplace in June, 1642. He was son of John Fiske, who was born in the Parish of St. James in South Elmham, a subdivision of the Hundred of Wangford in the County of Suffolk; came to Boston in disguise in 1637 with his wife (Ann Gippes) and children, sat down, first at Cambridge. Removed the same year to Salem, was ordained Oct. 8, 1644, as minister of Wenham, and in 1655 became minister at Chelmsford, where he died Jan. 14, 1677. The son's charges in college, extending from 3-7-58 to 3-7-59 are for tuition, gallery, detriment and sizing, and he is credited by 59 pounds of butter and 5 sheep. His part on taking his second degree at commencement in 1665, has been noticed elsewhere. Not long afterward he was at Dover, N. H., perhaps as a preacher. In 1666 he was made freeman. From 1668 to 1671 he officiated as Pastor at Woronoco, now Westfield, Mass. After the death of the Reverend William Thompson, in the part of Braintree now Quincy, the church there was so divided that the people could not effect a settlement for a successor. Accordingly, "at a County Court held at Boston by the adjournment the 23d of Nov., 1671, the court having taken into consideration the many means that have been used with the Church of Braintree, and hitherto nothing done to effect, as to the obtaining the ordinances of Christ amongst them, this Court therefore orders and desires Mr. Moses Fiske to improve his labors in preaching the word of Braintree until the church there agree and obtain supply for the work of the ministry, or this court take further order." In the Braintree records, as stated by Lunt, Fiske writes: "Being ordered by the court and advised by the Reverend Elders and other friends, I went up from the honored Mr. Edw'd Tyng's with two of the brethren of this church, sent to accompany me (2, 10 mo., 1671), being the Saturday, to preach God's word unto them."
- "3, 10, 71 (Dec. 3, 1671). After evening exercises was ended I apologized as to my coming, etc.
- "4, 10, 71. About twenty of the brethren came to visit at Mr. Flynt's, manifesting (in the name of the church) their ready acceptance of what the Honored Court had done (having received and perused their order, with letters sent to their Townsmen respecting their duty toward their minister) and thanking me for my compliance therewith.
- "24, 12, 71. The church by their messengers (Capt. Brackett, Lieut. Quinsey, Deacon Bass, John Doscet, sen., Gregory Belchar, Will Veazy, sen., Saml. Tompson) did jointly and unanimously desire my settlement amongst them, and that in order to office.
- "14, 2, 72. Having advised, I gave the church, after evening exercise was finished (being often urged thereto), an answer of acceptance through God's assistance, understanding the concurrence of the neighbors which was partly expressed, and part tacit.

"5, 3, 72. The church passed a vote of election (3 or 4 suspending who, after acceptance, etc., manifested their hearty concurrence)."

June 18, 1672, the town voted to give me £60 in money as by a town rate, and he to make provision for himself as housing or else to live in a town house provided for the ministry. And the house and land bought by the town of brother Samuel Tompson, being about five acres and a half or six acres, to be fences and housing set in good repair.

Aug. 18, 1672, having obtained letters of recommendation and dismissal from the church at Chelmsford, he joined the church in Braintree and gave his "answer of acceptance to their call to office, the Rev. Elders and others advising and often renewing their request to that end." He was ordained Sept. 11, 1672. "Mr. Eliot prayed and gave the charge; Mr. Oxenbridge and the Deacons joined in laying on hands; Mr. Thatcher gave the right hand of fellowship. Dep. Gov. Leveret, Mr. Danforth, Mr. Tyng and Mr. Stoughton were present." Probably, according to the custom of the day, he preached his own ordination sermon. Oct. 26, 1674, the majority at a public town meeting voted that he "should have £80 for the year—74, in wood part and corn, at the country rate price, which was barley 4s., pease 4s., Indian 3s., malt 4s." Aug. 7, 1704, it was "90 pounds in or as money" (he finding himself with wood), to be annually paid to him, or his assigns, during his performing ye work of the ministry in the town, from the first of Mar., 1704." During the last years of Fiske's ministry his comfort was disturbed by a controversy between two sections of Braintree. The population had outgrown the capacity of the meeting house, and the southern portion, for many years, had petitioned without success for a larger one to be situated near to them. The distance for them to travel was long, the roads bad, particularly in winter, and the Lord's day became one of labour instead of rest. The population of the two sections was nearly equal. The northern section vigorously opposed the project and the other began to build for themselves, promising to be at the whole cost of the meeting house and to maintain their own minister. This, and propositions to pay 10 pounds and afterward 20 pounds of the 90 pounds of Fiske's salary, were declined. Particulars may be found in Adams, Lunt, Marshall, and Pattee, and, according to depositions of parties interested there were questionable measures resorted to. "After long and serious differences the members of the first parish were compelled to yield to a division," and then there was a litigation respecting Fiske's salary. About one-half of the parishioners and supporters were withdrawn on forming the south precinct, where Hugh Adams, H. U., 1697, was settled at the gathering of a church, Sept. 10, 1707, at Monotopod, now Braintree. During Fiske's ministry there were 147 persons admitted to his church and 799 baptized. From a diary in the library of the Massachusetts Historical Society which was kept by John Marshall, a mason, though formerly thought to be one Fairchild, it appears that Fiske "continued till his dying day, a diligent, faithful Labourer in the harvest of Jesus Christ. Studious in the holy scriptures, having an extraordinary Gift in prayer, above many good men and in preaching equall to the most; inferior to few, zealously dilligent for God and the good of men, one who thought no Labour, Cost of Suffering too dear a Price for the good of his people; his publick preaching was attended with Convinceing Light and clearness and powerful affectionate aplication, and his private oversight was performed with impartiality, humility and unwearied diligence; he lived till he was near 65 years of age, beloved and honored of the most that knew him; on the 18th of July, being the Lord's day, he preached all day in publick. But he was not well. Going home from his publick Labors he went ill to bed. The distemper, Continued proved a malignant fever. So that Litel hopes of recovery appearing his church assembled together and earnestly besought the Great Shepherd of the sheep, that they might not be deprived of him. But heaven had otherwise determined for. on Tuesday, Aug. 10 (1708), he dyed about one afternoon." He was m. Sept. 9, 1671, by Capt. Gookin, assistant, to Sarah, dau. of William Symmes, of Charlestown or Woburn. She d. Dec. 2, 1692. They had fourteen children, of whom six died in infancy. Mary, the eldest child, b. Mr. Fiske was placed in the tomb where lie his two wives and his successor, Joseph Marsh, H. U., 1705, besides others. On his tombstone is this inscription:

"Braintree! They prophet's gone, this tomb inters
The Rev. Moses Fisk his sacred herse,
Adore heaven's praiseful art, that formed the man,
Who souls not to himself, but Christ oft won;
Sail'd through the straits with Peter's family,
Renown'd and Gaius hospitality,
Paul's patience, James prudence, John's sweet love,
Is lauded enter'd clear'd and crown'd above."

In the library of the Massachusetts Historical Society a manuscript sermon delivered before the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company in 1694. The text is taken from Eph. vi., 14. "Stand them therefore so." It is noticeable that one item in the inventory of Fiske's is "His Armour."

The ministerial tomb was erected by the Rev. Moses Fiske, the third minister of the first church, in which he and his two wives were buried. After his death this tomb was selected as the ministerial sepulcher in which all the ministers of the first church have been interred with the exception of Mr. Thompson and Mr. Flint. Over the grave of the latter was placed a large flat stone, as was then the custom, to prevent the wild beasts from removing the remains of the dead from their last resting place. Not long before the decease of the Rev. Peter Whitney the monument over the tomb was renewed by the ladies of Quincy, with granite, and the freestone tablet that surmounted it was preserved."

205. JAMES FISKE (James, Phineas, Thomas, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Haverhill, Mass., Aug. 8, 1649; m. per Middlesex Co. Records, Feb. 2, 1686, Tabitha Butterick. He was not mentioned in his father's will. James Fiske and Samuel Fiske were among the early settlers of Groton, Mass., and are supposed to have been brothers. But little is known of their history. It is not definitely known where they originated, nor what became of them. No record or monument of their deaths or emigration has been found. The same is true of their immediate descendants, with one, or at most, two, exceptions. It is believed, however, that James and Samuel Fiske were sons of James Fiske, of Haverhill, Mass., who was the grandson of Thomas, the third son of Robert and Sibyl (Gould) Fiske, of England. Some of the considerations that have led to this belief are as follows: It has been ascertained that James, of Haverhill, had two sons named James and Samuel; that James was born in 1649 and Samuel in 1658, but all trace of them appears to have been lost, unless James and Samuel of Groton are the same, and if the same, James would have been 41 years old when his first child was born in Groton and 56 when his last. Samuel would have been 46 when his eldest, and 62 when his youngest child was born. This is not improbable. They may have married late in life, or may have had children before coming to Groton. The circumstance that two persons should disappear from one section of the country, and that two about the same time should appear in another section not very remote, bearing the same names and of similar ages, is pretty strong evidence that they are identical, and further the name Samuel seems not to have been very common in the early history of the Fiskes in this country, and if the two above mentioned are identical, the lineage of all, or nearly all, bearing that name can be traced. There were subsequently other families of Fiskes in Groton, but with a single exception it is not known that they were connected with those of James and Samuel. In the history of Groton, the name Fiske is uniformly

spelt with an e, while in the history of Pepperell, by the same author, the name is as uniformly spelt without an e, though the latter were descendants of the former. Res. Groton, Mass.

Doctor Fiske was a physician of respectability and was accounted skillful in the arts of physick and chirurgery while in Wenham, as appears from the subjoined certificates of commendation copied from the original papers preserved among the state papers of Connecticut at Hartford. We also have his own petition to the General Court for a license, which was granted after his removal to Milford. His professional reputation gave him an elevated position among his medical brethren in his new field of labor. His widow Hannah and second son Ebenezer administered on his estate.

These may certify all whom it may concern, that Mr. John Fiske, late of Wenham, in the County of Essex in N. E.; hath for many years with good success, practiced in the arts of physick and chirurgery & hath made many notable cures among us & hath generally been accounted one of good skill & understanding in many maladies & their remedies of which some of us have had experience (& others) credible information & doe therefore hereunto subscribe our names this 21st of Feb., 1695. William Fiske, Samuel Appleton and ten others.

My opinion is of small weight, but being desired I can say that I have so much acquaintance with Mr. Fiske that makes me desire that he may have a license to practice in physick & chirurgic, in the Colony, which I hope may be for the good of many. Apr. 4, 1695, I also am of the same mind, Samuel Mather and two others.

According to the Connecticut Colonial records of May, 1695, John Fisk was granted liberty to practice phisick and chirurgery. A note states Mr. John Fisk had practiced medicine several years in Wenham, Mass., but has now settled in Milford.

At the general assembly session of Oct., 1702, "Mr. John Fisk informs this court that he had received a considerable wound in the former Indian wares, therefore requested this court release him from the payment of the country rates for the future, it is therefore ordered that said John Fisk be freed from paying Country rates for the future, viz., during his natural life."

Thomas, Sr., and Jr., were wealthy proprietors in Wenham, were liberal patrons of Harvard College and the Christian Church, and bore the rank of "gentlemen" and title of "captain"—terms indicating, in those days, the highest social position; and probably no other family were more prominently identified with the early history of the town than they. Capt. Thomas Fiske, Jr., was frequently in town office, was moderator of the town meetings 1710-11-20; was town clerk, 1702-3-5 and 8, and in 1715 elected Representative to General Court. 236. REV. JOHN FISKE (Moses, John, John, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Braintree, Mass., Nov. 26, 1684; m. Nov. 26, 1717, Abigail Hobart, dau. of Rev. Nehemiah Hobart, of Newton, Mass. He was born in that part of Quincy subsequently incorporated as Braintree, educated at the public schools and by his father and graduated at Harvard in 1702. After his father's death he preached in the Braintree church and was ordained pastor of the church in Killingly, Conn., Oct. 19, 1715, his brother-in-law, Rev. Joseph Baxter, of Medfield, preaching the sermon. There remained until 1741, when disaffection arose in the church. He was dismissed by council and subsequently retired upon his large landed estate in Killingly, where he died.

July 16, 1711, the town of Killingly agreed to give Mr. Fiske three hundred and fifty acres of land for his encouragement to settle in the work of the ministry. James Leavens and Sampson Howe were appointed a committee to lay out the land; Eleazer Bateman and Ephraim Warren to survey it. Two hundred acres were laid out to him on French River, beyond the bounds of Killingly as it afterwards proved. Seventy-five acres for the homestead were selected on the eastern slope of Killingly Hill, and seventy-five on Assawaga or Five-Mile River. Stated religious services were probably held after this date by Mr. Fiske, though some years passed before his settlement.

In the summer of 1714 the meeting-house was raised and covered. Its site was east of the Plainfield road, about one-fourth of a mile south of the present East Putnam meeting-house. Nothing is known of its size and appearance, or of the circumstances of its building. In the ensuing summer it was made ready for occupation and preparations made for church organization. Sept. 15, 1715, was observed in Killingly as a day of solemn fasting and prayer, preparatory to the gathering of a church and the ordination of a pastor.

"October 19, 1715, a church was publicly gathered in Killingly and John Fiske ordained the pastor of it." Mr. Dwight, of Woodstock, opened the service with prayer. Reverend Mr. Baxter, of Medfield, preached from Romans i: 16. Rev. Mr. Thatcher, of Milton, gave the charge to the minister and made the preceding and subsequent prayers. The first marriage recorded by the young minister was that of William Lared to Hannah, the first of the seven notable daughters of Simon Bryant. Mr. Fiske was himself married to Abigail, daughter of Rev. Nehemiah Hobart, of Newton, Mass., and sister of Mr. Samuel Estabrook, of Canterbury. The only incident of his domestic life that has come down to us, is the burning of his house and all its contents one Sabbath, when the family were attending public worship. The ministry of Mr. Fiske was acceptable and prosperous, and large numbers were added to the church. His pastoral charge comprehended also the inhabitants north of Killingly, who were allowed to pay church rates, if not other town charges. Mr. Fiske was remarkably minute and methodical in the registry of church records, keeping separate lists of those uniting with the church by profession and by letter and of those owning the covenant. Very full lists of marriages and baptisms were preserved by him, which acquired additional value from the total lack of town records during the greater part of his ministry. Of the salary and settlement allowed to him nothing further is known, save that the hundred acres of land given by Capt. Chandler to the first settled minister of Killingly, "which land by the ordering of Divine Providence appertains to John Fiske"—were laid out to him in 1721, west of Five-Mile River, a half mile east of the meeting-house.

Killingly's persistent attempts to secure possession of this land occasioned much trouble and confusion. Two hundred acres promised by the town to the Rev. Mr. Fiske, were laid out in Thompson's land, and Hascall and Spalding were encouraged in their unlawful appropriations of Cotton's and Collin's grants. In 1721 the selectmen of Killingly without permission from Government proceeded to lay out this colony land and apportion it among her own inhabitants and its consenting residents. The Mass. Government wrote to Conn. in behalf of Cotton and Collins and received assurance that their claims should be made up to them in the ungranted land near Woodstock. In 1726 Paul and William Dudley, Josiah Wolcott and Samuel Morris represented to the General Court, "that Killingly, by what right they knew not, had laid out large quantities of land north of her prescribed bound, which was unjust and destructive of their rights," and begged relief. Joseph Leavens and Joseph Cady were summoned to answer in behalf of Killingly proprietors, and insisted that the land thus laid out was included within their patent. The court pronounced their plea sufficient, but ordered patents to be granted and executed to such grantees "as shall show grants and surveys made by Mass." Though this decision admitted Killingly's claim to Connecticut's share of this colony land, she was still dissatisfied, and persisted in her efforts to recover the tracts to Massachusetts' grantees.

The various public enterprises in which Killingly engaged, and her expensive controversy with Thompson and Massachusetts proprietors, absorbed much of her income, and she often found it difficult to meet her ordinary expenses. In 1734 the town voted "If any person or persons shall have money sufficient to procure a book for ye record of deeds of the town, they shall have ye same refunded, and repaid them again." Shepherd Fisk and Jacob Dresser were able to advance the requisite sum, which was repaid them after a long interval. Simon Bryant, chosen in 1731 "to wait on the Rev. John Fiske in case he goes to Hartford, and to assist him and to represent him in his absence in case the said Mr. Fiske cannot go." after ten years' delay was reimbursed the four pounds expended in that service.

The ministry to Mr. Fiske was acceptable and profitable to his people until a rupture occurred, from some cause not now manifest. "At a regular meeting of the first church of Killingly, July 8, 1741, after the meeting was opened by prayer, Mr. Fiske upon the advice of neighboring ministers, moved to the church to dismiss him from his pastoral relations." His request was granted by a clear majority. The Windham County association was called, "To consider and determine the differences and difficulties between Rev. Fiske and the church, arising from several scandalous reports spread abroad concerning Mr. Fiske." Deacon Bateman, Justice Leavens, Samuel Danielson, Ebenezer Knight and Gideon Draper were appointed a committee to represent the church and provide for the council. No record of the result is given, but it probably confirmed the dismissal of Mr. Fiske. The nature of the charges against him is not declared, but a succeeding pastor, with opportunity of judgment, was of opinion that they were not of any immorality. The church, at this date, numbered over four hundred members. Mr. Fiske, during his ministry, performed 763 baptisms, admitted 254 into full communion, and 148 to the half-way covenant. Aug., 1741, the committee of the church applied to the Association for a minister, and were recommended to several candidates, but did not succeed in securing one.

The loss of the minister was soon followed by a protracted and violent controversy respecting a meeting-house. The rude church edifice of 1715 was quite inadequate for the populous and thriving township of 1741, and the inhabitants of the south society were called together, Sept. 13, to see if they would vote to build a new meeting-house.

Mr. Fiske, the former pastor, was one of the new pastor's constant hearers, having built himself a pew in the new meeting-house and bearing his part in all society charges.

Moses Fiske, of Braintree, educated at the public schools and was graduated at Harvard College in 1708, where his name appears on the roll without the e. He was ordained minister of the first church in Salem in Oct., 1718. Says Bentley, in his Memorial Sermon: Rev. Samuel Fiske was a man of eminent talents in the pulpit, of a firm and persevering mind, and held in high esteem till dissensions sprang up in the society from the ill-defined discipline then existing in our churches. He was a preacher of real abilities, but his high notions of church authority were repugnant to many persons and prevented his usefulness. He was dismissed from the First Church in 1735 and accepted the charge of a new society established by his friends. He preached the first centenary lecture of the First Church Aug. 6, 1729. The election sermon delivered by him before the Governor and Legislature in 1731 may be ranked among the best. It was published and a copy of it is preserved among the State archives. Rev. Mr. Fiske was dismissed from the Third Church in 1745, when he retired from the public ministry. He was connected by marriage with one of the most flourishing families in Salem.

He was born in Braintree, educated at the public schools, fitted for college and was graduated at Harvard in the class of 1721. He studied medicine afterwards, practiced in Bridgewater, Mass., and died there. But very little was known of him, for in 1803 Mr. William Winthrop, of Cambridge, who, for some time past, had been engaged in a pursuit rather extraordinary, knew nothing of him. Winthrop investigated the following particulars of every one who has received a degree at Harvard College, from the first foundation of that University in 1638 to the present time; viz., the origination or where born, his professional business or employment, his place of residence, time of his death and age; also anything remarkable in their lives and characters; where such matters can be ascertained. At this time, also, Winthrop did not know anything of Dr. Fiske.

In 1638, Thomas Fuller, who belonged to a family of high social standing in England, came over to this country on a tour of observation, not intending to stay. While in Cambridge he became a convert to Puritanism, under the eloquent preaching of Rev. Thomas Shepard, a famous Colonial divine, and at once resolved to cast in his lot with his brethren of that faith in the New World. He purchased a large tract of land in New Salem (afterward Middleton) and having married Elizabeth Tidd, of Woburn, he settled upon his handsome estate and died in 1698, leaving sons Thomas, Benjamin and Jacob, and several daughters. His youngest son, Jacob Fuller, born in 1655, married Mary Bacon and settled on the paternal homestead. Their five children were named Mary, Elizabeth, Edward, Sarah and Jacob. Two of these, Elizabeth and Sarah, married Fiskes (Ebenezer and Daniel, of Wenham). Their uncle, Benjamin Fuller, was the father of Rev. Daniel Fuller, of Gloucester, and also of Col. Archelaus Fuller, who commanded a section of the American forces at the battle of Bennington.

Fiske was born in Wenham, where he continued to reside until 1748, when he moved to Upton, Worcester Co., where he was an early settler. His children were all born in Wenham. He made his will Feb. 6, 1754, probated in 1761, mentions wife Sarah and all his living children.

His name first appears upon the Lex. parish records in 1707, when Corpl. Jonathan Fiske was chosen one of the assessors. He was also a subscriber for the purchase of the common in 1711, though the church records show that his dau. Abigail was bap. in 1704, when he owned the covenant. He and his wife united with the church in 1708. He had a family of fourteen children, five of whom were b. in Lex., and the rest in Sudbury, to which place he moved about 1713, where he was a deacon. He and his wife were dismissed to the Sudbury church in 1718. His will, dated Nov. 13, 1740, mentions wife Abigail, six sons and seven daus., two of his children having died before that period.

In 1711 he was a subscriber for the purchase of the common. He was ad. to the church in 1736. His residence was on Hancock street, where his father David had resided, and was one of the first settled places in the township. The present, which is probably the second house on that spot, was erected in 1732. Robert Fiske was a physician, and probably the first of the profession in that place. His wife survived him but a few years.

The inventory of his estate sheds light upon the manners and customs of the age. Among other things, we find the following: Hat and wig 100s; Arms—yellow stock gun, 8£ 10s; little gun 5£; carbine 50s; brass pistols 50s; rapier and belt 12s; three staves 20s; two cans and two piggins 15s; one loom, quill wheel and warping bars, 50s; two pairs snow shoes 30s. Books—General Practice of Physic, 30s; English Dispensatory or Synopsis of Medicine 30s. The Structure and Condition of Bones 15s. By these items, it will be seen that the doctor was quite as well armed for the art of war as for the art of healing.

In the distribution of the estate of Dr. Robert Fiske, all of the real estate went to the older brothers of John, so that no deed from him appears to have been thereafter needed and in fact has not been found. 25 April, 1757, Robert Fiske of Woburn, Physician, gave to Joseph Fiske of Lexington, Physician and Jonas Parker of Lexington, laborer, a bond for £27, conditioned that David Fiske on coming of age would convey to Jonas Parker and Joseph Fiske his share in that one third of the estate of Robert Fiske, Physician of Lexington, deceased, which had been set off to his mother, Mary Fiske, widow of the said Robert. The sureties were John Fiske of Lexington, Dr. Jonathan and David Fiske of Woburn, John Buckman of Lexington and Mary his wife, and Lydia Wilson, widow of Lexington. These sureties were evidently the brothers and sisters of Robert, Joseph and David Fiske, mentioned in the body of the bond. 5 December, 1757, John Buckman of Lexington, filed his bond as administrator of that part of the estate of Dr. Robert Fiske, left unadministered by his widow, Mary, the sureties on the bond being John Fiske, Physician, of Lexington and John Fiske of Woburn, yeoman. He died Apr. 18, 1753; res. Lexington, Mass.

He was selectman ten years, between 1739 and 1758. He resided on the road to Concord, a little more than a mile from the common, at the easterly side of a large swell of land, which from his residence and ownership has taken the name of "Fiske Hill." It was at this house that the gallant Hayward of Acton met a British soldier coming from the well, between whom shots were exchanged, with fatal effect on both sides. He received his ordination at Haddam, Conn., in 1714, where he became the colleague and successor of Rev. Jer. Hobart, and died there, after a very successful pastorate of twenty-four years. Rev. Dr. D. D. Field, in his biographies of the early Connecticut clergy, speaks of him in high praise. "He was a man of piety and wisdom, sound in the faith, pleasant in intercourse, plain in reproof. His talents were solid, rather than brilliant; his sermons better calculated to inform the understanding than to remove the passions. A man of scientific attainments, of good literary abilities, and of true Christian deportment, his name was long remembered with sincere respects, in Haddam." Rev. Gen Fiske "early engaged in the business of the Sea." In 1775 he was a master mariner and became captain of the "Tyranicide," the first war-vessel commissioned by the state of Massachusetts, 8 July, 1776. He made many successful cruises in her, and was engaged in several sanguinary combats. On 10 Dec., 1777 he took command of the state ship "Massachusetts," a larger and a better vessel. After the Rev. war he engaged in commercial pursuits and acquired property. At the commencement of the American Revolution, his knowledge of the sea and personal intrepidity brought him into notice, and he was commissioned the first commander of a vessel of war by the government. At the close of the war, upon the reorganization of the State militia, he was commissioned a Colonel, then a Brigadier, and finally, in 1792, a Major General, which position he held until his death, in September, 1797.

He was a man of princely hospitality, of enterprising spirit, and benevolent impulses. He took a great interest in the various religious and charitable movements of his day, and contributed freely to their support.

The original Indian name of the territory, embraced in the town of Shelburne, was "Quabbin." On the 30th of June, 1732, the General Court granted seven townships of land, six miles square each, to the descendants of the soldiers who destroyed the Narraganset fort, on the 19th of Dec., 1675. The number of soldiers was 840. This gave a township of six miles square to each 120 soldiers. These townships were granted on condition that each township should settle at least 60 families on its territory within seven years after the grant, settle a learned Orthodox minister, and lay out a lot of land for him and one for the school. If these conditions were not complied with the grant was to be void. On the 6th of June, 1733, the proprietors met on Boston Common, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when they voted that the grantees should be divided into seven societies, one township to be given to each society. Narraganset township No. 4 was first laid out in New Hampshire, but the committee reported that it was not fit for a settlement. Accordingly, on the 14th of Jan., 1737, the General Court granted to the proprietors of No. 4 the territory of Quabbin in exchange for the New Hampshire township. After surveying Quabbin, it was found to contain considerably less than six miles square. So the Court granted a tract of land lying west of, and adjoining to, Hatfield, sufficient to make up the full amount of territory to which the grantees were entitled. This tract is now embraced within the boundaries of Chesterfield. The territory of Shelburne was originally included in Deerfield, and was at first called "The Deerfield Pasture," and afterward "Deerfield North West." It began to be settled not far from 1756. The first two settlements were made near Shelburne Falls, by families from Deerfield. The early settlers were soon obliged to retire, on account of the French and Indian war. The first permanent settlements are supposed to have been made about 1760. Among the first settlers was Ebenezer Fisk. The town was incorporated June 21, 1768, and was named after Lord Shelburne of England, who, according to the usual tradition, gave the town a bell which, as usual, was lost after it had arrived at Boston. The first town meeting was held Oct. 31, 1768, at the house of Daniel Nims. Capt. John Wells, from Deerfield, was the first town clerk; Ebenezer Fiske, constable. Among the descendants of Ebenezer and Dorcas were seven who entered the Christian ministry, inclusive of Rev. Pliny Fiske, of the Syrian mission, Rev. Dr. Ezra Fiske, of Goshen, N. Y., and Rev. Dr. D. T. Fiske, of Newburyport, Mass.

A valuable cane, supposed to have been brought from England and willed by the Deacon to his second son, has been inherited by a male in this family in every generation since, the last possessor being Ebenezer Fiske of Adrian, Mich. Ebenezer and Dorcas resided in Upton, later moving to Grafton, thence to Hardwick, and finally locating in Shelburne, where he died.

361. WILLIAM FISKE (Ebenezer, William, William, John, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Wenham, Mass., Nov. 30, 1720; m. 25, 1749, Susannah Batchelder, of Wenham. She m. 2d, Benjamin Davis. She was b. 1731; d. 1810.

Joseph Batchelder, the first representative from Wenham (1644), emigrated in 1638, in company with his brothers, Henry and Joshua, who went to Ipswich, and John, who settled with him at Salem. Joseph soon after removed to Wenham, and, according to Dr. Allen, his descendants continue there to this day. Among his children (probably) were Joseph, Mark, David, John and Ebenezer. Ebenezer was constable in 1714, and Mark was one of the five drafted in King Philip's war and perished in the fierce assault upon the fort of the Narragansetts, 1675. David Batchelder, a grandson of Joseph, Sen., by wife Susanna, had sons David, Joseph, Amos, Nehemiah and Abraham, and daughters Mary and Susanna. The latter married William Fiske, Sen., of Amherst. Her brothers Joseph, Amos, and cousins Israel, Josiah and Ebenezer, were Revolutionary soldiers. The name on the records is frequently spelled Batcheller and Bachelor.

David Batchelder made his will Aug. 25, 1759, which was proved Mar. 11, 1766. Wife Susannah to have the Easterly end of the house &c, son David, son Joseph, son Nehemiah—son Abraham—Daughter Mary to have ten shillings &c—Daughter Susannah to have ten shillings to be paid at the end of one year after my decease also my largest Brass Kettle—son Amos to have the whole estate excepting the above legacy, to be executor.

Wm resided in Wenham, Mass., and in 1774 removed to Amherst, N. H., where they settled on a tract of land on the south side of Walnut Hill. He was the executor of his father's will. He was the founder of the Amherst, N. H., branch. He resided at the ancient homestead in Wenham, where probably his father, himself and his own children were all born, after the decease or removal of his parents and immediate relatives. Of himself personally, little is known, except that in his character and principles he was a staunch Puritan. His father and grandfather were successively deacons in the original Wenham church for upwards of seventy years; the same ancient church of which Rev. John Fiske himself was the original pastor. More remotely still the family had been identified with that great reformatory struggle in England, from which were fathered the rich fruits for a purer faith and constitutional liberty.

Having been appointed sole executor of his will and principal heir by Deacon Ebenezer Fiske, William Fiske remained in Wenham long enough to settle the estate and dispose of the homestead and various tracts of land, when (in 1773 or 4) he removed to Amherst, N. H., with his wife Susanna, nine children and two daughters-in-law, Mary Bragg, the wife of their son Jonathan and Eunice Nourse, wife of their son William. The father, William, Sen., purchased a tract of land in Amherst. The situation was cozy, well sheltered and watered, but the country then was mostly a wilderness and the land rough, rocky and heavily timbered, requiring immense labor and sturdy courage to clear it off. The fatigue and exposure incidental to establishing the new home under such straitened circumstances, doubtless bore hard on all the members of the family, and must have contributed directly to the father's death, as he lived but a few years after. But they were glad to get away from the disturbances then thickening along the seaboard, and in hopes that the distance from the seat of impending (British) war, would in a measure secure them from its horrors that are attended with every war, its privations and hardships.

Mr. Fiske lived to see his country proclaimed free and independent and his family settled in comparative comfort, and died in 1777, in the 82d year of his age. His widow Susanna was appointed administratrix of his estate June 10, 1777. His widow, surviving many years, married again and died about 1810 at quite an advanced age. Of their sons and daughters all except Anne married, and she and two others excepted William and David remained in Amherst, and settled elsewhere. Some of them raised large families and all more or less prospered in circumstances and the good esteem of their fellow-citizens. Of them all it is believed that it may be truly said that their lives were blameless and their end calm and full of peace.

During the French and Indian conflict we find the names of some of the Boxford men who were in the service. They were in the company of Capt. Joseph Frye, of Andover, doing service at Scarborough. The time of service of Samuel Fiske was from April 27, 1748, to May 1, 1749. His wife was sick while he was serving as soldier in the French and Indian war. Mrs. Fiske had probably gone to the fort to help take care of the sick, and fell a victim to the disorder. The winter was close upon them, and considerable snow having already fallen, the soldiers proceeded to Ticonderoga, where they encamped over night and hurried on their homeward way next morning. They marched in as direct a line as possible, through Vermont and New Hampshire, and reached home just before the first of December.

He was born in Watertown, Mass., and while a young man emigrated to the colony of Connecticut and located in Windham, one of the oldest places in that state, where he ever after resided. Eli C. Fisk, of Havanna, Ill., in writing in relation to his ancestor said: "Our ancestor dropped the final e from the family name and settled first in Mass., and when Hooker went to Conn. in 1636 he accompanied him. Many of his descendants still remain in Conn., but in the early days some went into Rhode Island. Hence the early Conn. and R. I. Fisks dropped the final vowel from their names. In the fall of 1867 or spring of 1868 James Fisk (one of my father's brothers) of Omro, Wis., paid me a visit; he also told me the same story in respect to our ancestors being one of Hooker's party and that he was the person that dropped the final e of the family name. Also my father told me the same, and it came in this way. I received a letter from Stephen Fisk (another brother of my father) of Wales, Mass., who lived on the old homestead there that signed the letter e to his son's name. Both of my parents said it did not belong there, and that the Fisk that emigrated to Windham, Conn., with Hooker dropped it, and none of the family had ever assumed it since. Now you have my authority for my statement."

He was a native of Sudbury, but early was a resident of Holden. He was one of the prominent men in the town and for years, from Mar. 31, 1762, was deacon of the church. Among papers belonging to the Rev. Mr. Avery, pastor of the church, I have found a small memorandum book, which contains some entries of peculiar interest. The book bears date 1782. That was a period of great distress among the people. The war had been long. Money was scarce, and it was with some difficulty that Mr. Avery received his annual salary. His parishioners, however, were disposed to share with their pastor, the good things of life. "Memorandum of gifts received." "Of Deacon Hubbard, a piece of beef; a pail of soap; a loaf of bread; a few candles; two quarts of milk; a cheese, and four pounds of butter." "Of Mr. Abbott, a piece of beef and of pork; also a spare-rib; three candles; some malt and a piece of bread, also two wash tubs and thirty nails, and a few hops." "Of Lieut. Hubbard, a piece of beef, a cheese and some malt." "Of Mr. Ebn. Estabrook, a leg of pork." "Of Deacon Fiske, a piece of beef, Jan. 5th."

The ladies of that day were equally thoughtful in regard to the wants of the Parish Priest. "Of Mrs. Benj. Flagg, a cheese." "Of Mrs. Fiske, a lb. of combed flax." "Of Mrs. Elisha Hubbard, some flax."

David Fiske was town clerk 1783-6-8-9; selectman, 1761-2-9-71-77-78-83; assessor, 1767-9-71-7-8-83-5-7-8. When the census of the town was taken in 1773 his family consisted of eight persons. He served in the local militia company as private before and during the Revolutionary War.

After Mr. Cotton's dismissal he removed to Plymouth, Mass., where he d. Nov. 27, 1768, ae. 57 years. Mrs. Cotton survived him, and was married to Mr. Jonathan Gilman of Exeter.

To show how little one knows of their ancestors I give this. A great-grandson of Dr. Fiske in writing to the compiler in 1896 says: "Our branch of the Fisk family, unfortunately, I have been unable to trace back beyond the landing in New York about 1781. My great-grandfather was a physician, evidently from a prominent English family. The place from which, and the date of his departure from England, we cannot discover, nor do we know his name, as he died on the passage over. He was a widower with three small children, but his mother attended him on the passage. The names of the three orphan children who landed in New York about 1781, under the care of their grandmother, were: Ebenezer Fisk, Isabella Fisk and Cotton Fisk. The evidence that our great-grandfather came from a wealthy family in England is supposed from the fact that among his effects, landing in New York, which my grandfather had, was a great chest containing a costly wardrobe, a number of velvet suits, etc., a tortoise shell jewel box with many jewels, and his medical and surgical instruments. This jewel case is now in the possession of Cotton N. Fisk, at Abbotsford, P. Q., Canada."

Jonathan Fisk, the oldest Fisk of this branch, lived three miles from Schuylerville on the Hudson, Saratoga County, New York, in a log house. He was born in Rhode Island, but whether all his children were born there it cannot be ascertained. It has been stated that all of this family of twelve children except one lived over 70 years, and that the exception was not a natural death. During the Revolutionary War he served in the Connecticut line. Soon after the war he moved to New York State with his family. On Mar. 11, 1820, the government granted him a pension, and he was 77 years of age. This would make his birth in 1743. He d. Dec. 22, 1816; res. Rhode Island and Schuylerville, N. Y.

Lydia Gould of Topsfield had a brother, John Gould, who lived in that town. Nathaniel and wife owned the covenant of the church in Topsfield, where most of their children's baptisms are recorded; but the births of Ruth, John, and first Lydia are recorded on the records of Danvers. 885. i. EZRA, b. Jan. 10, 1785; m. ——— Cummins; graduated at Williams College in 1809; studied theology under Rev. Dr. Packard, of Shelburne, and was ordained as an Evangelist in 1810. He preached as a missionary in Georgia for two or three years, and there he married a daughter of the venerable Dr. Francis Cummins. In 1813 he was permanently settled in the ministry at Goshen, N. Y., where he sustained a beloved pastoral relation with his people for upward of twenty years, when he was compelled, by an affection of the lungs, to intermit his labors, and seek relief by a winter's residence at the South. During his absence he was appointed to but declined the office of General Agent of and elected Professor of Ecclesiastical History and Church Government, in the Western Theological Seminary in Pennsylvania, which position, upon his return north, he accepted. On the 4th of November, 1833, while on the way to his new field of labor, he was taken suddenly and fatally ill, at Philadelphia, just after the close of an impressive discourse, Sabbath evening, from the text (Col. i. 12) "Giving thanks," etc. Dr. Ezra Fiske was moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly, in 1833; was long a director of Princeton Theological Seminary, and from 1823 to 1833 was a trustee of Williams College. He received his doctorate from Hamilton College, and was highly esteemed for his ripe scholarship, for the acumen and strength of his mind, and for his Christian integrity. He was the author of several published sermons and a valuable series of essays on Mental Science. Few men were better read in the Hebrew and Classics, and in the realm of Mental Philosophy he had no superiors in his church. As a preacher he was always master of his theme and audience. His style was logical, polished, always forcible, and at times impassioned; his cloquence, the rich overflow of a well-stored mind sanctified by grace. He labored to win souls, not to himself but to Christ, and not many have had more seals to

- their ministry. Nearly six hundred sound and permanent conversions were the fruits of his devoted labors. In his discourses he was accustomed to address both the understanding and the feelings, the reason and the passions of men. To a personal dignity and nobleness of manner, he added a purity of purpose, sweetness of temper and benignity of heart irresistibly fascinating. No one ever doubted his piety, his sincerity or devotion; and he lived in Goshen twenty years without making a personal enemy, and departed thence universally regretted and beloved. He d. in 1833, leaving no children behind him.

He was graduated at Middlebury College in 1814, and at Andover Theological Seminary in 1818. He was appointed, with Levi Parsons, by the American board, to the Palestine Mission, in 1818, and sailed from Boston for Smyrna, Nov. 3, 1819. On his arrival in Smyrna, he spent some time in perfecting his knowledge of the oriental languages, and then traveled through Egypt, Arabia, Palestine and Syria, preaching, holding conference meetings and distributing copies of the Bible. He resided at various times in Jerusalem, Damascus, Antioch, Alexandria and Beyrut where he died. After traveling extensively in Greece, Egypt, Palestine and Syria, he joined, in May, 1825, the mission already established at Beyrut, and died there of fever in the following October. Mr. Fisk was eminently fitted to be a missionary in the east, as he preached in Italian, French, Greek and Arabic. On the day of his death, he completed an "English and Arabic dictionary," and wrote numerous papers for the "Missionary Herald." A life of Pliny Fisk was published by Alvin Bond (Boston, 1828).

Whitney was born on the farm, owned and occupied by him till his death, about one mile north of Wadham's Mills. His father, John Whitney, was one of the pioneers who settled that region early in the present century, coming about 1808. Among these settlers were Benjamin Whitney and Daniel Safford, who married Sally Whitney. John was a shoemaker by trade. He was one of the pioneers in the temperance cause, and his house, still standing, was the first building in that region raised without intoxicating liquor (1829). He, with others, responded to the call for the militia in 1812-14, but arrived at Plattsburg too late to participate in the fight. Taken away in the prime of life, 1834, he left an honored name to his family. After the death of his father, John Russell Whitney was obliged to assume the care of the home, and lived with his widowed mother several years. He was married, Mar. 3, 1840, to Elmina E. Fisk, daughter of Dea. Moses Fisk, of Waitsfield, Vt. Having been deprived of educational privileges in his younger days, he was determined to give his family every possible advantage, often making great sacrifices to secure school privileges to his children; for several winters he had a family school. He was deeply interested in the Congregational church at Wadham's Mills, of which he became a member at the early age of fourteen. He was elected deacon about 1863, to fill a vacancy caused by the death of the senior deacon, and held this office till his death in 1880. He was especially active in all church affairs, and did much for the maintenance of public service. Enjoying the advantages provided for them, his children sought to improve themselves, and have all honored the name and memory of their parents. Dea. Whitney passed away after a severe and painful illness of heart disease. He d. July 23, 1880; res. Wadham's Mills, N. Y. Ch.: 1, Elizabeth Hannah, b. Jan. 11, 1841; d. 563. JUDGE JONATHAN FISKE (William, Ebenezer, William, William, John, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Wenham, Mass., May 1, 1751; m. Nov. 26, 1772, Mrs. Mary Bragg, b. 1752, d. 1826. Jonathan Fiske, the eldest son of William Fiske, Sr., of Amherst, established himself in the northwest parish of that town, since known as Mt. Vernon. After a few years he removed thence to Francestown, N. H., where he resided several years, and where his younger children were born. In 1790 he was chosen deacon of the Congregational church in Francestown and officiated in that capacity until 1794, when in September he removed to Williamstown, Vt., where he seems to have in time acquired popularity and social influence, to have been again elected deacon and to various other offices, which he filled to the general satisfaction of his constituents.

A correspondent writes: "Judge Fiske was a justice of the peace and town clerk in Williamstown from my earliest recollection until a brief period before his death, and as such made public all the marriages, and did most of the marrying. He represented that town in the state legislature, I think, over twenty years in succession, and afterward at various times. He was also judge of probate at an early date, and continued in that office until his sight failed and until too old and otherwise infirm to discharge its duties. He was also a deacon in the Congregational church at Williamstown further back than I can remember, and when he died his mantle fell on two of his worthy sons now living." From a file of the Wenham records it appears that Judge Jonathan Fiske was married to Mrs. Mary Bragg by Rev. Joseph Swain in Dec., 1772. They were the parents of twelve children, eight sons and five daughters, all of whom except one matured, married, and had families, and all excepting three lived to be over seventy years of age. Their grandchildren number upward of seventy, fifty-three of whom are still living (1867), including the fourth generation. Their living descendants will probably reach one hundred souls. Judge Fiske, after living to see his children all married and comfortably settled in life, died in 1825—his wife the following year—both at the age of seventy-four. Their closing days were spent with their son, Samuel, who then resided in Berlin, Vt., and after their deaths their remains were taken to Northfield for burial. The sons, Nathaniel, William, John, Samuel, and daughters Elizabeth and Anna were married by their father in Williamstown, where most of the family appear to have originally settled. Some of them afterward removed to Northfield, where a number of their descendants yet remain. Amherst, N. H., is situated in Hillsborough County, forty-seven miles from Boston and twenty-eight from Concord, the state capital. The town had its origin in a grant of the general court of Massachusetts to the surviving officers and soldiers of the Narragansett war and to the posterity of those now living. The claimants had seven towns awarded them. Amherst was principally settled by people from Wenham and adjoining towns and incorporated in 1760. In 1771 Amherst became the shire town of Hillsborough County, and after many years was one of the most flourishing villages in the state. Its residents contained many people who later attained prominence in the state and nation, among the number being President Franklin Pierce, Horace Greeley and Daniel Webster.

Mary Worthington married at Northfield Moses Lane, a farmer, May 2, 1833. She resided in Northfield. Rhoda Worthington married, in Northfield, Gilman Cummings, a farmer, at Metuchen, N. J. They had three children, Elvira, George T. (was a Union soldier) and Daniel. Daniel Worthington, Jr., married, at Northfield, Miss Ann Paine, a teacher, in May, 1835. They had one child, Frances, born in 1837. He resided in Chicago, Ill. His daughter Frances, married a Mr. Hall. They had three or four children. Rev. David Worthington in early life identified himself with the M. E. Church, and at the early age of twenty-two entered upon the work of the ministry. His labors in this calling were mostly confined to the limits of the Iowa conference, where his zeal and talents soon placed him in the front rank of the clergy of that state. Several years since Mr. Worthington received the appointment of presiding elder for Mt. Pleasant district, and was continued in that position until his death, by consumption, which took place in Mar., 1866. A sound preacher, and a devoted evangelist, he went to his grave according to his wish with the harness on. Mr. Worthington was twice married, and left four children by his first wife, Arinda Lee, the eldest of whom, Jason, died while in the service of his country during the late war. Theodore Worthington was a farmer and lived in Oconomowoc, Wis., and had a family.

565. HON. WILLIAM FISKE (William, Ebenezer, William, William, John, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Wenham, Mass., Apr. 20, 1755; m. Oct. 28, 1773, Eunice Nourse, b. May 2, 1752, d. Mar. 13, 1819; m. 2d. Nov. 28, 1819, Hannah Walker of Concord, N. H.; d. Dec. 10, 1841. Deacon Francis Nourse of Danvers, Mass., whose eldest daughter, Eunice, and granddaughters Abigail and Harriet Nourse, married Amherst Fiskes, was a lineal descendant of Francis and Rebecca Nourse, original settlers in Salem, Mass. Francis Nourse died in 1695, aged 77 years; his wife, Rebecca, July 19, 1692—one of the sad victims of the Salem witchcraft. The jury—Capt. Thomas Fiske, foreman—“were compelled to convict, against their better judgment and belief, through the singular infatuation and perversity of the judges.” In Apr., 1779, Mr. Fiske located himself and wife on a farm situated on the turnpike leading from Amherst village to Bedford, and for some years occupied a small tolling house. His farm was limited in extent and his land rough and rocky. Mr. Fiske and wife became members of the Congregational Church in Amherst, Nov. 6, 1776, and lived exemplary Christian lives to the day of their death. Besides having for some years command of the military company, Mr. Fiske was in Mar., 1792, elected town clerk of Amherst and re-elected every year in succession for twenty years. In Mar., 1794, he was chosen chairman of the board of selectmen of Amherst and held that office till 1815, twenty-one consecutive years. He was chosen representative of the town at the general court in 1798-99, 1804-5-6-7-8-9. He was elected state senator for the Seventh senatorial district in 1810-11-12-13. He was then appointed one of the justices of the court of common pleas of the county of Hillsborough, but a remodeling of the courts by the state soon after by legislature (a political change occurring in that body), by which all the judges were displaced to make room for new favorites, prevented his accepting the appointment. In 1815 he was appointed United States Assessor of direct taxes for the county of Hillsborough. In 1824 he was chosen one of the electors of president and vice-president, and cast his vote for John Quincy Adams. Having attained the good old age of three score and ten, he then retired from public life, and spent the remainder of his days in the quiet of home where he died. He was twice married. His first wife was Eunice Nourse and the mother of his children. A few years after he married Miss Hannah, daughter of James Walker, Esq., of Concord, N. H., but had no children by her. In personal appearance Mr. Fiske was rather commanding, being six feet in height and well proportioned. His features were strongly molded and intellectual. Of Puritan descent, he was in principles, habits and manners a Puritan of the strictest sect, rendered stricter perhaps by his severe and excessive labors. In his family and on his farm his right to rule no subordinate ever presumed to question. By his strict yet judicious exercise of authority his children were trained to admirable obedience. The homestead in which Hon. William Fiske resided was erected in 1795, and was ranked among the finest and most desirable in that section. It is located two and a half miles northeasterly from Amherst on the old stage road between that place and Manchester and Concord. To the south lies Walnut Hill, 200 feet high, to the north Chestnut Hills flanking them on the right and left and at a distance of from three to five miles tower the granite peaks of "Joe English" and "Uncanconucks" and southeast Babboosack Pond. Although but sixteen years of age at the commencement of the American Revolution, he enlisted, and continued fighting the battles of his country until the close of the war. In Jan. (16th), 1783, he married Polly Hosea, who was born in Plymouth, Mass., April 30, 1764.

He enlisted at the age of eighteen for one year, and was stationed first at Newcastle, N. H. In the fall of 1786 he was m. to Edith Tay of Chelsea, Mass., and settled in Merrimack, N. H. They both united with the Congregational Church. They had five children. In April, 1801, Mr. Fiske removed to Amherst and settled on a farm in the eastern part of that town, where he lived a Christian life. Abigail Woodbury, b. March 7, 1766; d. Dec. 9, 1839. Deacon Ebenezer Fiske, fourth son of William and Susanna Fiske, removed from Wenham to Amherst with his father when but eleven years of age, and resided in that place until his majority. Owing to the reduced circumstances of the family, caused by the bankruptcies of his father's brother-in-law (White), for whom his father had largely endorsed, Eben lost the opportunity for enjoying educational privileges. He, however, inherited a remarkable physical frame and strong intellect, and possessed good sterling qualities and an indomitable will. Many and remarkable are the feats of strength recorded of him when in the prime of his powers, while his excellent common sense and well-known integrity made him a counselor among his fellow townsmen in Mt. Vernon, where he subsequently resided and for many years filled various local offices. In 1782 he married Abigail Woodbury, born in Beverly, Mass., March 7, 1766, and second daughter of James Woodbury of Mt. Vernon, N. H., near Amherst, to which place he at once removed. Miss Woodbury was of an excellent family, and a relative of Judge Levi Woodbury of Portsmouth, N. H., a farmer of the state and secretary of the United States Treasury under President Jackson. Mr. Fiske, like the most of his ancestors, was blessed with a large family, six sons and six daughters, all of whom, except a son who died in infancy, lived to mature age.

All of these except the two last were born in Mt. Vernon. After residing for some years in this place, Mr. Fiske removed to Warner, N. H., where he purchased a farm, and later located on a farm on the "Wilmot Flat" in Wilmot, N. H. Later in life he moved to the hills in the northwestern part of the town, called North Wilmot, and near where a meeting house afterward stood. Here he and the wife of his youth grew old together, sustained and cheered by the consolations of the gospel, and by the tender love and care of their son, Calvin, who, with most filial affection, watched over and cared for them to the day of their death. Ebenezer Fiske was a man of decided and conscientious and fixed and exemplary principles, and the resolute energy and courage that always rises superior to the difficulties of the occasion. During the most of his life he was a member and deacon of the Congregational Church. He d. May 8, 1838; res. Wilmot, N. H.

Ephraim Fisk was born in Scituate, R. I. He early removed to Killingly, Conn., where he afterward resided. He was a prominent citizen, deacon for a number of terms, and held a number of important offices, and was respected and esteemed in the community where he lived. He was married twice. By his first wife he had six children, four being born at one time. The children all lived, but the mother died. By his second wife, ten children. He died above 80 years old, greatly respected; he was a man of superior physical and mental abilities, and like his brother Isaac, was known as a peacemaker in society.

Upon the alarm following the capture of Fort William Henry by Montcalm, four volunteer companies marched from Windham County commanded by Abner Baker, Ashford; John Carpenter, Woodstock; Isaac Coit, Plainfield; John Grosvenor, Pomfret. These volunteers were mostly men advanced in life, the fathers of the towns, showing that most of the men were already in service. Among the number was Ephraim Fiske.

624. JUDGE ISAAC FISKE (Joseph, Samuel, Joseph, William, John, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Johnston, R. I., June 15, 1757; m. there in 1775, Marcy Fenner, dau. of Richard, b. Feb. 24, 1758, d. July 7, 1820.

He was born on the old homestead in Johnston, R. I., and received an excellent education for those early days. Before he had obtained his majority he enlisted in the Continental Army under Gen. Greene, of Rhode Island. He was stationed at Prospect Hill in Cambridge, not far from Bunker Hill in Charlestown. His grandson, Geo. R. Fiske, Esq., of Roxbury, has two letters of his written the time he was in the army. One is dated Sept. 3, 1775, and the other Oct. 26, 1775, which he sent to his father, Joseph Fiske.

This is the inventory of his estate: 1824, Aug 14 Inventory of Isaac Fiske $1303.40 viz. carding machine, turning lath, linen wheel, wooden wheel, quilt wheel, cash $38.50, silver watch, cooper's tools, blacksmith's tools, pepper mill, coffee mill, white horse, 2 cows, 1 heifer, chaise, writing desk, 27 stacks rye, 4 stacks clover, clover in barn, $100. It is evident that he left home against the will of his parents, or certainly not with their approval, for he says he will not enlist again when his time is up. He was then 18 yrs. old, and the letters are very pathetic, showing the lack of almost everything among the troops, especially ammunition. I have also another letter of his written five years later, when he was very active in religious matters, probably had become a member of the Society of Friends, which he certainly was later on. In later life he was always called Judge Fiske; twenty years Judge of Probate and later Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, and the high estimation in which he was held by his neighbors. "My father once took me to the graves of his father and mother, when I was a lad of about ten years, and I well remember with what great respect he spoke of his father and mother."

He d. June 17, 1824; res. Johnston, R. I.

June 23, 1723, a precinct was erected, extending three miles into Worcester, three into Oxford, three into Leicester, and one mile and a half into Sutton, measured from the place designated for the new meeting house, along the roads then traveled. This district, which was denominated the South Parish of Worcester, was incorporated April 10, 1778, as the town of Ward, receiving its name from Artemus Ward, Esq., a brave general of the Revolution, member of the council of the Provincial Congress, judge of the County Courts, and representative in Congress. About thirty families were thus separated from Worcester. The boundaries of the parish and new town were nearly, though not precisely, coincident. The act provided that certain individuals included by the latter, but not within the limits of the former, might retain their relations to the towns of their original settlement, until it was their pleasure to express in writing, intention to unite with the new corporation. Ten persons by this exception were permitted to continue their former connections, and among this number was Jonathan Fiske.

He d. in Worcester and was buried there Jan. 8, 1781; res. Worcester and Ward, Mass.

639½. DANIEL FISK (John, John, John, Nathaniel, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Waltham, Mass., about 1730; m. Sarah Kendall of Lexington, b. 1743; d. in Wendall Jan. 16, 1788. Daniel was born in Waltham, married his wife there, and at least four of his children were born there. He probably moved to Wendall not far from 1772-75. There is no record of his joining the church there, but he probably did. The pastor of the Congregational Church there, Rev. J. C. Wightman, under date of July 3, 1896, sends the following: "I find no record of Mr. Fisk or his wife joining the church, but I find the following: October 2nd, 1785, baptized four children of Daniel Fisk and wife, their names Abijah, Amos, Moses & Lydia.

"January 16th, 1788, Buried Sarah wife of Daniel Fisk in the 45th year of her age.

"November 30th, 1799. Daniel Fisk aged 69 he died Thanksgiving Day the 28th; going to public worship he was seized with a pain in his stomach, he had strength to return, and leave his body in his own house.

"I think, however, this which has been recorded leaves no doubt but that he was a member of the church, as it has not been customary to baptize children of those outside the church. Neither would there be any likelihood of the records of his wife's death, nor of his own."

In 1790, Daniel Fisk of Wendell conveyed land in Wendell. In 1792, Daniel Fisk of New Salem had land in Wendell conveyed to him. In 1793, Daniel Fisk of Deerfield conveyed land in Deerfield. In 1794, Daniel Fisk 3d of Wendell had land in Wendell conveyed to him. In 1798, Daniel of Wendell conveyed land in Wendell.

These are the earliest records on the Franklin County Registry of Deeds. Still earlier records of that county are in Springfield, where, perhaps, might find something more of Daniel Fisk. He d. Nov. 30, 1799, in Wendall; res. Wendall, Mass.

646. CAPT. ASA FISK (David, John, John, Nathaniel, Nathaniel, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Windham, Conn., May 26, 1733; m. there Mar. 19, 1755, Elisabeth Knight of Norwich, Conn., dau. of Joseph and Elizabeth (Tracy) Knight. She d. Mar. 6, 1818. Capt. Asa Fisk emigrated to Wales from Hampton, Conn., thereafter abode and died there; when first he came or soon after he acquired the ownership of the premises constituting and connecting with the "Oliver Wales Tavern Stand." There he dwelt, and for some time kept an inn or house of public entertainment. Subsequently he disposed of that estate and purchased a large tract of land in the southern part of the town, upon which he established and through after life maintained his family home. That tract was upon the elevated ground or high land situated a little distance off the direct road to Stafford in our approachment of Stafford line. That elevation received from him the significant name of Fisk Hill. His old premises, or rather the central and main part thereof, are now owned by Moses Davis, and dwelt upon by him, and derive from him their modern name of Davis Place. He possessed much strength and penetration of mind, solidity of judgment and inflexibility of purpose mixed up with some of the spirit of domination and arbitrariness. As an agriculturist he was judicious, skillful, thoroughgoing. As a townsman, he was prominent, conspicuous, influential. As a military officer, he was manly and commanding in his mien, well informed in tactics, resolute and efficient in discipline. One occurrence in his life opened a doorway through which to question his patriotism: In the time of "Shay's war" he took sides with the party opposed to the government and was appointed a captaincy in the opposing and rebelling forces, but as he had enough of that "better part of valor," discretion, to restrain him from the commission of any overt act of rebellion, he finally got out of the scrape without being overwhelmed or greatly damaged thereby. All things considered, Capt. Fisk must be set down as a very good man for this town. Let us not be found undervaluing his virtue, says the Wales historian: "Elizabeth, Fidelity is compelling us to say her virtues were many and must be unforget." Another correspondent says: He kept a country store on the hill where he lived, and that he owned in his farm 400 acres, and that Shay's war cost him considerable property. Also that he sent two sons, aged 14 and 16, to the Revolutionary war. My grandfather Elisha was one. Both were drummers. The company that they were in arrived at Cornwallis surrender one hour after the surrender. He was lieutenant in the company of minute men which marched to the Lexington alarm, and was afterward and for some time captain in the Continental army. His gravestone is as follows:

He was born in Watertown, and with his brother, Lieut. Henry, became an early resident and one of the first proprietors of Sturbridge; was elected deacon of the church and held many town offices, selectman, assessor, etc. His will is dated Mar. 14, 1778, and is on record in the Worcester Probate office (see Barbour Hist. Collections of Massachusetts).

Henry and Daniel Fisk went from Watertown, Mass., to New Medfield, later called Sturbridge, Mass., and commenced a settlement on what is now called Fisk-hill, in the year 1731. While clearing in the timber one day they heard some one chopping on the other side of the Quinnebog river. They did not know of any white man being near them, so they went to the bank of the river and shouted until a man replied and came to the opposite bank and said his name was Hyde. Daniel Fisk proposed to make a bridge so they could cross over and become acquainted, so Fisk and Hyde felled a tree from each bank of the river and the tops locked together so that persons could cross, for a number of years, and was therefore of great convenience to the people. When high water came this bridge would stir, or move down the river, therefore when they named the town they named it Sturbridge, after the above described bridge. Two joining towns are called North-bridge and Southbridge. The Fisks also named Fiskhill, Fiskdale and Fiskfac-tories, all of which they once owned and occupied.

Daniel Fisk kept a record of Remarkable Events, and in that book, among others, is found: Remarkable Dark Day May 10th 1780—Baptist Meeting House raised on Fiskhill, Sturbridge, Mass., June 3d, 1784—Terrible Hurricane Aug. 23d 1786—Shase's Insurrection in Mass. 1787—Very Hard Frost May 17, 1774. Was later admitted to the bar there and at once began the practice of his profession. In the war of 1812 he served as First Lieutenant and achieved distinction by capturing the Canadian forces, being the first prisoners taken on land, and their flag was the first captured in the war. At the close of the war he had attained the rank of Captain, and returned to the practice of the law. He held minor political city offices, was at one time editor of the "Troy Budget." In 1821 he was appointed Adj. Gen. of the State Militia by Gov. Van Buren. In 1823 he was comptroller of the State, and in 1829 he was appointed one of the associate justices of the Supreme Court of New York. One of the most important cases before him was the trial of the alleged murderers of William Morgan, of anti-masonic fame. He continued on the bench until 1831, when he was elected to the United States Senate. He resigned in 1833 to become Governor of the State of New York, which office he held for three terms, until 1839. In 1840 he was appointed by President Van Buren one of the commissioners to decide upon the claims against the government of Mexico. Upon the election of James K. Polk as President, he was appointed Secretary of War, which position he filled with great credit. President Pierce selected him as Secretary of State. At the close of Pierce's administration he returned to private life, and four months afterward he was found dead one evening in his library with an open volume before him. Mr. Marcy had the reputation of being a shrewd politician and tactician, and probably has never been surpassed in this respect by any one in New York except Martin Van Buren. He was regarded among his countrymen of all parties as a statesman of the highest order of administrative and diplomatic ability.

683. STEPHEN FISK (William, Nathan, Nathan, Nathaniel, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Sept. 14, 1714; bap. Weston, Mass., Apr. 17, 1715; m. at Willington, Conn., Aug. 5, 1742, Prudence Farley; m. 2d, (published) June 26, 1758, Anna (Bradish) Green, of Hardwick. He was baptized in Weston, Mass., with his brother. His father and his mother, whose maiden name was Eunice Jennings, moved to Willington, Conn., where her brother, Stephen Jennings, had previously located on a large tract of land. Stephen married his first wife in Connecticut, and resided in Willington, where he was town clerk for nine years, from 1744 to 1753 inclusive. After her death he married a second wife in Hardwick, Mass., and located in Greenwich, Mass., where he died. He resided in that part now Enfield, and was town clerk from 1758 to 1763.

Rev. Lucius R. Paige, of Cambridgeport, Mass., who wrote the History of Hardwick, Mass., writes, "on page 386 of that work it is suggested that Annie Green may have been the widow of John Green, and the mother of two children by him." John Green was the son of Thomas, and was born in Shrewsbury, Mass., Mar. 2, 1726. He m. Anna Bradish Dec. 7, 1751. She was b. June 6, 1729, the dau. of Dea. James and Damaris (Rice) Bradish (see Conant Genealogy, Hist. of Hardwick and Hist. of Shrewsbury). Stephen and his second wife were married in Hardwick, he of Greenwich and she of that town in Worcester County. There is a tradition in the family that Stephen's widow was married to a Mr. Chase, for her second husband. This, I think, is incorrect, for at Warwick, Mass., Jan. 16, 1770, the intention of marriage of Ezra Conant and Anna Fisk (Stephen's widow) was published. She died in Vermont, and lived to be nearly 100 years old.

A descendant in writing of her says this: "My grandfather Fisks Mother, died in Claremont N. H. over one hundred years old. Dont know the date, but have heard my Father say so. When she was well along in life, and a widow, she married Mr Chase then a widower, and an old man. Father of Bishop Philemon Chase, Dudley Chase, U. S. Senator from Vt. and Ithamar Chase, who was father of Salmon B. Chase, the famous member of Lincolns Cabinet." Ezra Conant married for his first wife in Dudley, Mass., Jan. 1, 1745, Melicent Newell, b. Dec. 10, 1725, d. July, 1769. He married Mrs. Anna Fisk at Warwick. In 1772 Anna Conant, formerly Fisk, guardian of Stephen and James Fisk, sons of Stephen Fisk, late of Greenwich, Mass., in Hampshire County, petitions to sell land of her late husband. (Cheshire Co. Court Records, Ezra Conant, Dec. 7, 1804).

The children of Ezra and Anna were: 1. Anna, b. May 26, 1771; m. Sept. 13, 1791, Charles Conant, at Warwick, Mass. 2. Clark, b. June 23, 1773, at Warwick, Mass. Anna (Green) (Fisk) Conant, when very old, used to ride from Claremont, N. H., horseback, some 50 or 60 miles, to East Randolph, to visit her son Stephen, and always before going home again used to ride on horseback also three or four miles up to Randolph Centre Village, to see Dudley Chase, who lived there. Dudley was uncle to Judge Salmon P. Chase. Another brother of Dudley's was 70 years ago, or more, an Episcopal clergyman, Philemon, having a little wooden church, quite secluded, on the edge of the town of Bethel, some three miles up stream toward West Randolph, from Bethel Village. This Philemon Chase became first Episcopal bishop of Ohio. With him in Ohio lived for awhile his afterward famous nephew, when a boy, Salmon P.

The Hampshire, Mass., probate records show that April 7, 1767, Capt Jeremiah Powers was appointed guardian of Rufus Fisk a minor under 14 years. on July 7, 1767, said Powers resigned his trust for the reason that said Rufus was living in the Colony of Connecticut, on the 7th of April 1767 said Powers was appointed guardian of Olive Fisk and Mary Fisk minors over 14 years old, and on the 6 of November 1764 Anna Fisk was appointed guardian of Stephen Fisk and James Fisk minors under the age of 14 years all said minors are children of Stephen Fisk.

735. DR. JOSEPH FISKE (Joseph, Robert, David, David, Jeffrey, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Lexington, Dec. 25, 1752; m. July 31, 1794, Elizabeth Stone, b. Nov. 13, 1770, d. Mar. 6, 1842. He was a young man at the battle of Lexington, not quite twenty-three years of age. He assisted his father who was also a doctor and whose name was the same, to dress the wounded soldiers on that day. He studied medicine and surgery with his father, and in later years with Dr. John Warren and his son, Surgeon J. C. Warren. He was led by his patriotic spirit to accept the commission of surgeon's mate in Col. Vose in the First Massachusetts of Foot in 1777. He was made full surgeon Apr. 17, 1779, and served in the Continental army seven years. He was present at the surrender of Burgoyne in 1777 and of Cornwallis in 1781, and of other intermediate battles. Rev. A. B. Muzzey in his "Reminiscences of Men of the Revolution," speaks of him: "He was frequently at my father's house and was very agreeable. I drank in greedily his accounts given to my grandfather, who was with him in the company of Capt. John Parker Apr. 19, 1775, and of his experience as a surgeon in the army. It was a time when all shared in the common privations. Gen. Washington would sit down with his highest officers to a small piece of beef with a few potatoes and some hard bread—a single dish of wood or pewter sufficed for a mess, with a horn spoon and tumbler passed around, and the knife was carried in the pocket. Sugar, tea and coffee were unknown luxuries, and if a ration of rum was given out—this was in the dead of winter—the question would be raised "Shall we drink it or put it in our shoes to keep our feet from freezing?" During the pursuit of Cornwallis the soldiers had not decent clothing, and an old cloak, they not having a blanket left, was shared with two other officers. Dr. Fiske would corroborate in my hearing accounts of the need of medicine and comforts for the wounded—wine, spirits and even the ordinary medicine could not be procured. Even after searching miles nothing of the kind could be found except small portions of snake-root, and as for bandages the case was still worse. Nothing of the kind could be found for their supply but to cut up a tent found on the field. He used to relate mirthful stories about the French officers and soldiers around Yorktown. Surgeon Fiske was one of the original founders of the Middlesex Medical Association, afterward and now the Massachusetts Medical Society, one of the original members of the Cincinnati. His son took his place in the society at his death, and after the son's death it reverted to his grandson, who is the eldest. Dr. Fiske was also a member of the Bunker Hill Monument Association. Dr. Fiske practiced his profession nearly forty years in Lexington after the close of the war, and was very skillful in his treatment of the small-pox, and he was among the foremost doctors to make use of vaccination, his old friend, Dr. Benj. Waterhouse, bringing it from Europe, from the discoverer, Jenner. Dr. Fiske held many town offices, having been town clerk and justice of the peace many years.

From the Revolutionary War records it is learned that Joseph Fisk was a second lieutenant in the Continental army from June 1 to Dec. 31, 1776; surgeon's mate June 1, 1777; surgeon Apr. 17, 1779, and served as such to the close of the war. He d. Sept. 25, 1837; res. Lexington, Mass.

He was very well educated for those early days, and by the death of his father, at an early age, was left largely upon his own resources. He visited his brother Cotton on one occasion while the latter was residing in Bolton, Canada. The tradition in the family is that after his visit he started for the west with considerable money in his possession, and that was the last his Canadian relatives ever heard from him. He married his first wife probably in New Hampshire and his children were brought up by her. ISABELLA FISK, b. Aug. 2, 1757; m. Apr. 11, 1776, Gen. Henry Butler, b. Apr. 27, 1754; d. July 20, 1813. She d. Jan. 17, 1808. He served in war of the Revolution. Was Captain of a volunteer company and went to West Point. He was afterwards Major General of the first division of the N. H. militia, which office he held for many years. General Butler was the first postmaster of Nottingham; he was a prominent Mason. He filled many offices of trust and honor in the State and was highly esteemed for his usefulness as a citizen and his integrity as a man. His wife was the dau. of Dr. Ebenezer Fisk of Epping and grand dau. of Rev. Ward Cotton of Boston, the first settled ordained minister in Hampton, N. H. Mrs. Cotton's maiden name was Joanna Rand. After Rev. Cotton's decease she married Capt. Jonathan Gilman of Exeter, and after his death she m. Dea. Ezekiel Morrill of Canterbury, and after his death Dea. Butler until her own death Feb. 25, 1811, aged 93. Rev. Peter Holt of Epping officiated at the funeral. Mrs. Baker, or "Grandmother Baker" as she was called was a lady of remarkable attraction, much personal beauty and ready wit. She never weighed over 100 pounds during her life and it is said never suffered from sickness until at the time of her death. Her talent at entertaining friends and her readiness at repartee are proverbial. At one time during the last year of her life a remark of surprise was made that she had never used spectacles of any kind, her reply was that she "might need them if she lived to be old enough." Jan. 16, 1814, he enlisted as a soldier in the war of 1812 in the company under command of Capt. John Butler, a cousin of his father's. Samuel was soon made First Sergeant and clerk of his company and stationed at Burlington, Vt. While there on duty he was ordered with eighteen men under his command, to detect smugglers who were feeding the army in Canada, and while in the town of Highgate, near the Canada line they met a company of the enemy's infantry from the Dominion escorting owners with a large lot of cattle. A fight ensued in which Sergt. Butler and men were victorious. The British were routed, many cattle taken and driven several miles to a bivouac where the British infantry, re-enforced by cavalry came upon them. The result was the killing of four of Sergt. Butler's men, while he received three mortal wounds and a broken leg; yet he disdained the summons to surrender and with his pistols and sword killed two of the enemy before they could take him. He never surrendered. Though weak and bleeding, the strength of his intellect and the power of his courage so controlled his enemies that, as was afterwards said by one of them. "We were afraid of him after we had him," and another in speaking of him said, "We all acted like cowards before him." He refused to receive any services from the British surgeons and as was said died a few hours after the fight, his intellect all the while being perfectly clear. His body was taken to Burlington and buried. His death was much lamented by officers and men. 8 and 9, Twins, b. June 16, 1793; d. infancy. 10, Ward Cotton, b. Jan. 22, 1895; m. Margaret Anderson of Philadelphia, Pa. Res. there. 3 ch.

Oct. 20, 1814; m. 2d, Nancy Adams of Westford, b. 1785, d. Sept. 6, 1865. Hon. Benjamin Fiske was born in Lexington, Mass., on a farm on the road to Concord, at a point known as "Fiske Hill," where there is now erected a tablet stating that a skirmish was there had between the British and American forces, and the former repulsed. Wm. B. Fiske has often heard his great-grandmother give an account of her flight to the woods on that day, and upon her return to her dwelling she found an Acton man dead at the doorstep and a red coat dead at the well, each having killed the other. Wm. B. at his house in Plainfield, N. J., has an elegant portrait by Frothingham of his great-grandmother, with a panel at the corner picturing her home and showing the two bodies as stated. He was married to Elizabeth Bridge, daughter of Rev. Wm. Bridge of Chelmsford, Mass. She died, and he again married Nancy Adams. He moved to Boston in 1808 and was actively engaged in shipping, his sails whitening every sea, until 1848. In the year 1843 he returned to Lexington where he purchased a large farm on Lowell street, where he died. He was elected an alderman in Boston in 1843, and served as representative from 1833 to 1838. He held a commission as justice and was always considered an upright and exemplary citizen. He d. Soon after his first marriage, and shortly before the Revolutionary war, he moved to Vermont and located in 1768 in Danby. He was a Quaker preacher, and like all others of this particular belief, did not believe in war, and was for peace first, last and all the time. When the colonies had determined to be free and independent and throw off the yoke of British oppression, the Quaker exhorter did not lend his aid or even influence, and stoutly maintained that he would not participate in the war for independence. As a result the town of Danby confiscated his entire property, of which he was possessed of quite a little for those days. He made the statement to the authorities then and there that he would live to be a wealthy man once more; they could kill him if they saw fit, but the day would come when they would be penniless. He moved to Brandon, followed farming, and died in 1816, having amassed a large amount of property. He was grandfather of Hon. Stephen Arnold Douglass. Rev. Nathaniel Fisk was buried on his farm in the family burying ground. The writer had an examination made of the little God's acre, but no monument or headstone marks his last resting place. It was his wish, it is said, not to have any stone or slab at his grave. He d. in 1807; res. Danby and Brandon, Vt.

HON. STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS.

That branch of the Douglas family from which the subject of this sketch is a descendant emigrated from Scotland, and settled at New London, in the province of Connecticut, during the earlier period of our colonial settlements. One of the two brothers who first came to America subsequently removed from New London, and settled in Maryland, on the banks of the Potomac, not very distant from the site of the present city of Washington. His descendants, now very numerous, are to be found in Virginia, the Carolinas, Tennessee, and other southern states. The other brother remained at New London, and his descendants are scattered over New England, New York, Pennsylvania and the northwestern states. Dr. Stephen A. Douglas was born at Stephentown, in Rensselaer County, New York, and when quite a youth removed with his parents to Brandon, Rutland County, Vt., where, after his regular course at Middlebury College, he studied medicine, and became distinguished in his profession. His wife was the daughter of an extensive farmer in Brandon, by whom he had two children—the first a daughter, and the second a son, Stephen A., Jr. On the first of July, 1813, without any previous illness or physical warning, he died suddenly of a disease of the heart. At the very moment of his attack and of his death, he was playing with the daughter at his knees, and holding his son Stephen A. in his arms.

In 1813 the country was at war with Great Britain—had undertaken a war with the most powerful nation in the world; at that time the United States, with an unprotected coast, with an overbearing, and insulting, and powerful enemy menacing both seaboard and frontier; with hostile navies swarming upon the lakes, and commanding every sea where the enterprise of American commerce had unfurled a sail, and veteran armies, fresh from Continental fields of renown, landing on our shores—at that time when the infant republic, trusting in the justice of her cause, had risked everything to preserve the sacred principle that an American citizen, no matter where he might be, who stood upon an American deck, was to be secured, at all hazards, in all the great rights guaranteed to him by the Constitution of his country—while this war was waging, and while the contest between absolute power and popular right was maintained with fire and sword from Detroit to Key West, in the midst of this struggle, on the 23d day of April, 1813, was born Stephen A. Douglas, who forty-one years thereafter became the great champion of that same sacred principle—not, indeed, in behalf of the gallant men who tread the decks of the American fleets, but in behalf of those other and no less gallant heroes—the pioneers of American progress, the founders of American states, the builders of American sovereignties—the people of the American territories.

The grandmothers, maternal and paternal, of Mr. Douglas, were of the name of Arnold, and were both descended from William Arnold, who was one of the associates of Roger Williams in founding the colony of Rhode Island, and whose son was appointed governor of that colony by Charles the second, when he granted the famous charter under which the state continued to be governed until even after the establishment of the American Union, and until the adoption a few years later of the present constitution of Rhode Island. The descendants of Governor Arnold are at this day very numerous in Rhode Island, and, indeed, throughout the whole country.

AN EARLY PICTURE OF HON. STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS.

Immediately after the death of Dr. Douglas, his widow, with her two children, removed from their native village to a farm about three miles in the country, where she resided with her bachelor brother, Mr. Fisk, on their patrimonial estate.

From his earliest childhood, Stephen was raised to a regular course of life, attending the district school during the winter seasons, and working steadily on the farm the residue of each year. When fifteen years of age, finding that a number of his schoolmates of his own years were about to enter the academy to prepare for college, he applied to his uncle, whom he had always been taught to respect as a father for permission and means to enable him to take the same course. This request was made in pursuance of an understanding which he supposed had existed in the family from his earliest recollection, that he was to be educated and sent to college; so strongly was this plan for the future impressed upon his mind, that it had never occurred to him that his uncle's marriage a year previous, and the very recent birth of an heir to his estate, had in the least changed their respective relations; nor had he seen in these events that cloud which was to darken the hitherto bright visions which had stimulated his youthful ambition. An affectionate remonstrance against the folly of abandoning the farm for the uncertainties of a professional life, accompanied by a gentle intimation that he had a family of his own to support, and therefore did not feel able to bear the expense of educating other persons' children, was the response made to the boy's request. Instantly the eyes of young Douglas were opened to his real condition in life. He saw at once that he could not command the means requisite for acquiring a collegiate education without exhausting the only resources upon which his mother and sister must rely; he also saw that if he remained on the farm with his uncle until he became of age, he would then be thrown upon the world without a profession or a trade by which he could sustain them and himself. Realizing the full force of these considerations, and perceiving for the first time that he must rely upon himself for the future, he determined to leave the farm and at once learn a mechanical trade, that being the most promising and certain reliance for the future. Bidding farewell to his mother and sister, he set off on foot to engage personally in the great combat of life; on that same day he walked fourteen miles, and before night was regularly indentured as an apprentice to a cabinet-maker in Middlebury. He worked at his trade with energy and enthusiasm for about two years, the latter part of the time at a shop in Brandon, and gained great proficiency in the art, displaying remarkable mechanical skill; but, in consequence of feeble health, and a frame unable to bear the continued labor of the shop, he was reluctantly compelled to abandon a business in which all his hopes and pride had been centered, and to which he had become sincerely attached. He had often been heard to say, since he had been distinguished in the councils of the nation, that the happiest days of his life had been spent in the workshop, and, had his health and strength been equal to the task, no consideration on earth could have induced him to have abandoned it, either for professional or political pursuits.

He entered the academy of his native town, and commenced a course of classical studies, to which he devoted himself for about twelve months with all that energy and enthusiasm which were a part of his nature.

In the meantime his sister had married Julius N. Granger, Esq., of Ontario County, New York, and shortly afterward his mother was married to Gehazi Granger, Esq., father of Julius, and at the close of his first year at Brandon Academy, young Douglas, at the earnest solicitation of his mother and stepfather, removed with them to their home near Canandaigua, New York. He at once became a student at that place—an institution which for more than half a century has been celebrated for its thorough academical course of studies, and for the large number of eminent professional men and statesmen whose names once appeared on her catalogue.

In December, 1832, he began the study of law; but, finding that his mother would be unable to support him through the long course of legal studies prescribed by the state, he determined upon going to the west, and on the 24th of June, 1833, set out for Cleveland, O., where he was dangerously ill with fever for four months. He then visited Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis and Jacksonville, Ill., but failed to obtain employment. Finding his money exhausted, he walked to Winchester, where he arrived at night with only thirty-seven and a half cents. Here he secured three days' employment as a clerk to an auctioneer at an administrator's sale, and was paid six dollars. During the sale he made so favorable an impression that he at once obtained a school of about forty pupils, whom he taught for three months. During this time he studied law at night, and on Saturdays practiced before justices of the peace.

In March, 1834, he removed to Jacksonville, obtained his license, and began the regular practice of law. Two weeks thereafter he addressed a large Democratic meeting in defense of Gen. Jackson's administration. In a short sketch of his early life written in 1838, from which the foregoing facts have been taken, Mr. Douglas thus spoke of this event: "The excitement was intense, and I was rather severe in my remarks upon the opposition. . . . The next week the 'Patriot,' the organ of the opposition, devoted two entire columns to me and my speech, and continued the same course for two or three successive weeks. The necessary consequence was that I immediately became known to every man in the county, and was placed in such a situation as to be supported by one party and opposed by the other. . . . Within one week thereafter I received for collection demands to the amounts of thousands of dollars from persons I had never seen or heard of. . . . How foolish, how impolitic, the indiscriminate abuse of political opponents whose humble condition or insignificance prevents the possibility of injury, and who may be greatly benefited by the notoriety thus acquired! . . . Indeed, I sincerely doubt whether I owe most to the kind and efficient support of my friends (and no man similarly situated ever had better and truer friends), or to the violent, reckless, and imprudent opposition of my enemies." During the remainder of the canvass Mr. Douglas bore a prominent part, and on the assembling of the legislature, although not yet twenty-two years of age, he was elected attorney-general, an officer who then, in addition to his other duties, rode the metropolitan circuit. His opponent was Gen. John J. Hardin. This office he resigned in December, 1835, having been elected to the lower house of the Legislature, of which he was the youngest member. The mental vigor and capacity he there displayed, in striking contrast with his physical frame, which was then very slight, won for him the title of the "Little Giant," which followed him through life. In 1837 he was appointed register of the land office at Springfield. In 1838 he was the Democratic candidate for Congress; but his opponent was declared elected by a majority of five votes. Over fifty votes cast for Mr. Douglas were rejected by the canvassers because his name was misspelled. In December, 1840, he was appointed secretary of state of Illinois, and in the following February elected a judge of the supreme court. Here his decision of character was shown in the trial of Joseph Smith, the Mormon prophet. A mob had taken possession of the court room, intending to lynch the prisoner, and the officers of the court appeared powerless. In this emergency Judge Douglas saw a bystander idly looking on, whose great strength and desperate courage were well known. Above the shouts of the rioters rose the voice of the judge appointing this man a special officer and directing him to select his deputies and clear the court room. In ten minutes order was restored.

In 1843 Judge Douglas was elected to Congress by a majority of 400, and he was re-elected in 1844 by 1,900 and again in 1846 by over 3,000; but before the term began he was chosen United States senator, and took his seat in the Senate, March 4, 1847. He was re-elected in 1852 and 1858, and had served fourteen years in that body at the time of his death. His last senatorial canvass was remarkable from his joint discussions with Abraham Lincoln. Each was conceded to be the leader of his party and the fittest exponent of its principles, and the election of one or the other to the Senate was the real issue of the contest, which was for members of the Legislature. Mr. Buchanan's administration was understood to be hostile to Mr. Douglas. The result of the election showed a Republican popular majority of 4,000; but the Democrats returned a majority of eight members to the Legislature, which secured Senator Douglas' re-election. In 1852, at the Democratic national convention in Baltimore, he was strongly supported for the presidential nomination, receiving a plurality on the thirtieth ballot. In 1856 he was again a candidate at the Democratic national convention in Cincinnati, his friends throughout the convention controlling more than enough votes to prevent any nomination under the two-thirds rule. On the sixteenth ballot he received 121 votes; but, as he was opposed to the principle of the two-thirds rule, he at once withdrew in favor of Buchanan, who had received a majority, thus securing his nomination. At the Democratic national convention in Charleston in 1860, on the first ballot he received 145½ votes out of 252½ cast. On the twenty-third ballot he received 152½ votes, which was not only a large majority of the votes cast, but also a majority of all those entitled to representation. The convention having adjourned to Baltimore, he received on the first ballot 173½ out of 190½ votes cast. On the second ballot he received 181½ votes of 194½, and his nomination was then made unanimous. The seceding delegates nominated John C. Breckinridge. Abraham Lincoln was the nominee of the Republican party, and John Bell of the Constitutional Union party. Of the electoral votes only twelve were cast for Douglas, although he received 1,375,157 of the popular votes distributed through every state in the Union. Mr. Lincoln received 180 electoral votes and 1,866,352 popular votes. From the age of twenty-one till his death, with the exception of about two years, Mr. Douglas' entire life was devoted to the public service. During his congressional career his name was prominently associated with numerous important measures, many of which were the offspring of his own mind or received its controlling impress. In the House of Representatives he maintained that the title of the United States to the whole of Oregon up to latitude 54 deg. 40 min. N. was "clear and unquestionable." He declared that he "never would, now or hereafter, yield up one inch of Oregon, either to Great Britain or any government." He advocated the policy of giving notice to terminate the joint occupation, of establishing a territorial government over Oregon protected by a sufficient military force, and of putting the country at once in a state of preparation, so that if war should result from the assertion of our just rights we might drive "Great Britain and the last vestiges of royal authority from the continent of North America, and make the United States an ocean-bound republic." In advocating the bill refunding the fine imposed on Gen. Jackson by Judge Hall, he said: "I maintain that, in the exercise of the power of proclaiming martial law, Gen. Jackson did not violate the constitution nor assume to himself any authority not fully authorized and legalized by his position, his duty, and the unavoidable necessity of the case. . . . His power was commensurate with his duty, and he was authorized to use the means essential to its performance. . . . There are exigencies in the history of nations when necessity becomes the paramount law, to which all other considerations must yield." Gen. Jackson personally thanked Mr. Douglas for this speech, and a copy of it was found among Jackson's papers endorsed by him: "This speech constitutes my defense." Mr. Douglas was among the earliest advocates of the annexation of Texas, and, after the treaty for that object had failed in the Senate, he introduced joint resolutions having practically the same effect. As chairman of the committee on territories in 1846, he reported the joint resolution by which Texas was declared to be one of the United States, and he vigorously supported the administration of President Polk in the ensuing war with Mexico. He was for two years chairman of the committee on territories in the House (then its most important committee in view of the slavery question), and became chairman of the same committee in the Senate immediately upon entering that body. This position he held for eleven years, until removed in December, 1858, on account of his opposition to some of the measures of President Buchanan's administration. During this time he reported and carried through the bills organizing the territories of Minnesota, Oregon, New Mexico, Utah, Washington, Kansas and Nebraska, and also those for the admission of the states of Iowa, Wisconsin, California, Minnesota and Oregon.

On the question of slavery in the territories he early took the position, which he consistently maintained, that Congress should not interfere, but that the people of each state and territory should be allowed to regulate their domestic institutions to suit themselves. In accordance with this principle he opposed the Wilmot proviso when it passed the House of Representatives in 1847, and afterward in the Senate when it was offered as an amendment to the bill for the organization of the territory of Oregon. Although opposed to the principles involved in the Missouri compromise, he preferred, as it had been so long acquiesced in, to carry it out in good faith rather than expose the country to renewed sectional agitation; and hence, in August, 1848, he offered an amendment to the Oregon bill, extending the Missouri compromise line to the Pacific coast, thus prohibiting slavery in all the territory north of the parallel of 36 deg. 30 min., and by implication tolerating it south of that line. This amendment was adopted by the Senate by a large majority, receiving the support of every southern and several northern senators, but was defeated in the House by nearly a sectional vote. This action of the House of Representatives, which Mr. Douglas regarded as a practical repudiation of the principle of the Missouri compromise, together with the refusal of the Senate to prohibit slavery in all the territories, gave rise to the sectional agitation of 1849-50, which was temporarily quieted by the legislation known as the "compromise measures of 1850," the most famous of which was the fugitive-slave law (see Clay, Henry, vol. 1, page 644). Mr. Douglas strongly supported these measures, the first four having been originally reported by him from the committee on territories. The two others, including the fugitive-slave law, were added by the committee of thirteen, and the measures were reported back to its chairman, Henry Clay. On his return to Chicago, the city council passed resolutions denouncing him as a traitor, and the measures as violations of the law of God and the Constitution; enjoining the city police to disregard the laws, and urging the citizens not to obey them. The next evening a large meeting of citizens was held, at which it was resolved to "defy death, the dungeon and the grave," in resistance to the execution of the law. Mr. Douglas immediately appeared upon the stand, and announced that on the following evening he would speak at the same place in defence of his course. Accordingly, on Oct. 23, he defended the entire series of measures in a speech in which he defined their principles as follows: "These measures are predicted upon the great fundamental principle that every people ought to possess the right of framing and regulating their own internal concerns and domestic institutions in their own way. . . . These things are all confided by the Constitution to each state to decide for itself, and I know of no reason why the same principle should not be extended to the territories." This constituted the celebrated doctrine of "Popular Sovereignty," sometimes called by its opponents "squatter sovereignty" (see Butts, Isaac). At the close of the speech the meeting unanimously resolved to sustain all the compromise measures, including the fugitive-slave law, and on the following evening the common council repealed their nullifying resolutions by a vote of twelve to one. In December, 1853, Mr. Douglas reported his celebrated bill to organize the territories of Kansas and Nebraska, which formed the issues upon which the Democratic and Republican parties became arrayed against each other. The passage of this bill caused intense excitement in the non-slaveholders' states, and Mr. Douglas, as its author was bitterly denounced. He said that he travelled from Washington to Chicago by the light of his own burning effigies. The controversy turned upon the following provision repealing the Missouri compromise: "Which, being inconsistent with the principle of non-intervention by Congress with slavery in the states and territories, as recognized by the legislation of 1850 (commonly called the compromise measures) is hereby declared inoperative and void; it being the true intent and meaning of this act not to legislate slavery into any territory or state, nor to exclude it therefrom, but to leave the people thereof perfectly free to form and regulate their domestic institutions in their own way, subject only to the Constitution of the United States." In the Congressional session of 1857-58 he denounced and opposed the Lecompton constitution on the ground that "it was not the act of the people of Kansas and did not embody their will."

Mr. Douglas was remarkably successful in promoting the interests of his own state during his Congressional career. In 1848 he introduced the passage of the bill granting to the state of Illinois the alternate sections of land along the line of the Illinois Central railroad, which so largely contributed to developing the resources and restoring the credit of the state. He was one of the earliest and warmest advocates of a railroad to the Pacific. In foreign policy he opposed the treaty with England limiting the territory of Oregon to the forty-ninth parallel. He also opposed the Trist peace treaty with Mexico. He opposed the ratification of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, chiefly because it pledged the faith of the United States never to annex, colonize, or exercise dominion over any part of Central America. He maintained that the isthmus routes must be kept open as highways to the American possessions on the Pacific; that the time would come when the United States would be compelled to occupy Central America; and declared that he would never pledge the faith of the republic not do in the future what its interests and safety might require. He also declared himself in favor of the acquisition of Cuba whenever it could be obtained consistently with the laws of nations and the honor of the United States.

In 1855 he introduced a bill for the relief of the United States Supreme Court, giving circuit court powers to the district courts, requiring all the district judges in each circuit court to meet once a year as an intermediate court of appeals under the presidency of a justice of the supreme court, and providing for appeals from the district courts to these intermediate courts, and thence to the supreme court, in cases involving large amounts. In 1857 he declared that the only solution of the Mormon question in Utah was to "repeal the organic act absolutely and unconditionally, blotting out of existence the territorial government, and bringing Utah under the sole and exclusive jurisdiction of the United States."

In 1858 and again in 1860, he visited the Southern states, and made many speeches. Everywhere he boldly denied the right of secession, and maintained that, while this was a union of sovereign states independent of all local matters, they were bound together in an indissoluble compact by the Constitution, which established a national government inherently possessing all powers essential to its own preservation. During the exciting session of 1860-61, Mr. Douglas, as a member of the committee of thirteen, and on the floor of the Senate, labored incessantly to avert civil war by any reasonable measures of adjustment, but at the beginning of hostilities he threw the whole weight of his influence in behalf of the Union, and gave Mr. Lincoln's administration an unflinching support. In public speeches he denounced secession as crime and madness, and declared that, in the new system of resistance by the sword and bayonet the result of the ballot-box shall prevail in this country, "the history of the United States is already written in the history of Mexico." He said that "no one could be a true Democrat without being a patriot." In an address to the Legislature of Illinois, delivered at its unanimous request, he urged the oblivion of all party differences, and appealed to his political friends and opponents to unite in support of the government. In a letter dictated for publication during his last illness, he said that but one course was left for patriotic men, and that was to sustain the government against all assailants. On his deathbed his last coherent words expressed an ardent wish for the preservation of the Union, and his dying message to his sons was to "obey the laws and uphold the Constitution."

Mr. Douglas was somewhat below the middle height, but strongly built, and capable of great mental and physical exertion. He was a ready and powerful speaker, discarding ornament in favor of simplicity and strength. Few equaled him in personal influence over the masses of the people, and none inspired more devoted friendship. While considering it the duty of Congress to protect the rights of the slave-holding states, he was opposed to slavery itself. His first wife was the only child of a large slave-holder, who, in his last will provided that, if Mrs. Douglas should die without issue, all her slaves should be freed and removed to Liberia at the expense of her estate, saying further that this provision was in accordance with the wishes of Judge Douglas, who would not consent to own a slave. He married April 7, 1847, Martha, daughter of Col. Robert Martin, of Rockingham county, N. C., by whom he had three children, two of whom, Robert

M., and Stephen A., both lawyers, are living (1887). She died Jan. 19, 1853. He married Nov. 20, 1856, Adele, daughter of James Madison Cutts, of Washington, D. C., who is now the wife of Gen. Robert Williams, U. S. A. The spot on the bank of Lake Michigan in Chicago that Mr. Douglas had reserved for his future home was bought from his widow by the state, and there his remains lie under a magnificent monument begun by private subscriptions and completed by the state of Illinois. It is surmounted by a statue executed by Leonard Volk. His life was written by James W. Sheehan (New York, 1860,) and by Henry M. Flint (Philadelphia, 1860).

MRS. HON. STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS.

Mrs. Robert Williams, wife of the general of that name, has had a romantic and interesting life and has been blessed with numerous homes which are all historic and famous. Mrs. Williams was, previously, the wife of Stephen A. Douglas.

When she was a girl she was known in Washington as "beautiful Addie Cutts." Her grandmother was a sister of President Madison's lovely wife, and her father, James Madison Cutts, was second comptroller of the treasury, while her mother was a Maryland belle and beauty. Adele Cutts, now Mrs. Williams, was born in the Cutts home, a stuccoed house on H street and Lafayette square, built early in the present century. When she was a baby her parents moved to another house. The homestead was taken by President Madison on a mortgage and after his death his widow lived in it. It is always spoken of as the Dolly Madison house, its first owner, who lived in it longest, rarely being mentioned. It is now the home of the Cosmos club.

When Adele Cutts entered society she became a belle on account of her beauty and brilliancy. Stephen A. Douglas, the young senator from Illinois, wooed and won her. They went to live in a gray, grouted brick house in a walled and terraced garden, a quaint old house, once a country place. Twenty-one years ago two houses were made of this and the grounds covered with new buildings. Soon after his marriage Senator Douglas built a new home—a large, plain brick house with a ball room at the back. During the war it was used as a hospital and is now the home of Cardinal Satolli. When Stephen A. Douglas died his wife and family went back to the old house, the gray one in the terraced garden, to live.

After the war closed Mrs. Douglas married Gen. Robert Williams. It was a love match and they were a handsome couple. Soon after the wedding he was sent west and they divided their time between Fort Leavenworth, Omaha and Chicago until about five years ago, when they went to Washington, Gen. Williams having retired. They took a new and handsome house on Hillyer place, unpacked treasured pictures and books stored because they were too heavy to carry around the country and stayed there a couple of years. At present they are in another house.

There are six children in the family—three boys and three girls. The eldest son is in the navy and the youngest went west the other day to try his luck at making a fortune. Two daughters are in society and are very popular. One is a striking brunette, the other a pure blonde with a fine complexion and masses of golden hair. The baby of the family is 14 and promises to be a second edition of her mother. Mrs. Williams has not changed much these years. Her heavy dark hair is lightly touched with gray and she wears it combed plainly back as when she was a girl. Her large, dark eyes are kindly and show her gentle disposition. Her head is finely poised and, although she is a quiet dresser, she has a stately air about her which makes strangers pause to look at her again and ask who she is.

She has many treasures in her home. There are a number of family portraits and some rare old china, one set being of white sprayed in green which was used by her grandmother. Quaint chairs and inlaid tables, one of them having the portraits of Italian poets on it, marbles and bric-a-brac make her home a beautiful one.

Colonel Stephen (7) Burlingame (Stephen (6), Ebenezer (5), Stephen (4), Ballingston (3), John (2), Roger (1)), son of Stephen and (Celia Fiske) Burlingame, was born in Killingly, Conn., Dec. 3, 1819. When he was three years of age his parents moved to the old Burlingame homestead in Coventry, R. I., where he passed his boyhood and early manhood. He enjoyed the advantages which the common schools had to give, and as he showed a peculiar aptitude for military affairs he was proffered a cadetship at West Point, but the death of his father made it necessary for him to abandon his cherished desires, and at the age of eighteen he took his father's place at the head of the family and managed a large estate successfully. At the age of seventeen he joined the militia as private. He was promoted in 1837 to sergcant, 1838 to lieutenant, 1841 to captain, 1841 to lieutenant-colonel, and subsequently colonel, when he was twenty-one years old. He was in command during the state embroglio entitled the Dorr war, being active in the field for the suppression of the rebellion. He was a firm disciplinarian, and conspicuous for his athletic build. About 1857 he, with his family, moved to East Greenwich, R. I., and became associated with the Providence Conference Seminary, and was one of its staunchest friends and supporters. He held various town offices, and in 1868-9 represented his district in the Rhode Island Senate. Having a mechanical turn of mind he made several valuable inventions, among which may be mentioned a packing for steam pipes, which has been in universal use for thirty years, a method by which illuminating gas is manufactured in one-fifth of the time formerly required; a system of sewerage, and other minor inventions, all of which are in common use at the present time in their respective spheres of practicability. Colonel Burlingame was a quiet man, thoughtful and reflective in disposition, conscientious and upright in character. He was deacon of the Baptist Church many years. On Oct. 30, 1841, he married Miss Elsie Maria Tillinghast, who died May 20, 1884, by whom he had three daughters, Anne Eliza, Adeline King and Sarah Maria. In 1888 he was married to Miss Ruth M. Spencer. He died Nov. 15, 1890, at East Greenwich, and is interred in the family burying ground at that place. 3 ch., all born in Coventry, R. I.: a, Anne Eliza Burlingame, b. Sept. 20, 1842; m. In 1869 he went to Germany with his father, who had received the appointment of Consul General of the United States at Frankfort-on-the-Main. He there attended the University of Heidelberg, and subsequently the University of Strassburg, from which institution he was graduated. In 1873 he was appointed United States Consul at Mayence in Germany, which position he held until 1877, when he resigned to return to Massachusetts in order to pursue the study of the law. While in Europe he traveled extensively, and familiarized himself with the German and French languages. In 1880 he was admitted to the bar, and since that time has been in active practice with offices in Lowell and in Boston. He has written extensively for the press and law magazines, and in 1890 published a work known as the "Law of Citizenship," and in 1895 published the "Law of Naturalization;" also a genealogy of "One Branch of the Webster Family." He was for several years a member of the City Hall Commission of the city of Lowell, and published its reports. In 1895 he received the degree of A. M. from Dartmouth College. New Milford, Conn., Oct. 19, 1747; m. at Middletown, Conn., Aug. 16, 1773. Eleanor Roberts, b. Middletown, Conn., Sept. 24, 1750; d. Isle La Mott, Vt., July 16, 1839. Ichabod E. was born in New Milford, Conn., and moved with his parents to what is now Southington, Conn., graduated at Yale College in 1770. At the breaking out of the Revolutionary War he resided in Poultney, Vt. He went to Isle La Mott, Vt., in Lake Champlain, in 1788. He was a surveyor at this time and surveyed the Isle and taught the first school there before 1802. He was ordained a minister in the P. E. Church, was the author of an English grammar in verse, and died the rector of a parish in Macon, Ga., where he was buried. He went south for his health.

He graduated at Yale College with first honors, and soon after his marriage was settled at Poultney, Vt., as pastor of a Presbyterian church. While residing there he lost his property and a very valuable library by fire. He soon after gave up preaching and followed teaching and surveying.

From later information it is learned that he died at the Indian Agency, now Crawford County, Ga., and lies buried on the east side of Flint River near the site of the old agency. When he first went to Georgia he settled at St. Marys and was the rector there, taught school and published an English grammar in verse. He was a classmate in college with Col. Hawkins, the Indian agent, who, hearing of him at St. Marys invited him to the agency, which was at that time at Fort Hawkins, on the east side of the Ockamulgee River, opposite the city of Macon. The Indian Agency was moved to Flint River in 1812.

The following is a copy of a letter written Sept. 20, 1810, which gives an account of the death of Mr. Fisk:

On the 16th Sept. Died at the residence of Col. Hawkins, the Agent for Indian Affairs in the Creek department, Ichabod E. Fisk, A. M. and late tutor of St.

Maries Academy, Ga. This gentleman left his residence near the old British works on Lake Champlain in Vermont some years past, with an inflammation of the lungs and stomach, as he expressed it, to try the effects of a southern climate. He came to the Creek agency in July in pretty good health apparently, on his way to the Mississippi Territory and stated his complaint and object for visiting a warm climate. His disorder seemed at times to be leaving him and again returned in the increased violence. He was invited to return to a seaside residence on the sea islands of Georgia till the spring and go thence by water. For a month or more he amused himself in visits to the Indians at their festivals or correcting for a new edition his practical Grammar, also commenced the study of the French language and flattered himself daily with a speedy recovery. On the 9th of Sept. he was confined to his bed; during the night he had frequent bad spells. Slept mostly in the day and was able to retain food or drink for a short time only on his stomach. When he could eat he indulged himself in the heartiest high seasoned food and strongest drink. Every morning he reported himself better till the day of his dissolution, that morning he asked for some soup, complained of being hungry, took a spoonfull or two and drank sum sylabub. About twelve o'clock he ceased to speak and half after nine he was dead. When asked whether he did not want to see his wife, he answered yes. He called her name several times and the last was "O death come." One of Col. Haskin's Family remained at his bedside during the day and two of them during the night at the period of his confinement to his bed and he was buried by the Colonel's Family at sunset on the 17th. As he gave no directions relative to his family affairs the adjutant agent, Major Linbough, by order took an inventory of his property. BENJAMIN HASKINS.

Creek Agency, Sept. 20th, 1810.

Of her forefathers on her father's side, 28 were ministers, besides 18 deacons, and that more than one hundred of them were graduates of various colleges, it will be readily understood why Mrs. Preston was so much of a Bible student and so devoted a Christian. She was married in the state of Vermont, where they lived a few years, and then moved to western New York, then a new country. In Feb., 1864, they moved to Mt. Pleasant, Mich., where they lived for nearly a quarter of a century, both passing from life to death in the house in which they moved so long ago. Mr. Preston having died in 1881. Ephraim, the son, when he enlisted was only sixteen years old, and rather small of his age; but he succeeded in passing muster by tying his hat-band tight around his hat, and putting his hat as high on his head as he could without having it fall off, and standing erect as he could. When he came to the inspector, the latter said "march on," while some of the others were rejected. In the battle of Bennington, he, with three others were ordered by a lieutenant to carry Captain Taylor from the field, who was wounded (his thigh being broken). This was a very dangerous and critical position. It was rising ground, and Captain Taylor fainting every few minutes. The cannon balls would plow furrows as large as those made by a breaking-up plow, yet a kind Providence protected them. He was a private in the N. H. Cont. line, and was granted a pension Mar. 16, 1823, ae. 70. He d. in Contoocook in 1849; res. Concord, N. H.

827. EBENEZER FISKE (Ephraim, Ebenezer, William, William, William, John, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Tewksbury, Mass., Jan. 26, 1766; m. Sarah Blanchard, b. Sept. 28, 1769; d. Nov. 11, 1848. Ebenezer Fiske, son of Ephraim, was born at Tewksbury, Mass., Jan. 26, 1766, and lived to an advanced age. He was one of the first settlers at Little Pond, about 1787. He purchased one of the eighty-three acre lots, that belonged to the Rolfe Estate, and commenced at the west end of the lot; made an opening near the road, and put up a shanty, in which he lived about three years. He then built a house. Mr. Fiske possessed a large, muscular frame, which during his long life was subjected to severe labors, toils and hardships. When a young man about twenty-one he worked for a while for Joseph Colby, of New London, father of Ex-Gov. Anthony Colby. Going out together in a boat on a pond they were upset and Fiske saved Colby's life by catching him by the hair of his head, when sinking. Soon after this in raising the New London meeting house, both Colby and Fiske were on the frame, when, a board being suddenly moved, Fiske fell and Colby caught him by the hair of his head and saved his life. At another time young Fiske was threshing grain with Thomas Morse of Hopkinton, when Morse in sport struck the end or swingel of Mr. Fisk's flail and drove it into his left eye. He fell, and was thought to be dead, but recovering Dr. Philip Carrigain was sent for, who told him that his eye was spoiled, and said he, "if the eye should run out you would give all Hopkinton to get rid of the pain." Happily the eye did not run out, but the sight of it was completely destroyed for life. Dr. Carrigain charged but two shillings for his service. At the raising of a barn, at what is now Millville, when about 28 years old, Mr. Fiske says, "I fell from the top or plate to the bottom of the cellar; and a stick of timber I was lifting, fell across my breast. My shoulder was broken, and breast so much bruised that it was thought I could not recover; but by skillful means of a doctor, and a good constitution, I recovered, but felt the effects for three or four years after." About three years after Mr. Fiske was upset in a wagon on the road at the top of the hill west of Richard Bradley's and received a severe cut in the head, which for a considerable time benumbed his faculties. With no education in early life, he was ever a good calculator and manager of his affairs, and a reliable, substantial citizen. Res. Concord, N. H.

836. ENSIGN SQUIRE FISKE (John, Josiah, Samuel, William, William, John, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William Symond), b. Jan. 10, 1756; m. Nov. 23, 1777, Amey Lapham, dau. of Abner; b. Aug. 29, 1762; d. in the summer of 1843. There is a tradition in the family that Squire Fiske served as Colonel of a Rhode Island regiment during the Revolutionary War. The records of soldiers from that state during the struggle for Independence show that he was an Ensign in Richmond's Rhode Island State Regiment from Nov. 1, 1775 to April, 1776. He was later in life granted a pension for revolutionary service. When his daughter, Abby, died, Squire's wife, Amy, took her four children home and brought them up. She also brought up, for a while at least, Francis' two children, Ann Elizabeth and William. Squire Fisk's home at Cumberland, Rhode Island, was a brick cottage. This had never been transferred until some ten or fifteen yeards ago (perhaps twenty). Then there were many heirs to sign the deed although the property was not valuable enough to give much to each individual. I am not sure that every living heir did sign the deed, all did that could be found, but enough signed so that Mr. Burlingame, the purchaser, was willing to take the property. This deed is registered in the office of the town clerk of Cumberland. He d. Nov. 30, 1804; res. Cumberland, R. I.

Jan. 17, 1842; d. unm., June 14, 1881. Benjamin Wing Hendrick was left motherless very young and his grandmother, Mrs. Amey Fisk, took him to live with her. He began life as operator in a cotton mill when a small boy and rose through various grades of the work to the position of overseer and superintendent and afterwards, in company with his brother, Stephen, and alone, he operated mills himself. They had ventures in the South as well as in the New England states. Benjamin's schooling was very little but he trained himself in higher mathematics when he was older and was something of a mechanic. He patented at least one "loom-motion." His experience at the South before the war made him acquainted with the Southern people, and although his politics was republican (and I think he always after Whig times voted the republican ticket) yet he had and would express such regard and admiration for the Southerners during the war time that his political orthodoxy was gravely doubted by many of his relatives. I think he was a rather admirable sort of a man who hadn't much chance in youth and who led a rather commonplace and uneventful life. During the last years of his life he took personal care of his wife. His death was quite sudden. His wife survived only nine days. 3, Olney, b. ———; m. 1st, Sarah Ann Remington; ch.: a, Harriet; b, Abby; c, Phoebe; d, Sarah; 2d wife a widow Steere. Abner of Cumberland; d. Jan. 3, 1819. He d. in Northboro, Mar. 26, 1837; res., Westboro, Mass. Mr. Ballou was a worthy descendant of a French Huguenot family who were among the early settlers in this country. John Fiske occupied the old homestead farm in Cumberland until April, 1794, where his three eldest children were born. In April, 1794, it became necessary to sell the old homestead farm in Cumberland in order to effect a settlement of the estate, and John took his share of the proceeds, in Spanish milled dollars, and put them into his saddlebags and started on horseback into the interior of the country to look for a new home. Providence directed his steps to Westboro, Mass., where he purchased a farm, and immediately removed his family thither. Westboro was 28 miles from Cumberland, and the family connections of his wife felt that she was going to remove almost to the end of the world; in fact, the journey was thought more of at that time than a journey to Oregon or California is now. The family remained on the farm in Westboro seven years, until the year 1801, and here two more children were born. In April, 1801, the farm in Westboro was sold, and another farm in Northborough purchased, where the family removed and there remained until the death of John Fiske, in 1837, at the age of 76 years.

1635. iv. JONATHAN, b. Aug. 15, 1825; d. unm. in Reno County, Kansas, Mar. 28, 1879. He was born in Goshen, N. Y. The family removed to Coshocton, Ohio, when he was nine years old. His mother died at that place when he was sixteen. In May, 1846, he enlisted for twelve months' service in the Mexican war; was in the Third Ohio Regiment, Company B. This regiment was not in any of the great battles of that war, being much of the time in garrison. At the expiration of his term he returned to Ohio. Soon afterward he went to the southern part of Indiana, where he entered land (with his land warrant), but did not settle on it. In 1850 he was called to Princeton, N. J., by the serious illness of his eldest brother, who had just graduated from the college at that place. He remained in the east two years, then returned to Indiana, and soon after engaged in the marble business at Hutsonville, Ill. In the fall of 1854 he closed his business at that place, sold his land in Indiana, and went to Minnesota, then a new territory. He took up a claim on government land, as yet unsurveyed, and yet only sixteen miles from the site of the present city of Minneapolis. He obtained this land under the pre-emption law, and it was his home for twenty-one years. In the fall of 1861 he visited his brother at Greencastle, Ind., and there enlisted in Company H, Forty-third Indiana Volunteers. With this regiment he was in numerous battles, among which were New Madrid, Ruffles Point, Helena and Marks' Mill. Near the close of his three years' term he was examined by a military board and recommended for a captain's commission, to command colored troops. The commission was issued, but before it reached the regiment his brigade was sent in charge of a wagon train from Camden to Pine Bluff, Ark. On the way, at Marks' Mill, they were attacked by a strong force of rebels, and after one of the most fiercely contested battles of the war, though not on a large scale, the lines were broken up and they were captured man by man. Fisk, who was a sergeant, was in command of the company through this action, there being no commissioned officer with it. He with the rest was taken to Tyler, Tex., and imprisoned in a stockade. The treatment was not so severe as at Libby or Andersonville, but it was bad enough. The whole long summer was spent in this wretched place, from April till late in September. Near the end of the latter month he with three others escaped, and after a journey of forty-eight days, traveling at night and hiding during the day much of the time, suffering from exposure to the weather with only a single suit of clothing, and that worn to rags before they started, and from hunger almost to the point of starvation, they finally reached the Union lines at Little Rock, Ark. As it was then considerably beyond the expiration of his term of enlistment, he received his discharge, and did not accept the commission tendered him, but returned to his home in Minnesota. During his absence in the army the Indian war occurred in Minnesota, and when he got to his place he found nothing left but his land, not a trace of a building (except ashes) and not a rail of a fence. He went to work to restore his improvements. In this he succeeded, though it was evident that his constitution was permanently injured by his severe army service and his prison experience. He lived at his Minnesota home until the summer of 1875, at which time he sold out, and after nearly two years spent in travel and prospecting, he settled in Reno County, Kansas, where he again established a home, but his health soon after became impaired and he died on the 28th of March, 1879. He was never married.

1641. iv. FIDELIA, b. May 1, 1816, united with the church at Shelburne, under the pastoral care of Rev. Dr. Packard, in Jan., 1831. She was a pupil and then a teacher at Mount Holyoke Female Seminary, and partaking largely of the spirit of Mary Lyon, thoroughly accepting her views of Christian education, she would probably have been connected permanently with that institution but for the conviction in her own mind that she was called to the missionary field. She embarked at Boston, for the Nestorian mission, Mar. 1, 1843, in company with Mr. and Mrs. Perkins and Mar Yohannan, returning to Persia, and Messrs. D. T. Stoddard and E. E. Bliss and their wives, and Miss C. E. Myers, reached Oroomiah, June 14, of the same year, and after laboring there for fourteen years, was constrained by impaired health to return to the United States in 1858, and died at the house of her brother in Shelburne, July 26, 1864.

One who had known Miss Fiske long and well, says of her character and influence: "That she was generally regarded by those who knew her as a remarkable woman, was not owing to the predominance of any one quality in her character, but to a combination of qualities, intellectual and emotional, surpassing anything, as it seems to me, that I have ever seen in any other man or woman. I remember enough of her uncle, Pliny Fiske, the companion of Parsons in commencing the Palestine mission, to believe that he owed the stronghold he had upon popular interest to the same cause. Her emotional nature was wonderfully sanctified; and each of her powers being well developed, and all nicely adjusted one to another, the whole worked with regularity and ease. Hence that singular accuracy of judgment, that never failing sense of propriety, for which she was distinguished. Hence the apparent absence of fatigue in her protracted conversations and conversational addresses. Hence the habitual control of her sanctified affections, over her intellectual powers, so that she seemed ever ready at the moment, for the call of duty, and especially to meet the claims of perishing souls around her. In the structure and the working of her nature, she was the nearest approach I ever saw to my ideal of the Saviour, as he appeared when on earth. "The amount of her usefulness is as extraordinary as her character. The book entitled 'Woman and her Saviour in Persia,' strikingly sets forth her influence on Nestorian character, and I doubt not it would be the judgment of the mission, that few of their number exerted so great a formative influence on the Nestorian mind, as did this departed sister. Certainly the tidings of no death could awaken so many voices of lamentation, as will the tidings of hers, over the plain of Oroomiah, and in the glens and fastnesses of Koordistan." At the time of her death was engaged in writing "Recollections of Mary Lyon" (Boston, 1866). See the memoir of Miss Fisk, by the Rev. Daniel T. Fiske, D. D., entitled "Faith Working by Love" (1868).

June 21, 1803; d. Jan. 15, 1878. Joel, third son of Deacon Moses and Hannah Fiske, fitted for college at Montpelier Academy. He read theology with Rev. Charles Walker, D. D., of Rutland, Vt., 1825-26, graduated at Middlebury College, Vermont, in 1825, in which State he principally labored in the ministry. He was distinguished for originality of thought rather than depth of research, but also for great zeal and devotion to his Master's service. In this, his efforts were greatly blessed, for many souls, through his instrumentality, were brought to the knowledge of redeeming grace. His discourses usually produced a marked impression. Sometimes a Scriptural truth would be presented in such relations that the congregation would be thrilled and set to thinking as for their lives. He began his ministry at about thirty years of age and was successively settled in Monkton 1826-30 and New Haven, Vt., 1830-32 Essex, N. Y., 1832-44 a missionary at Phillipsburgh, Canada East, 1844-45 and Plainfield, Vt., where his labors closed. He published one or more sermons. He d. Dec. 16, 1856; res. Plainfield, Vt.

Harvey, fourth son of Deacon Moses and Hannah Fiske, graduated at Hamilton College, in 1826, and studied theology at Princeton—but had previously spent some years in that most practical and efficient of all training schools—the printing office, where he learned, not only the art of conducting a newspaper, but the secret of guiding and controlling the popular mind. He was never settled as a pastor, but labored as State missionary in New Jersey, principally in the cause of Sabbath-schools, and with the most marked success, until his health, previously shattered by his great efforts to complete his education, gave way altogether, after three years of a most useful ministry. He was noted for vivacity yet soundness of mind, for quickness of apprehension and perseverance in application. His death suddenly closed a career of much promise at the age of thirty-one years. Lyman Fiske, fifth son of Deacon Moses and Hannah Fiske, was a substantial citizen in Waitesfield, Vt., and a deacon of the Congregational Church in that place. He was a cooper by trade and followed farming most of his life. No one acquainted with the religious history of the town of Waitesfield can forget the constant part in it of Deacon Fisk. Almost from the beginning of the Congregational organization he has been identified with it. Deacon Fisk's very name is both an honored inheritance and an honored legacy. On the 8th of Nov., 1801, his father became a member of the church, and soon after was made deacon, a position which he held honorably for more than forty years. Lyman professed his Christian faith in his sixteenth year, and a few years before his father's death, which occurred in 1847, was also elected deacon, serving forty years. The family connection with this sacred office is perpetuated in his nephew, Deacon E. A. Fisk. He d. Dec. 14, 1884; res. Waitesfield, Vt.

He then returned to Waitesfield and purchased a small farm, and for a time followed his trade in connection with it. In after years by various additions to the original purchase he became the owner of an excellent farm which fully occupied his time. He was a man of good business ability, and unblemished Christian character. His early opportunities for education were limited, but he kept himself well abreast with the times by thorough and systematic reading. For over fifty years he was a faithful member of Waitesfield Congregational Church, and was ever ready to give of his time, money or influence for its support, and, what is far better, his daily life was such that none could speak a word to his reproach. Jonathan, eldest son of Judge Jonathan Fiske, started from Williamstown, Vt., for New York City, where he supported himself for some years by teaching school, meantime devoting himself to a thorough study of the mystery of law. A good classical scholar, he had among his more distinguished pupils Theodosia, only daughter and child of Aaron Burr. After being admitted to the bar, Mr. Fiske established himself in a very successful practice of law at Newburgh, N. Y., until he was chosen a representative of Congress during the first term of President Madison's administration, by whom he was subsequently appointed to the office of the United States attorney for the southern district of New York. From the pecuniary emolument of his extensive practice, while in this position, he speedily acquired a handsome property.

Jonathan Fiske was a man of fine figure, tall, well proportioned, of courtly manners and elegant address. He was married to a descendant of the Livingston family of New York and had four children, Mary, the latter, a very lovely child. Theodore was a man of bright talents, educated at Columbia College, New York City, and settled in the practice of law with his father at Newburgh. Oct. 28, 1799, dau. of Deacon Paul. In the spring of 1820 he removed with his aged parents to Berlin, Vt., and settled on a farm, ministering to their necessities until their death. In 1827 Mr. Fiske returned to Williamstown and resided there several years, filling in a measure his father's place in that community. In 1840, sensible of the importance of giving his children better educational facilities than were within reach at that point, he removed to Malone, N. Y., and placed them in the Franklin Academy, where his oldest son, Pliny, a promising student, was fitted to enter Burlington College the very year he died, and his two daughters were also qualified to become successful teachers, which they afterwards did for some years. Mr. Fiske was elected deacon of the Congregational Church in Williamstown in 1832, and upon his removal to Malone, he was re-elected to that position in 1844. Deacon Fiske was never a seeker for political emolument or distinction, but nevertheless has on various occasions been honored by the free preference of his townsmen for local or county offices. A man of the strictest integrity and sound judgment of benevolent Christian aims, he sought rather to do the work of a faithful servant of Christ than to win applause of men. The worthy scion of the Puritan stock, he lived a busy, useful life, and left to his surviving children a spotless name and example. Res. Berlin and Williamstown, Vt.

925. HON. EZRA FISKE (William, William, Ebenezer, William, William, John, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond) b. Amherst, N. H., Apr. 2, 1776; m. May, 1799, Melinda Blake, b. 1784; d. 1868. Ezra Fiske, first son and second child of Hon. Wm. and Eunice Nourse Fiske, was born at Amherst, N. H. His father was a farmer and shoemaker. The sterility of the land, the poverty following the Revolution, and his father's having a large family of children, compelled him to assist in the support of the family. He worked on the farm in summer, on the shoe bench in winter, and received but a very limited education, being but a few months in the public schools of that day. He, however, gained much knowledge from reading by the light of pine knots during winter evenings. After he arrived at the age of twenty-one, he attended the Amherst Academy for over a year, taught school, and in May, 1799, moved to Maine and bought land in Fayette. He soon after married Melenda Blake, daughter of Robert and Martha Dudley Blake, who were natives of New Ipswich, N. H. He settled on his land, where he and his wife enjoyed a married life of over sixty-seven years, she dying at the age of eighty-four. He survived her two years and died at the age of ninety-four years and six months. There were born unto them sixteen children, twelve of whom grew to manhood and womanhood. Robert Blake was a Revolutionary soldier, and Martha Dudley, a descendant of the Dudley family of England, both being descendants of early New England colonists. Melenda Blake inherited the resolute and sterling qualities of her parents, and much of Ezra Fiske's success in life must be accredited to her assistance. Ezra Fiske in early life evinced mechanical ingenuity, and at sixteen, with but few tools to work with, made a violin without assistance. In after life he invented a number of useful machines, among which was the machine which first successfully molded brick. He made the models and many of the drafts of his inventions for the patent office. He entered the militia in the town of Fayette as drummer, and became successively Clerk and Lieutenant of the company, and served as Adjutant during two colonelcies. He taught in the public schools for twenty-one years and served on the board of school examiners for twenty-three years. He revised Fiske-Murray's "Grammar for Advanced Students," producing a work for the primary grades. He served for twenty-two years on the Board of Selectmen of his town. He served as Justice of the Peace successively for thirty-five years. He represented his town in the Massachusetts Legislature in 1812-13, and the Maine Legislature in 1829-31, and was also a member of the Constitutional Convention which formed the constitution of the State of Maine. He was a member of the Massachusetts Legislature when Elbridge Gerry introduced the first "Gerrymander Bill," and although of the same politics as Mr. Gerry, bitterly opposed the bill as not only outraging the rights of the people, but as being impolitic. He held political office over forty-five years. In politics, his admiration for the views held by Washington and Hamilton, and his fears of the French red republican influence over Jefferson, made him a staunch follower of the former and their successors. He afterwards became a Whig, and died a Republican. In his religious views he was reared a Congregationalist, the views of which church he early embraced; but afterwards became a Baptist, and lived an honored member of that denomination for sixty-seven years. In both his politics and religion he differed from the other members of his father's family. He was a member of the Masonic order for sixty-seven years, and at his death was the oldest Mason in the State of Maine. His funeral was conducted by the Masonic order. Although commencing with but limited education, by self-instruction, he succeeded in acquiring a great fund of general information.

The children of Ezra and Melinda Fiske inherited excellent constitutions and fine natural abilities, improved in some instances by a knowledge of books and familiar intercourse with the world. The sons were active, stirring and enterprising men, and the daughters comely and well favored personally. Francis Nourse, the eldest, was a substantial and respectable farmer in his native town.

Allen was for many years a member of the Kennebec bar and also served as Justice of the Peace. Franklin, perhaps the best educated of the family, was a successful teacher in several of the States, traveled extensively and possessed good literary abilities.

When the Rebellion broke out, the family of Ezra Fiske partook of the military spirit which swept through the North. Franklin early enlisted and became a Captain in one of the famous Illinois cavalry regiments. His brother Allen served as a Lieutenant in the Maine Twelfth Volunteers. Their nephews, Allen, William and Philip, sons of Francis Nourse, enlisted respectively in the Maine Seventh, and Twelfth, and Fifth Connecticut regiments, and did good service under the old flag. The following is taken from the diary of Ezra Fiske, of Fayette, Me.:

"April 2nd, 1861. Tuesday. Morning cloudy and cold. P. F. Pike called and took my inventory this morning. I am permitted to enter upon the 86th year of my age. Yes, 85 years ago this morning I received existence from the same kind hand of Providence which has upheld me in life through this long series of years, and has dealt bountifully with me and towards me in every stage of my life, and now this morning I am numbered among the living, in the enjoyment of comfortable health. O, that I could render to the Lord all due returns of gratitude, thanksgiving and praise for his bountiful goodness unto me, in the kingdom of his providence and Grace. Amen."

926. WILLIAM FISKE (William, William, Ebenezer, William, William, John, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Amherst, N. H., July 11, 1778; m. Sept. 4, 1802, Margaret Cleave Dodge, of Amherst, b. Oct. 12, 1780, d. Apr. 6, 1867. The eight children of Bartholomew Dodge, Sr., born in Wenham, were among the earliest emigrants to Amherst, N. H. As three of them intermarried with the family of Hon. William Fiske, doubtless a number of the latter's descendants are equally interested in what relates to the Dodge ancestry. Of Mr. Dodge's parentage and family, the date of his birth and marriage, no account has been furnished us. He was descended from Richard Dodge, of Salem, Mass., who emigrated from England in 1638. According to Savage, he is the progenitor of all the name in New England. He had, by wife Edith, John, Mary, Richard, Samuel, Edward and Joseph. They, and their descendants, appear to have participated largely in public affairs in Wenham and adjacent towns. Eighteen of this name have graduated at New England colleges since A. D. 1700. In Wenham, according to the records, several of this family married Fiskes.

William Fiske, of Concord, was the third child and second son of Hon. William and Eunice Fiske. In features and in stature he resembled his father, but his disposition and character was more like his mother's. Like his brothers, he grew up amid the labors of his father's family, until he was 21 years of age. Then, after visiting Maine and looking about him, for two or three years, at the age of 24 he married Margaret C. Dodge, of Amherst, and settled at Concord, N. H. They became members of the Congregational Church in Concord at an early date. of 24 he married Margaret C. Dodge, of Amherst, and settled at Concord, N. H. They became members of the Congregational church in Concord at an early date. They first located themselves at Concord, "West Parish," where he erected several buildings, a public dwelling and store, and resided there several years. But, in 1832, he bought a lot and built him a house in the village of Concord. He died there, aged 76 years. His wife was the daughter of Bartholomew Dodge, of Amherst. He d. Oct. 9, 1854; res. 1759. i. MARY CLEAVES, b. Sept. 8, 1803; m. Edward M. Walker, Apr. 20, 1824, by the Rev. Dr. Butler, of St. Paul's Church, Troy. Edward M. Walker d. Feb. 19, 1831. Their children were: 1, Mary A., b. Sept. 16, 1825. 2, Edward M., b. Sept. 21, 1828; d. Aug., 1829. 3, Edwarda M., b. Mar. 22, 1831. In November, 1850, she was married to Charles T. Bradley, Esq., of Milwaukee, Wis. Mary A. Walker, the eldest daughter, lived with her parents. Mrs. M. C. Walker was married Oct. 21, 1836, to William Jennison. Charles T. Bradley was the seventh of a family of nine children, born in Haverhill, Mass. His father, Enoch B., was the son of Joseph Bradley, of Haverhill. His mother was a daughter of Dr. Samuel Hildreth, of Methuen, in that State. The Bradleys were among the first settlers in New England, but it is not known that the original families were all closely related. Mr. Joseph Bradley, above referred to, was quite probably a descendant of Daniel Bradley, who was a passenger by the ship "Elizabeth," 1635, who was killed by the Indians at Haverhill, 1680, and whose family for several generations experienced great sufferings at the hands of the savages. He had several children, and among them Daniel, Abraham, Joseph and Isaac—the latter was carried into captivity, 1695. Daniel, with his wife and younger children, and Joseph, with their sisters, Martha and Sarah, were massacred in 1697. In 1704 the garrison house of a grandson, Joseph, son of Joseph, was surprised, burned down, and his wife (in delicate circumstances) taken a second time prisoner, and carried to Canada, where she was sold into bondage until redeemed the following year. In 1746, Jonathan and Samuel Bradley, sons of Abraham above, were massacred with others in New Hampshire, by the same relentless foe. Such were the perils and such the sufferings encountered by our fathers, in early days. Joseph Bradley, of Haverly, was the ancestor of Hon. John Bradley, of Concord, N. H.; also of Deacon Amos Bradley, of Dracut, Mass., and of Enoch Bradley, Esq., of Haverhill.

Remained with his father until 1802, when he went to Maine; taught school there most of time until 1809, when he returned to New Hampshire. In 1810 he located himself in trade at Concord, and continued in that business up to 1853. In March, 1819, he was elected town clerk of Concord, and was elected to the same office fourteen consecutive years. In 1825, and also in 1826, he was elected representative to the general court. In 1827-29-30 he was elected Counselor for the district of Rockingham. He was chosen president of the Merrimack county bank in January, 1847, and continued the same for thirteen consecutive years. He was also president of the New Hampshire savings bank in Concord, for several years. He was married by the Rev. Dr. Asa McFarland, of Concord, to Mrs. Mary Emery, daughter of Judge Timothy Walker, of Concord. They both united with the First Congregational Church, Concord, in 1831. As a son and brother, as a husband, father and citizen and in all the relations of life, if Francis Nourse Fiske were not absolutely blameless, none were more nearly so. Besides a good common school education he obtained at the academy of Amherst, a fair introduction to the higher English branches. Mrs. Mary Emery was the daughter of Judge Timothy Walker, of Concord, N. H. Judge Walker of Concord, was descended from Deacon Samuel Walker, of Woburn, Mass., whose eldest son, Timothy, born 1705, was a graduate of Harvard College, 1725, and ordained the first pastor of the Congregational Church in Concord, in 1730, and died there in 1782, in the 52d year of his ministry. He married Sarah Burbeen, of Woburn, and had five children. His only son, Judge Timothy Walker, born in 1737, was for many years among the most prominent of the early public men in New Hampshire. He was a colonel and paymaster in the army of the Revolution, a member of both houses of Common Pleas, and, in 1798, the Republican candidate for Governor, against John Taylor Gilman, a distinguished federalist. He married Esther, daughter of Rev. Joseph Burbeen, of Woburn, and of their fourteen children, the thirteenth was Mary, born in 1786, who was married to Hon. Francis N. Fiske, as above. The family and descendants of Rev. Timothy Walker have been largely identified with the growth and prosperity of Concord, and in the voluminous historical work of Rev. Dr. Nathaniel Bouton, of that city, they are noticed at length. He d. Oct. 7, 1870; res. Concord, N. H.

Dr. William Gilman Perry was the eldest son of Dr. William and Abigail (Gilman) Perry, of Exeter, N. H. The Perry family is of English stock, and their ancestors were among the earliest emigrants who settled in the Old Colony. Nathan Perry, the father of Dr. William, of Exeter, was born in Attleboro, Mass. In early life he removed and settled in Norton, of that State, where he married Phebe Braman, and lived and died a respectable farmer.

931 ALLEN FISKE (William, William, Ebenezer, William, William,

ALLEN FISKE.

John, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Amherst, N. H., Apr. 10, 1789, m. at Morristown, N. J., July, 1819, Eliza Chapman, b. Aug. 24, 1797, d. May 7, 1834, eldest daughter of Nathaniel Chapman, Esq., who was descended from an ancient and honorable family of that name in Connecticut. She was a lady of rare beauty and accomplishments, well fitted to adorn any station in life, was for some years eminently successful as a teacher of young women in the higher educational branches of study, and though called to an early grave, she left behind her a sweet memory that was cherished by a wide circle of admirers and friends. Nathaniel Chapman was one of a family of four sons and one daughter, children of Phineas Chapman, Esq., who was the son of Deacon Caleb, who was the son of Deacon Nathaniel, who was the youngest son of Hon. Robert Chapman, one of the original settlers of Saybrook, and who, besides filling other important offices in the gift of his townsmen, represented that town for thirty consecutive years in the Connecticut Legislature, viz., from 1654 to 1684, numbering during that period over fifty separate sessions. His son, Deacon Nathaniel, of the Saybrook (Cong.) Church, represented the same town in twenty-four sessions of that body, from 1697 to 1723. His son, Caleb, succeeded him in the inheritance of the ancient Chapman homestead, and also as deacon of the Saybrook Church. Allen Fiske m. 2d, Sept., 1835, Mrs. Maria Stokes, b. 1796, in Montrose, Scotland, d. Oct., 1863. Allen, fourth son of Hon. William and Eunice (Nourse) Fiske, was born in Amherst, N. H. Delicate in his youth the plans of his life were left undecided until he was nineteen years of age, when he began his preparation for college, and soon after entering Dartmouth, at Hanover, N. H., he graduated in the summer of 1814. At college he held a very respectable standing, ranking as third in his class, and was honored by election to the Phi Beta Kappa Society, in recognition of his scholarship. Going to New York the following winter, he entered the law office of Hon. Jonathan Fiske in the spring of 1816, where he continued until he was admitted to the bar in 1819. Mr. Fiske was peculiarly well fitted for the office of instructor of youth, and tiring of the law after a brief practice, he betook himself to his favorite role as the principal of grammar schools, designed to prepare young men for college. Called to take charge of such departments in the academies located in Troy, Auburn and Skaneateles, N. Y., he made a brilliant success in this field, was largely instrumental in shaping the course of many young men who afterwards attained distinction, and probably more than any others of his day helped to raise the standard of education in the state. He was the author of several text books widely in use in the schools of New York and New England, notably Murray's English Grammar simplified and adapted to popular use, and Fiske's Elements of Latin Grammar for High Schools. Mr. Fiske, in addition to his rare gifts as teacher, also possessed the pen of a ready writer, and was a frequent and valued contributor to the columns of the eastern press. He was at different times on the editorial staff of several prominent journals of his day, was a leading writer for a number of popular magazines and quarterlies, and for several years conducted a very popular home journal. To the very last years of his life Mr. Fiske retained to a remarkable degree the vigor of his intellectual powers, and when past the age of three-score and ten years, was accustomed to keep up his familiar acquaintance with the classic authors, and even when the physical infirmities of an octogenarian prevented him from engaging longer in the activities of outdoor life, he occupied himself in writing full commentaries on the entire New Testament.

At the ripe age of 86 years, in the full possession of his faculties, with an unclouded trust and holy peace and saintly resignation, Allen Fiske, after a brief illness, on Sept. 18th, 1875, fell asleep in Jesus, and was gathered unto his fathers, "having the testimony of a good conscience, in the communion of the Holy Catholic Church, in the confidence of a certain faith, in the comfort of a reasonable, religious and holy hope, and in perfect charity with the world!" His remains were taken to Auburn, N. Y., for interment.

Allen Fiske was a well read man, not only in English literature, but the classics also, and Homer's Iliad was as familiar to him as Shakespeare. But the Holy Scriptures were his especial delight. From private papers it appears that before his seventieth year he had read the Bible through by regular course over forty times, and portions of the New Testament many more times. During his long career as a teacher he had received from his pupils many valued souvenirs of their regard, but the most touching testimony came at his decease, when about his remains were gathered at the cemetery in Auburn, N. Y., where the committal took place, nearly a score of prominent gentlemen, in middle life, who after more than thirty years had elapsed, came from their homes to testify by their presence their profound appreciation of the service he had rendered to them as their early instructor, and to pay this heartfelt homage to his memory. 1773 i. MARIA ANTOINETTE, b. in New York City, Feb. 26, 1821; m. Nov. 1, 1854. Dr. J. Asa Kennicott. Early manifesting a remarkable precocity and strength of character, she greatly resembled her mother also in personal charms and indomitable energy. At the age of thirteen, during her mother's illness and afterwards, she took charge of the female department of Auburn Academy, of which her father was then principal, and discharged her duties in this position with such dignity and ability as to attract the notice of other educators. At the age of sixteen she was engaged as preceptress of the Aurora (N. Y.) Female Academy, notwithstanding the rule in force of the board of trustees, which prescribed eighteen as the minimum age, and was eminently successful in that capacity. In 1841, when her father took charge of the academy in Skaneateles, N. Y., she again became his assistant, as head of the female department and filled the position with entire satisfaction. Subsequently, on the removal of the family to Troy, N. Y., she entered (1844-5) Mrs. Willard's Seminary, to perfect herself in music, painting, French, and higher mathematics, and graduating with credit eighteen months later, she became a teacher in that famous institution. In 1849, after a brief visit with friends in New York City, she went to Chicago, and established the Chicago Female Seminary, the pioneer of all such institutions in the great West, and for several years she conducted that school with signal popularity, having in the various departments instructors of the highest ability, and at one time a scholar-roll of over one hundred pupils. In 1854 she was united in marriage to Dr. J. Asa Kennicott, a leading dentist of the city, and well known in scientific circles, and for fifteen years retired to domestic life. In 1869, with the view of giving her three daughters the best educational advantages, she established in her own beautiful home at Kenwood, Chicago, a girl's school which soon became widely known as the Kenwood Female Seminary, with the patronage of the best Chicago families, and a large roll of pupils drawn from all quarters of the west and south. While in the full tide of prosperity, she was compelled, on account of ill health, to transfer the management of the school to other hands, and in 1878 she engaged to chaperon a good-sized class abroad, and with this charge spent a year in Europe, visiting the various places of interest, but more especially the art galleries and salons, where her class received instruction in art, music and modern languages. On her return from Europe she decided not to resume charge of the seminary, but opened a studio, in connection with her eldest daughter, Miss Maud Kennicott, who was a member of the class that went abroad, and gave instruction in the higher grades of art, with special favor and success. Mrs. Kennicott's work in crayon, pastel and oil has been catalogued and exhibited in the art galleries of the leading expositions of the country, especially those of Chicago, New York and New Orleans, and has been honored with distinguished commendation and patronage. Her productions in fruit work have not been excelled by any artist in this country or Europe, and are simply exquisite. And the same might be said of much of her other work, especially her canvas representations of the various specimens of the American flora, which have been much admired. Indeed, faultless gems from her easel may be found in the homes of the wealthy all through the land, associated with the best work of modern masters. In 1886 her husband, Dr. Kennicott, was stricken with paralysis, and as he became a hopeless and for years almost a helpless invalid, her studies in art from this date were practically ended in her devotion to him. Since his demise in 1893, Mrs. Kennicott has lived a very retired life, passing the evening of her days pleasantly, with her children all near her, solaced by the reflection that her busy life had been at least a very useful one, and representative of the highest grade of American womanhood. To her were born three daughters, as follows: Isabella Maud, born Dec. 21, 1856; married Dr. T. J. Reid. 2d, Mabel Blanche, born August 16, 1858; married Frederick Grant Gleason. 3d, Ada Mary Walker, born August 1, 1860; presides with grace as mistress of the homestead. Inheriting in a large degree the talents of their mother, they have by her judicious training acquired accomplishments which fit them for any station in life.

Dr. Kennicott is a younger son of Jonathan Kennicott, who was born in Warren, R. I., April 27, 1775, and a grandson of Robert, of that State, who was descended from Dr. Robert Kennicott, of London, a distinguished English scholar and savant, and presumed to be related to Benjamin Kennicott, D. D., regius professor in Oxford University during the last century, and a bishop in the Church of England. In 1832 the family removed to Illinois, before Chicago could boast of a hundred buildings, and when the great Northwest was a comparative wilderness. Establishing themselves upon a large tract of land, in one of the most desirable locations in the State (about twenty miles northwest of Chicago), they early became wealthy and very successful farmers, and gained a wide reputation as pioneers in western horticulture. There they built mills, erected a trading post, and founded the village of Mettawa—called (by its English translation) Halli Day. There several of them married and settled, and have large families. Three brothers in this family graduated at medical universities, two of them were practicing physicians for several years, and two of them have been prominent as dental surgeons in Chicago. Drs. John and William Kennicott recently deceased, stood deservedly high as professional men, and they and others of their relatives are favorably known in scientific circles.

DAVID EDWARD FISKE.

Journal in the spring of 1849. His excellent business talents soon placed the enterprise on a solid basis, and brought the Journal in the front rank of weekly newspapers. Subsequently he undertook the publication of the Troy Traveler. But not finding the publication of newspapers sufficiently remunerative to suit his views, he dissolved his connection with these enterprises, and, in 1856, removed to Chicago, where he engaged several years in the dairy business, at first on a small, but afterwards on quite a large scale, and in which, by energy, prudence and perseverance, he accumulated in a few years a handsome competence. In 1864 he parted with his dairy interests and for about thirty years has been engaged in the real estate and loaning business, in which with ample means and careful management, he has attained the goal of his early ambition—a recognized position among men of wealth and influence.

Mr. Fiske, while not a man of letters, is nevertheless well versed in current literature, has decided and intelligent convictions on most subjects, and is not lacking in ability to express his views, by voice or pen, with clearness and force, and when occasion calls can maintain his ground with the best of disputants.

As the favorite legatee of his uncle, for whom he was named, and with whom he passed the greater part of his youth, Mr. Fiske has taken great and commendable delight in restoring to a highly productive and attractive condition the old farm and homestead, which has been now in possession of the family for over one hundred and fifty years.

William Fiske, Sr., youngest son of Deacon Ebenezer Fiske of Wenham, with Susanna Batchelder, his wife, and their nine children, emigrated from Wenham at an early day, and established themselves on the eastern slopes of Walnut Hill, in

Edward Fiske, second son of Allen and Eliza Fiske, was born in Troy, N. Y. At an early age he went to live with his uncle, David Fiske, in Amherst, N. H., on whose rugged farm and precipitous hillsides he readily acquired that robust health and constitution which served him so well in after years. There also he acquired, in the excellent schools of that town and vicinity, a good English education, and so much knowledge of Latin and Greek as is required to enter college. After teaching a couple of winters, he abandoned farm life and, returning to Troy, N. Y., became connected with the Family the town of Amherst, N. H., when that portion of the country was still a wilderness. There was founded the Amherst branch of the Wenham Fiskes, whose descendants, wherever located, have fully sustained the high character of their ancestry, have been noted for their ability, probity and piety, and have filled many official positions of honor and public trust. The hardships of frontier life in a country heavily timbered and rocky, shortened the days of that sturdy pioneer, William Fisk, Sr., and he died in 1777 in his fifty-second year, leaving a large family. Stanch and stalwart, the elder sons soon cleared up a large tract of land, and established homes for themselves and families. A few years later Jonathan removed to Williamstown, Vt., where he achieved a most honorable record; Ebenezer settled in Mt. Vernon, where he became prominently identified with town affairs; while William (Jr.) located himself on the old mail route from Amherst to Manchester, on a plateau lying between Walnut and Chestnut Hills. Living for awhile in a plain log house, at the close of the Revolutionary War, he built on this spot a fine mansion, which has ever since been in possession of the family. Here was raised a large family of sons and daughters, whose subsequent career reflected great credit on their early training. And here Hon. William Fiske resided until his death (June, 1831), very greatly respected by his townsmen, being called for twenty-five years to represent them in public life, both in town affairs and state government, legislative and judicial. The old homestead, which was willed first to his son David, and subsequently to a grandson of that name, is still in a most excellent state of preservation, and remains a fine specimen of the commodious and hospitable New England homes of the early days. Mr. David E. Fiske, of Chicago, who is the present owner, takes great pleasure in revisiting his boyhood's home, where he usually spends his summers, superintending improvements, and exercising the tastes of a gentleman farmer. It is his firm purpose to keep the old homestead in the family as long as he can, as the best monument to the sterling worth of those who founded the Amherst branch of the Wenham Fiskes.

Finally he reached the family of his wife at Coldwater, where for many months he fought the battle between life and death, and for most of the time during two years was dangerously ill, and was honorably discharged from service. In 1870 he was elected senator, which duty he faithfully discharged until the time of his death. He was possessed of strong mental qualities, integrity of character, was a genial companion. 951. DEA. DAVID FISKE (Samuel, Samuel, Daniel, Samuel, William, John, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Shelburne, Mass., July 17, 1791; m. Oct. 31, 1814, Laura Severance, b. 1795; d. July 6, 1870. David Fiske was born on the top of one of the beautiful hills of Shelburne, Franklin Co., Mass. He had a good common school education, and married Laura Severance, who was born in the same town. Previous to his marriage he had formed a partnership with two other young men for building and running a saw mill, a grist mill and a cloth factory at the falls of the Deerfield river, then called Salmon Falls, from the abundance of that fish caught there. These falls made a fine water power and the banks on either side were owned by Captain Martin Severance, Laura's father. For nearly twenty years he was the head of these establishments, and then chief owner. He built a pretty little house on the river side for his bride. In it were born his eight children, and three three of them died. There also their golden wedding was celebrated and there his beloved wife died, after 56 years of married life. In 1832 he sold out his manufacturing interests, having caught the western fever, and removed with his family to Ohio, making the long journey from Albany over the Erie canal by packet boat, then considered a rapid and luxurious mode of travel, and by lake to Cleveland, which was then but a pretty group of fourteen houses under the bluff by the river. There he first bought 180 acres on the bluff on which now stands the whole business part of Cleveland. But, he wanted a farm, and found better soil out at Strongsville, 18 miles southwest, and exchanged his purchase of the Cleveland site for twice as many acres, where into whose black soil he could thrust a "sabre's tail clear up to the head;" where into the hollow trunk of a fallen sycamore a man could walk upright with a tall hat on and where the black walnut trees made grand rails for fences. Six rails and posts, and rider high to keep the deer from the crops. He sold his farm on which he had built a fine house, the first between Cleveland and southern Ohio. The raising of that house was an event. He and his wife had seen too much of the baleful effects of rum in New England, it was wholly banished from their house and they determined to raise the heavy black walnut frame without its aid. They notified everybody for twenty miles around of this "raising" "without rum." Everybody said that nobody would come and the frame would have to go up on such terms. But everybody came to see and jest at the failure of these temperance cranks. When they came, however, they found a magnificent spread of mother's best cookery and long tables under fine trees and a half a dozen pretty girls to serve them and so knew that no stinginess was at the bottom of it and the boss and carpenters gave them a good report of the way they were treated by the new-comers, and all turned in to the work right merrily and the raising went off fine and after the jolly feast that crowned it the ringleader of the crowd which came to show them that they could not raise a house without rum, mounted a table and made a speech, saying that it was the best raisin' he had ever heard of, and that Mrs. Fiske was the handsomest woman and the best hostess in Ohio. At that the whole crowd thanked her and her husband for having raised their house without rum, so that they were all going home sober and yet jolly, and then the crowd gave a rousing cheer and swung their hats, and the impossible was achieved. Some kinsmen who had settled over in Michigan in Sarnia now, Jackson then, had written that there they had no fever and that there was a fine farm there for him, so they packed up their goods into covered wagons drawn by horses and cattle, and went across the black swamp, a trip of six weeks. Took the new farm and found their old enemy had followed them from Ohio so they were after a couple of years shaken out of Michigan and out of the western fever as well, and returned to Shelburne, where he bought a part of the large farm on which he was born. He ultimately exchanged it for a part of the farm on which his wife was born at the Falls, and finally, it still standing, he bought the identical house he had built for his bride, moved into it and there in 1867 his beloved wife died in the very room where eight of her children had been born. After her death he lived for eight years (part of the time only, the summers) with his eldest son, Orlando, in Shelburne, or with his brother Samuel, yet spending about two thirds of his time with his son Asa in Rochester and with Mrs. Hart in Philadelphia or New Haven. He fell asleep at 85 in his brother's house in Shelburne, in the fall of 1875, after an hour or two of suffering, with his eldest son at his bedside. He was of a most gentle, genial, kindly nature, a lover of music, of fun, of man and of God, was for many years a deacon in the Congregational Church and respected and honored by all who knew him. In his old age he straightened up after his life of hard work, grew stouter, let his luxuriant silver beard grow full, and was a marvelously fine picture of hearty, alert and serene age. His two eldest daughters married clergymen, and the eldest son, for his first wife, a sister of Fidelia Fiske. Two others of the family attained merited distinction as clergymen and authors. He d. 973. REV. ELISHA FISKE (Robert, Daniel, Daniel, Samuel, William, John, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Holliston Sept. 3, 1769; m. Lydia Robinson, d. July 11, 1805; she was dau. of John and Susanna of Milford; m. 2d, Mrs. Margaret (Shepherd) Brown, dau. of Capt. Benjamin and Hepzibah (Blake) Shepherd, of Wrentham; she was b. 1779; d. Apr. 30, 1850. Rev. Elisha Fisk was the son of Robert and Mary (Hall) Fisk, and was born in that part of Holliston now included in West Medway. At a year and a half of age his parents removed to Upton, where he spent his youth, and where he became converted under the ministry of Rev. Elisha Fish, whose name differed from his own but by a single letter. At five years of age he had read the Bible through. He set himself to gain a liberal education with reference to the ministry and by dint of perseverance, entered Brown University, and graduated in 1795, an A. M. He was tutor the three years following. While here he was approbated to preach the Gospel. He preached the first time in Wrentham on the first Sabbath in May, 1798. It was the first sermon he wrote and the text was Gen. 1; 1. It proved to be the first of a long series of discourses to that people. Nov. 6 he received a call to settle among them. The prospect was dark, indeed, but circumstances appeared to make duty very plain. He was the forty-ninth candidate and but the second who had received a call. Imagining the interminable catalogue which might follow if he declined, he determined to break the non-apostolic succession, and accepted the invitation Apr. 25. He was ordained over the first church in Wrentham June 12, 1799. Rev. Dr. Hitchcock of Providence preached the sermon. After occupying the field alone nearly 45 years, he proposed that a colleague should be settled, and Rev. Horace James was inducted into this office Nov. 1, 1843. Mr. Fisk still continued to preach almost every Sabbath at home, in surrounding vacant places, or in the pulpits of his brethren. The last Sabbath he spent on earth was employed in preaching the Gospel and breaking the sacramental bread in the church of Attleboro. It was an intensely cold day in December and the fatigue and exposure of riding in an open sleigh some ten miles was more than a human frame of over four score years' standing could endure. A cold and fever was the result, running into a lethargic state, in which the ever busy spirit, having put its weary partner of dust to sleep, softly withdrew. He died in the 82d year of his age, and 52d year of his ministry, and was buried on the day of the regular meeting of the association at his house. It was appointed to be there at his request, and he had anticipated its coming with great satisfaction, not imagining that they should be convened for his funeral. At the time of Mr. Fisk's ordination, the church was reduced to ten members; and "they were divided in their religious opinions, and in many instances strongly excited against each other, on account of the different positions, which they had taken in the controversy with his predecessor, Rev. McAvery. Of an observing mind, careful and conciliating in his conversation and manners, interesting and popular in his pulpit performances, he succeeded, as few other men would, in uniting and holding together very discordant materials, not only at the commencement of his ministry, but through the vicissitudes of more than fifty years. He gained and kept the enviable reputation of peacemaker." (Funeral Sermon by Rev. Dr. Stoops, Braintree.) As a fact illustrative of Mr. Fisk's reputation the celebrated Hannah Adams once said that another question should be added to the well known interrogatories in New England, "Who is the first man," etc., viz.: "Who is the most prudent man? Parson Fisk, of Wrentham." He was blessed with additions to his church. In 1805, 51 were added to the church. In 1815-16, 64 made profession of religion. In 1821, 43 were gathered in. Again, 58 joined in 1832. The whole number of admissions during his sole ministry was 432.

Mr. Fisk possessed an iron constitution and great perseverance and was able to labor, even in his advanced age, beyond the ability of many young men. He frequently took long walks of five and even ten miles on his exchanges. He traveled much on foot over his extensive parish. He was seldom unable to preach—but two Sabbaths in forty years. He was seldom absent, or even tardy, at associate meetings. He attended over 150 ecclesiastical councils; and did a large part of the editing of the "Christian Magazine," during its four years' continuance, and was in all ministerial labors abundant.

Rev. Nathaniel Emmons, D. D., pastor of the church in Franklin, preached the sermon at the funeral of his first wife, Lydia, July 13, 1805. The sermon was printed by H. Mann of Dedham, in Aug., 1805. The compiler of this work has a copy of the sermon.

Elisha Fisk; was installed pastor of the Evangelical Congregational Society in Harvard, Mass., Sept. 12, 1821. He preached the sermon on the one hundredth anniversary of the incorporation of that town. This sermon is deposited with the Congregational Library Association in Boston. He was a most efficient pastor, and for thirty years was a member of the school board. He died Sept. 6, 1853.

He held many town offices, as well as others; was deacon of the First Congregational Church for forty years. He had but little schooling, and that in the last century. He was brought up on a farm and when 17 years of age conducted a farm for a widow lady "on halves." He did not have a pair of boots until 18 years of age; drove turkeys to market, and put up over night when the turkeys went to roost by the wayside. Eventually he went into the village store; was a merchant some thirty years, and gave it up to his son, David B. Was Captain of the militia through the war of 1812 and 1815, but not called into active service. Was town clerk for many years; selectman, assessor, coroner, justice of the peace, treasurer, agent for procuring pensions for soldiers of the Revolution; first postmaster in Upton in 1818. In after years D. B. and D. E., his sons, were postmasters in the same town; the only case of the kind in the United States. Interested in anything that was of benefit to the town or citizens. He retired from all business in 1836, and died in 1840 in the 70th year of his age. He was born in Holliston, Mass., but resided nearly all his life in Upton, Mass., where he was an honored and respected citizen. At the time of his death Rev. Benjamin Wood, pastor of the Upton Church, officiated at his funeral. The sermon was printed in Boston by Dutton & Wentworth, and from that discourse it is learned that the deceased was a constant attendant at public worship; as a husband and father, he was tender and affectionate; as a friend, open, candid, honest and sincere; as a neighbor, kind and obliging. From his journal is copied the following: "By a kind Heavenly Father's overruling providence my lot has been cast in pleasant places and I have had a goodly heritage—been favored with general good health, taken great pleasure in the various kinds of pastoral labor, and especially enjoyed preaching Christ. To Him I owe an immense debt of gratitude for calling me by His grace and spirit and permitting me to labor so long in the delightful work of the Christian ministry. As an humble instrument in His service I will not pretend to say what I may have accomplished by my labors; but if any good to the welfare of His kingdom, to Him be all the glory." 1027. HON. ISAAH FISKE (Amos, Daniel, Samuel, Joseph, William, John, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Swanzy, Mass., Sept. 6, 1763; m. Mar. 2, 1786, Hannah Bacon. Her grandfather Bacon, with his brother, came from England. The brother, Rev. Jacob Bacon, was the pastor of the church at Plymouth, Mass. Her mother's name was Willbur. She was a lineal descendant of Rev. Samuel Mann, the first minister of the town of Wrentham, mentioned in Barber's Historical Collections of Mass. (Judge Fisk was born in Swansea, Mass., and was descended in both lines from that noble class of men who sought on "the wild New England shore" "freedom to worship God." There has been a tradition in the family that Benjamin Fisk, a brother of the great-grandfather of the subject of this sketch, was governor of the colony of Connecticut, but this has not been substantiated. A strong family likeness has always existed among the Rhode Island Fisks. In early life he resided in Rhode Island, but subsequently moved to Guilford, Vermont, a town which adjoined Brattleboro, where his father had some time before purchased land. By an unfortunate business venture he lost his patrimony, but by industry and frugality he accumulated sufficient for the purchase of new land in the interior of the State. He accordingly settled in Lyndon, Caledonia county, within 40 miles of the Canada line. In that county he ever after resided, respected and beloved by all who knew him. He received repeated proofs of the confidence of his fellow citizens, filling various important civil offices. Isaiah Fisk was one of the assistant judges of Caledonia county court, 1807, 1809, 1810, 1811, 1812. Chief judge of Caledonia county court, 1810, 1817, 1818, 1819, 1820, 1821, 1822; then the office was more important than it is now, under the revised constitution. He was a presidential elector from Vermont in 1817 and a delegate in the convention that nominated James Monroe for President. Isaiah Fisk was a member of the general assembly of Vermont for the following years from Lyndon, Vermont, Caledonia county: 1803, 1804, 1813, 1814, 1815, 1816, 1817, 1818, 1821, 1823. Besides these he filled various local offices involving more care and responsibility than emolument. Twice he was elected to the council of censors, which was then composed of thirteen members, chosen once in seven years, by a general vote. Its province was to revise all the official acts of the Legislature, executive and judiciary departments, during the past seven years, with power to send for persons, papers and records. It could pass censure, order impeachments and recommend the Legislature to repeal unconstitutional laws. Such a tribunal was a very important one. Judge Fisk remained comparatively poor where many would have amassed a fortune. It was his maxim that no man ought to enrich himself on the spoils of the public, a maxim which through life he carried to a romantic extreme. With his wife he early became a member of the church and took an active interest in it. Mrs. Fisk was very assiduous in impressing upon the minds of her children the principles of Christianity. He d. Killingly, Conn., Nov. 2, 1794; m. there Apr. 12, 1810, Lydia Aldrich; b. Killingly, Conn., Apr. 1, 1796; d. Mar. 2, 1879. She m. 2d William Smith, Benjamin B. Fisk was born in Killingly, Conn., where he learned the trade of a blacksmith. Having mastered his trade, he was soon afterward united in marriage to Lydia Aldrich. She came of Welsh descent, and in her veins flowed somewhat a sturdy feeling and marked courage and the unflinching will that her ancestors knew. In the fall of 1822, with his wife and two babies, he left Killingly for Livingston Co., New York. There he was a blacksmith, wagon builder and general mechanic for the country round about. Muscular and willing, equipped with fine physique, he did not shrink from hard toil. His shops became a source of mechanical supplies for farmers all up and down the valley. As a citizen he acquired local repute as a man of intelligence, enterprise and character. He was the captain of the militia, and was deferred to as a leading spirit in town affairs. He finally moved to Clinton, Mich., where he died after a short illness. He d. Sept. 28, 1832; res. His life has not been a very eventful one. Born in 1820 in Connecticut, in 1821 or 1822, his parents moved to the State of New York, Livingston Co., town of York; in 1830 they moved to Michigan (Clinton, Lenawee Co), where in winter times he went to school three months, in summer worked out, sometimes driving from six to ten yoke of cattle before what was called a breaking-up plow. His father died in 1832, leaving his mother with six boys, the eldest only 14 years old. He went to a trade when he was 15 years old (fanning mill making). He worked at that until he was about 22, at which time he was elected constable and served one year. In 1843 he went into a store, where he worked until 1847, at which time he enlisted in the 1st regiment of Michigan Volunteers, and went to Mexico, where he remained until the close of the war. He returned to Detroit, got an honorable discharge, made his way back to Clinton and went into business. Gold was discovered in California and he got the fever and in 1853 he crossed the plains to California, where he has wandered up and down for nearly forty-three years. He has been in the mines where he did mining and kept a trading post. He has been well off and has been poor. He has had the sciatica and a stroke of paralysis, also had a stroke of footpads two years ago, which came very near killing him. He is drawing a pension for service in the Mexican war.

I., Mar. 13, 1791; m. at Swansey, July 10, 1835, Anna Robinson, dau. of Gideon, now deceased, and Patience, now wife of Oliver Chase, of Fall River; at the time of his marriage he was of Scituate, R. I., and was married in Swansey according to the Friends' record. She was b. July 5, 1808, and d. Dec. 27, 1889. He was b. in Johnston, R. I., and died in Fall River in his 82d year. He received a liberal education for those days and early studied medicine, but did not practice until late in life. He was a fine penman and very fond of travel and taught penmanship in many places in the United States, largely to see the country. At the time of his marriage in 1835 he purchased a farm in Scituate, R. I., where he kept a private school, with a few day scholars, but mostly boarders. This school was patronized mostly by Friends and Quakers, who sent their sons there to be fitted for college or for a better education than could be obtained in the public schools in those days. In 1845 he decided to discontinue his school and practice medicine in Fall River. He was a practicing physician in that city for 25 years, highly esteemed by every one and very successful in his profession. He and his wife continued members of the Society of Friends till death and were noted for a large exercise of the old-fashioned style of genuine hospitality. No relative or friend of the family was ever allowed to go to a hotel when visiting Fall River, and Dr. Fiske's house was a rendezvous for the Abolitionist or escaping slave, and the Boston "Liberator," Garrison's paper, came to him as long as it was published. He left a homestead and quite a little property. He d. June 2, 1873; res. Fall River, Mass.

in Ashtabula, Ohio, but early moved to Rochester, N. Y., where he attended the public schools and was graduated at Wilson's private school. In 1871 he went to Columbus, Ohio, where he remained until 1883, when he came to Chicago. He studied law at the Union College of Law and was graduated with honors in June, 1886, and was at once admitted to the bar and began practice. He is an able and successful advocate and counselor. He is mayor of Lake Forest, where he resides. The Chicago Evening Post in commenting on his recent renomination said:

Since Mayor Gorton took charge of the affairs of Lake Forest's city government a number of improvements have been made in all parts of the town, and his administration has been so popular with all the residents that he was the first and unanimous choice for renomination at the late caucus. He has been unwilling to take the position, which is purely an honorary one, there being no salary provided for the mayor. Recently he handed his resignation to the city council, but it was torn up by his associates before it reached City Clerk Frazer.

Oct. 19, 1758, Sarah Hill of Camb.; d. 1774; m. 2d, Mrs. Elizabeth (Breck) Treat; d. 1786; m. 3d, Mrs. Hannah (Wells) Reynolds. The place of his nativity was Weston, Mass.; born Sept. 9, 1733. In early life he was fond of reading; graduated at Harvard College, Cambridge, 1754; ordained to the work of the gospel ministry in Brookfield, May 28, 1758. The title of D. D. was conferred on him from Harvard College in 1792. He preached his last sermon from the text, Prov. 4: 18, "But the path of the just is as a shining light," etc. In the evening of the same day, Nov. 24, 1799, he spent in company with friends in apparent health, retired to rest and sleep, which proved the sleep of death, at the age of 66. He published a discourse on the settlement and growth of Brookfield, 1775; a feast sermon, 1776; a sermon on the death of Mr. Joshua Spooner, 1778; an oration on the capture of Lord Cornwallis, 1781; a funeral sermon of Mr. Josiah Hobbs, who was killed by lightning, 1784; a volume of sermons on various subjects, 1794; Dudleian Lecture at Harvard College, 1796; two volumes of essays, entitled the "Moral Monitor," 1801, after his decease. He was married first, to Sally Hill, who died 1774; next to Mrs. Elizabeth Treat (originally Breck), who died 1786; after this to Mrs. Hannah Reynolds (originally Wells), who survived him. He had six children, five sons and one daughter. The eldest son died while a member of Harvard College. Of the two other sons who graduated there, Oliver became a physician, and Samuel first studied law and afterwards engaged in mercantile pursuits. As a preacher, it is said, he was not distinguished so much for the powers of oratory, as for purity of sentiment and perspicuity and elegance of style. He was modest and unassuming; and few men with his advantages have acquired a greater store of rich and varied knowledge. He was highly esteemed by the people of his charge and by his clerical brethren; as a learned divine, a reputable author, acceptable preacher and devoted to the various duties of his profession. Joseph Craft, like his brothers, was a smart, active, business man, and was held in high esteem by his townsmen. He was an ardent patriot, and was in active service during a long period of the war of the Revolution. He was present at the battle of Lexington, and was Lieutenant in command of the company of Newton minute men at that time. They remained on duty for four days following that battle. Again, in 1776, we learn from the records that by order of the council, he marched as Lieutenant in command of his company, Dec. 9, 1776, to join Col. Thomas Craft's regiment at Boston, and among the privates in his company was Samuel Craft. Again, in 1778, he was Lieutenant of the company of Capt. Edward Fuller, Col. Thrasher's regiment; detailed to guard the British troops, Sept. 2, 1778. Finally, in 1780, he once more went into the field, and marched with his company to reinforce the Continental army. He took an active part in town affairs. On Dec. 18, 1776, he was chosen on a committee to adjust matters relative to "an allowance for soldiers for services done in the war since Apr. 19, 1775, and also to consider in what manner the war shall be supported by the inhabitants in the future." He gave substantial aid in the cause of liberty by loaning £200 to the town, Jan. 6, 1777, for the purpose of paying the soldiers. He was also a selectman in Newton during that year, 1777, and doubtless held many other positions of trust and responsibility, of which we are not informed. With his brother, Samuel, he was a residuary legatee of his father's estate, which was very large. From the town records we learn that he was taxed in Newton, Oct. 1, 1798, for seventy-eight acres of land, valued at $2,612. By his first wife he had five children, besides an infant which cost the life of its mother, and did not survive. By his second marriage he had ten children, and none by his third wife. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. He d. in 1785, in Pennsylvania, where he had gone on business. Res. Waltham, Mass.

He was a very liberal man and deacon in the Baptist Church, and conducted what was called in those days a "Baptist Hotel." He entertained a great many people free of charge. June 24, 1841; a Baptist minister, who preached in the meeting house on Fisk Hill for a good many years and until his health failed, and he gave up preaching. He was college educated and a very talented man, none superior or equal to him in the very large association. He owned and worked on his farm. It is remembered how in the winter season Rev. Leonard and many of the congregation would go to Dea. Fisk's hotel to spend the noon hour in the large old house. Three rooms would be well warmed, one for men, where apples and cider would be freely passed round and the minister and perhaps one or two or more of the old people invited to the pantry for a lunch. Then tobacco and pipes passed round. The minister was quite a smoker, and two of the old deacons took snuff. One of them lived to be 104 years old, and he was summoned as a witness after he was 100 years old to the court in Worcester in the case of a pauper between two towns when he was one of the selectmen of Sturbridge. Another of the rooms was for the women, where the deacon's wife would furnish some warm drink and apples. The other room was for the children and they had apples. There was no Sunday school in those days, not in that church. The children of Sally and Rev. Zenas L. Leonard were: 1. Henry F., b. Aug. 14, 1800; m. Ann F. Burrough; d. June 23, 1831. 2. Sally Leonard d. at the residence of her son Manning Leonard, Esq., in the adjoining town of Southbridge, July 18, 1868, aged 86 years 3 months and 12 days. "Mrs. Leonard's extreme age made her an interesting link with the past. She was granddaughter of the two first settlers of Sturbridge—Lieutenant Henry Fiske, and his brother, Deacon Daniel Fiske, who pitched their tent in 1731 on what has been known ever since as 'Fiske Hill'."

"Her father was Deacon Henry Fiske, son of the first named, who was the sixth of a family of 14 children, and her mother, Sarah, daughter of the last named, and the second of a family of 16 children, and they were married May 5, 1774. Her father died Dec. 10, 1815, aged 70, and her mother next day, aged 69, and they were both buried in one grave in the old cemetery in Sturbridge. They had nine children, Mrs. L. being the sixth, and was born in 1782, a year celebrated for the birth of a great number of prominent men in this country, the last of whom—Gov. Levi Lincoln—died May 29, 1868. She was married Sept. 1, 1799, to Rev. Zenas L. Leonard, a native of Bridgewater, who had then been pastor of the Baptist Church on Fiske Hill more than four years, with which church she united. Although she was very young when she assumed the responsible duties of a minister's wife, which position, like that of the minister, was no sinecure at that period, yet she developed at once a remarkable capacity for the position. Though not rapid in her movement yet her wonderful tact, perfect system, untiring industry, enabled her to accomplish a vast amount of work. She was free from eccentricity, selfishness and hypocrisy, just what she professed and appeared to be, and every day alike. Their new home was established in sight of her birthplace during the first year of this century, and was the center of attraction to her for nearly sixty-eight years. In addition to his pastoral duties, her husband was for many years much engaged in instructing the youth of the neighborhood, having students in his family who were fitted for college and the prominent positions of business life. She sympathized with him, and aided him in all his labors, and was indeed a helpmate. A very interesting sketch of his life was published by Dr. Wm. Sprague, of Albany, in his 'Annals of the American Pulpit,' 6th vol., pages

347-354. to which the writer referred for many of the prominent events of her life. Suffice it to say, in this delightful home, where was always dispensed a courteous and bounteous hospitality, friend and stranger alike welcomed and needs supplied, they reared a family of seven children, three of whom only survived their mother. The father died June 24, 1841, so that she has had a widowhood of more than twenty-seven years. She remained at the homestead where her son Linus Leonard deceased Aug. 12, 1862, until her 86th birthday—the 4th of Apr., 1868, when she made a brief visit to her daughter, Mrs. Emmons, and then came to her son's in Southbridge, where an accident befel her on the 12th of June, which caused her five weeks of intense suffering, and with her other maladies and weaknesses of age, resulted in her death. She bore her pains with wonderful patience and resignation, and as characteristic of her whole life seemed more interested for others' comfort than her own. Her obsequies were attended at her son's house, Sunday afternoon, July 19, 1868, at three o'clock, and it was pleasant to look upon her calm and placid features which seemed to have renewed comparative youth, and to feel that she had attained eternal rest. She was buried beside her husband and eldest son in the new cemetery in Sturbridge.

"Two sisters survive her, and she left quite a number of descendants to the third generation, in whose hearts, and those of numerous relatives and friends who knew her excellencies, her memory is sacredly enshrined. She will be sadly missed, with her cheerful, cordial greeting, tender inquiry and constant interest, but we could not wish her back to the sufferings and wearinesses of age. She has lived a long and active, useful and somewhat eventful life, and her rest must be sweet and glorious." Southbridge Journal.

Fisk Hill is the most beautiful swell of land in the town, possessing fertility, and commanding an extensive and delightful view, in every direction. Here you have to the west, a full view of the village of Sturbridge Centre, one mile, and beyond in the same direction the view of Fiskdale appears to very good advantage; at the north as far as the vision can extend, you catch a view of the azure Monadnock, hardly distinguishable from the surrounding atmosphere; very much nearer, about twenty-seven miles away, the Wachuset appears head and shoulders above her neighbors; nearer still, the town of Leicester presents a beautiful appearance twelve miles distant. At the east you have a view of the village of Charlton, on a graceful swell of land, presenting a stately, and no less beautiful appearance. Thence southerly, the eye sweeps over an expansion of varied and lofty scenery, exhibiting spires, churches, villages, and scattered residences, intermixed with the beauties of nature. Take it all in all, the eye may dwell with a high degree of pleasure on a rare assemblage of natural and artificial attractions.

Transporting ourselves back to that period, when our Fisk ancestors first commenced a settlement here, we may, in imagination, catch a view of the almost unbroken forest, which was spread out around them. Contrasting that scene with the present, the change has lessened the sublimity of the prospect, but not its beauties. This selection by the original settlers, viz. —Henry and Daniel Fisk—is a manifestation of good taste and sound judgment. The breezes here are somewhat searching, but not too much so for health and a vigorous constitution. First settled by them, the land comprising this very fertile hill, continued in their possession and that of their descendants more than a century before any of it passed into the hands of others except such persons as had married into the Fisk families. This section of the town has probably exceeded every other in point of strength and productiveness of soil. The farms still exhibit a neat appearance, and evidence of skillful cultivation. If the soil at the commencement of the spring is so wet as to delay tillage, the autumn almost invariably presents heavy crops. The original highway was laid out directly over the highest point of Fiske Hill, and it is still the favorite drive. A new highway shunning and passing around it to the southeast was built in 1839, and the rapid traveler, for a little more ease, foregoes the pleasure of an admirable landscape, spread out before him, in passing over Fiske Hill.

On page 17, Historical Sketch of Sturbridge and Southbridge, Hon. George Davis says: "On the southern declivity of this elevation was situated the neat and comfortable Baptist Church. Here those families [of the Fisks], with others of that denomination in various parts of the town, worshiped more than half a century. The Rev. Zenas L. Leonard was the watchman on this watch tower. Mr. Leonard was 'in season and out of season' in his devotion to the spiritual interests of his charge."

The church building was raised June 3, 1784, on the land of Henry Fisk, and in it several ministers preached previous to August, 1795, in which month Rev. Z. L. Leonard first preached. During a period of thirty-six years he had immediate charge of the congregation. Rev. Addison Parker followed him, preaching in this building, and he then preached in a new building that was raised in Sturbridge Centre in 1832.

The late Henry Morse Fisk (deceased Apr. 13, 1890) said: "The old building was on the farm of Mr. John McKinstry, and when he sold his farm in the winter of 1832 or spring of 1833 to Leonard Upham, he bounded on the land of Daniel Fiske without naming the meeting-house lot, and Mr. Upham said he should hold the house and lot. The society did not want the house and Mr. McKinstry paid for the building and land to the church or society. Mr. Upham soon after took the building down, but what use was made of the material is not known."

As a neighbor, a townsman, a citizen, and a Christian, he was kind, liberal and exemplary. He resided northerly on the elevation of Fisk Hill. He possessed a strong intellect, and a memory, in which were treasured very many important facts and events of the stirring times in which he lived. The causes of the Revolution, and subsequent transactions, were fresh in his memory. He was a prominent and efficient man in civil and religious concerns. He left an extensive diary, which is a valuable reference work. His conversation was always edifying and calculated to make a salutary impression. Not only in his conversation but in the transactions of life was clearly manifested his implicit dependence on Divine guidance in regard to the path of duty. To this may be traced no doubt in no small degree, that cheerfulness and serenity which uniformly marked his deportment. Capt. Fisk's personal appearance was manly and commanding. He died at an advanced age. He was in active service during the Revolution about six months, and received a wound in a battle which affected him through life. He d. Feb. 28, 1840; res. His father died when he was but five years of age and ever after took care of himself. While in the army he rose to the rank of Ensign in a Massachusetts company. Shortly after the close of the war with his brother he migrated to Vermont and settled at Randolph, on land he made a farm of, about a mile up the "Branch" (of White river, as the little stream was called, above where is now the village of East Randolph. I have been told he cut the first tree cut down in clearing up the town of Randolph. Here several of his older children were born. After a few years he moved down into the village of East Randolph and kept "tavern" (hotel was a name not in use in those days) there. Was appointed and reappointed for many years "Justice of the Peace;" was always after that universally called "Esquire" Fisk by everybody who knew him, till his death. After some years he moved again ten miles up the "Branch" to East Brookfield, where his younger children were born. In 1820 he moved to Bethel, Vt., where he died. He enlisted at Greenwich in the Revolutionary army in which he served three years and six months. He served in the Indian campaign, participated in the battle of Stillwater and was in Monmouth when the British surrendered. He d. in Bethel, Vt., Dec. 13, 1848; res. Randolph, Vt.

1224. HON. JAMES FISK (Stephen, William, Nathan, Nathan, Nathaniel, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Oct. 4, 1763, Greenwich, Mass.; m. there Apr. 27, 1786, Priscilla West, b. Tolland, Conn., Nov. 20, 1763; d. Swanton, Vt., Aug. 19, 1840. She was dau. of Caleb West who res. in Greenwich, Mass. He was born at Greenwich, Mass., Oct. 4, 1763. His father died before the subject of this sketch was old enough to realize the loss. A short time before he was sixteen he joined the Continental army under Gen. Washington as a private soldier, and during the remainder of the war cheerfully bore his share of the sufferings and hardships of those who fought for freedom.

At his discharge from the army he returned to his native town, and, after attending a district school the first winter, was employed in teaching school during several subsequent winters and labored by the month the rest of the time until he was married, when he moved onto a piece of forest land which he cleared and reduced to a state of cultivation by his own labor. He was elected a member of the Assembly of Massachusetts, from Greenwich, when in his 22d year, and continued a member of that body for six or seven years, serving during 1791-92-93-95 and 1806. Soon afterward he began to preach the doctrines of Universalism. When 35 years of age, in 1797, he removed to Barre in Vermont, and continued in the clerical profession for some time. Later he was elected to the General Assembly in the fall of 1801 which sat at Newbury.

Soon after taking his seat in that body, by his talent, energy and integrity, he gained the confidence of his political party and the respect and esteem of his political opponents.

He continued to be annually elected to the Assembly until he was chosen a Representative to Congress in 1805, and continued a member of that body until Mar. 4, 1815. During his career in Congress he was ever found the firm supporter of his country's honor. He was in favor of a resort to arms rather than resort to the haughty dictation of the self styled "Mistress of the Seas." He voted for the declaration of war in 1812 and supported that measure in the hall of Congress, and among his fellow citizens at home. Many now living well remember with what interest, in 1812 and 1813 in assemblies of the people, they listened to his voice, the voice of a Revolutionary soldier, as he vindicated the measures of the general government, described the insults and indignities which had been heaped upon our government and people by a foreign power, and called upon them to vindicate their rights and fame. He enjoyed the confidence and esteem of Jefferson, Madison and Monroe and their prominent supporters. In June, 1812, he was offered by President Madison the position of Postmaster General, but declined.

In July, 1812, he was appointed Judge of the territory of Indiana by James Madison with the advice and consent of the Senate, but declined the office. The strenuous opposition of his friends to his leaving the State induced him not to accept the appointment. He was possessed of a good mind, sound judgment, and was an excellent reasoner. He was of great integrity, and one of the few who held and was offered positions of trust without seeking them; he was a man of unusual ability. He was both a personal and political friend of President Monroe, and at Montpelier on the morning of July 24, 1817, at eleven o'clock, he had the pleasure of delivering the address of welcome in behalf of the citizens of Montpelier and vicinity to the President on reaching Montpelier on his tour through the New England States. In 1802 he was Assistant Judge and in 1809 Chief Judge of Orange County, Vermont, and in 1815 and 1816 he was appointed one of the Judges of the Supreme Court of Vermont. In 1817 he was elected a Senator in Congress, which office he held but one year and resigned. He was afterward Collector of Customs for this district for eight years. He was marked for his decision of character, his strict integrity, his powers of persuasion and his kind, affable deportment. He was a selfmade, a selftaught man. He has filled many offices with honor to himself and to his constituents. His last days were tranquil and serene. In describing the speakers at the great war meeting in 1812, Mr. Thompson in his history of Vermont says: "On one side sat the small-sized, keen-eyed, ready-witted and really talented James Fisk of Barre, who was then a member of Congress and who had now come on to act as the champion of the Democrats at this meeting." In 1809 the degree of A. M. was conferred upon him by Middlebury College. He enlisted for service in the Revolutionary war in Nov., 1781, in Capt. Wm. Willis' Company in Col. John Brooks' Regiment of the Mass. line. He resided in Hardwick and Greenwich, Mass. He applied for a pension July 23, 1832, from Swanton, Vt., where he was then residing. He was a farmer and removed from Needham to Framingham and there sold his farm to his son Moses. He was born in Natick and always resided there. Before the stirring events of the Revolution a military company had been formed in Natick, and officers chosen for any emergency. A muster-roll of this company has fallen into my hands, and I give it to readers now for the first time. It was under the command of Captain James Mann, in Colonel Samuel Bullard's regiment, and marched on the alarm of the Battle of Bunker Hill. They were all residents of the town of Natick, and were allowed 1d. per mile traveled for their services, which amounted, for the whole company for two days' services, to £11 8s. 9d. The original roll is in the hands of Eben Mann, Myrtle, corner of Belknap St., Boston, who is great-grandson of Captain James Mann. Captain Mann's place was that now owned by Mr. Calvin Leland. Among the names enrolled is found that of Moses Fiske, private. He was Selectman, Member of the Legislature, and held other town offices. Mann in Col. Bullard's regiment. About the time of the Revolution he was a Selectman and as such signed the following: "We, the subscribers, do truly and sincerely acknowledge, profess, testify, and declare, that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, is and of right ought to be, a free, sovereign, and independent State; and we do swear that we will bear true faith and allegiance to the said Commonwealth, and that we will defend the same against traitorous conspiracies and all hostile attempts whatsoever. And that we do renounce, and abjure all allegiance, subjection, and obedience to the King, Queen, or Governor of Great Britain (as the case may be), and every other foreign power whatsoever. And that no foreign prince, person, prelate, state or potentate, hath or ought to have any jurisdiction, superiority, pre-eminence, authority, dispensing or other power, in any matter, civil, ecclesiastical, or spiritual, within this Commonwealth, except the authority or power which is or may be vested by their constituents in the Congress of the United States. And we do further testify and declare, that no man, or body of men, hath or can have any right to absolve or discharge us from the obligations of this oath, declaration, or affirmation. And that we do make this acknowledgment, profession, testimony, declaration, denial, renunciation and abjuration, heartily and truly, according to the common meaning and acceptation of the foregoing words, without any equivocation, mental evasion, or secret reservation whatsoever. So help us God." He held other town offices and at one time was a member of the Legislature. Hannah Fisk, 4 years old, was shot by her brother, a few years in advance of her in age. John (the name of the brother who committed the act) had been out with a still older brother in hunting excursions, and at this time leveled the gun, which happened to be loaded, at his infant sister, remarking that "he would kill a wild goose." The contents of the gun were lodged in the side of the girl, who fell instantly over the warping bars, in the northeast chamber of the house. The stains of the blood on the floor were not many years since plainly to be seen.

1247. ENSIGN DAVID FISKE (John, John, Nathaniel, Nathan, Nathaniel, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Holliston, Mass., Apr. 16, 1732; m. Sarah Bullard, of East Medway; dau. of John; d. in 1830. David Fiske, son of John and Abigail Leland Babcock, b. Apr. 16, 1732, was a noted descendant from many noted English families, viz.: Fiskes, Lelands and Babcocks; the latter name being among those old, noted and true Pilgrims who sailed from Holland in ship Anne, and came to this country to worship God according to the dictates of their own consciences. Mr. Fiske was a man of great energy of character; faithful to the trusts confided to him; an active business man; a large and successful farmer; owner of large tracts of land in this vicinity. He was a man of military attainments and ambitious to serve his country and State in the early wars with the Indians, and it is recorded in his private daily diary of his marching from his native town, May 22, 1758, through many of the western towns of the State to New York, there meeting other regiments and troops from other states. They captured many forts and dispersed enemies, and their raid was a success. Returning home he settled on his farm again, where he prospered in his chosen vocation, rearing and educating a large family; and it is said of him that when the sons became of age he gave each one of them a farm, except the youngest, Timothy (to him he gave a college education), who graduated at Harvard as M. D. In his diary are found receipts for goodly sums of money given to all his children at their majority. He d. Dec. 23, 1817; res. Holliston, Mass.

His father, Isaac, purchased land in Oxford, opposite Town's Pond, upon which he went to reside. There he was married to his wife, the daughter of the local clergyman. He had studied medicine elsewhere, and was well versed in physics in all its intricate branches. He soon became the leading physician of the town and was also well known in all the country round about. He had many students, for in those early days the prospective physician was obliged to study with a regular practitioner. Among his students who later became celebrated were Drs. Holbrook, of Thompson, Conn., and Dr. Bullard of Sutton. Besides being a successful practitioner he was very active and public spirited in town affairs. He was an active free mason and one of the leading men in the formation of the Oxford society, a stockholder in the Central Cotton Mfg. Co., an adherent of Shay's in the famous incipient rebellion. He went to Cambridge at the time of the siege of Boston, had, it is related, an interview with Gen. Washington, and was offered a surgeon's appointment, which he declined. He was Selectman in 1782-3-4. Erected the residence he resided in in 1791, which is still standing. At his death, by his request, no Masonic services were held at his grave. The funeral was very largely attended and was a remarkable occasion. He d. Aug. 6, 1815; res. Oxford, Mass.

In a letter to a friend he says, after mentioning the States he had passed through, "I think of all the places in my travels, no one equals this. It is without exception the finest country I ever heard or saw for goodness, but the inhabitants are indolent, living from hand to mouth. Millions of acres of land in this, the Northwest Territory, are as level as a floor, without a tree upon it, but grass as high as your head on horseback, and very thick; 100 bushels of corn to the acre; wheat good, but no good mills at present; through idleness. Can keep 200 hogs, 100 cows, 50 horses here as easy as you can five hogs. I have been to the lead mines and find there is made in this territory 3,000 tons of lead per year." He remained west until the war of 1812 and enlisted. Was acting Adjutant at Newport, Ky. He was graduated at Dartmouth College, in 1791; studied theology with Rev. Dr. Lyman, at Hatfield, and was ordained to the ministry at Hadley in May, 1794. For some time he preached as an evangelist in Geneva, N. Y.; Milford, Conn., and North Brookfield, Mass. He declined these calls, but accepted one to New Braintree, Mass., where he was installed pastor in Aug., 1796. In 1809 he had a revival which was prolonged two years, and this was repeated in 1818-19-26-31-42, by which large numbers were gathered in the church. He preached his half-century discourse in the New Braintree church, Oct. 26, 1846, which was published. He was interested in education, was one of the efficient helpers in the building up of Amherst College, and received the degree of D. D. from that institution in 1844. He continued to preach and perform pastoral duties, with the assistance of a colleague, until Oct., 1854. He spent sixty-one years in the actual ministry, and above sixty-eight with the same people. In person he was tall, well-proportioned, of dignified manners, of serene and intelligent countenance. He possessed a clear, well balanced mind, and a general completeness of character seldom found. His pulpit efforts were marked by eminent good sense and great appropriateness, especially in prayer. A number of his discourses were published. He d. Mar., 1855; res. New Braintree, Mass.

William Fiske, the father, was ordained at Mr. Beecher's church. He returned south two years ago, and has been in the employ of the government as superintendent of schools in a district about New Orleans. He has always felt a deep interest in the blacks, and since he has been among them he has preached constantly, as well as taught them. But he felt that he could be of more use and have more influence, if he were an ordained minister, and as he was obliged to come North, on account of ill health, he improved the opportunity of having the rite performed.

1368. HON. THOMAS FISKE (Asa, Thomas, Thomas, Samuel, James, Phinehas, Thomas, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Dublin, N. H., Dec. 29, 1802; m. there Apr. 19, 1832, Sophia Appleton, dau. of Dea. Francis and Mary (Ripley) Appleton, b. Nov. 15, 1806, d. Oct. 2, 1890. Hon. Thomas Fisk was bred a farmer, having few advantages for an education besides those furnished by the common school. In the winter seasons from 1822 to 1840 he was mostly employed in teaching public and private schools. For nearly twenty years, commencing Mar., 1824, he was a member of the Superintending School Committee of his native town; and during that time he had the satisfaction of seeing the common schools of Dublin rise from the lowest to the highest rank among similar institutions in the State. While farming was his principal business, he has been employed more or less in surveying lands, and routes for roads, in settling estates and in taking care of funds belonging to individuals. He was one of the compilers of the "History of Dublin," published in 1855, which is regarded as a work of some merit. He has held several positions of honor and trust, among them are that of Town Clerk; agent to defend the town in several long and perplexing law suits; agent having charge of the town funds ($18,768.80) from Mar., 1842, till he was 70 years of age; moderator, having presided over more annual and other meetings of the town than any other individual that has ever resided there; representative in 1847, 1857, 1858; State Senator 1859, 1860; State commissioner to prevent the spread of contagious diseases among cattle, 1864-1865; Justice of the Peace from 1842 to 1857, and from 1857 has been Justice of the Peace and Quorum throughout the State. He has devoted much time and attention to promote the causes of education, temperance and universal freedom. He d. Apr. 30, 1889; res. Dublin, N. H.

2612. i. JESSE APPLETON, b. June 7, 1836. He volunteered in Aug., 1862, and entered the service as a Sergeant in Company A, Fourteenth Regiment, New Hampshire Volunteers. Nov. 2, 1863, he was commissioned Second Lieutenant of Company E, Fourteenth Regiment, and May 27, 1864, he was promoted to First Lieutenant of Company K, in the same regiment. On being mustered in as First Lieutenant he took command of the company which he held to his death. He was killed in the battle of Winchester, Va., Sept. 19, 1864. An officer of the regiment said of him: "Lieutenant Fisk will be remembered as a dutiful son, an affectionate brother, a dear friend, an agreeable companion, a kind neighbor, a true soldier, and a brave officer. His townsmen bear ample testimony to his worth as a citizen and a man. In the army too, officers and men keep his memory green, and sadly call to mind that he will no more join them on the march, at bivouac, in camp or where death shots fall thick and fast. He was ever ready to do a kind deed, both at home and abroad, and many a soldier remembers him kindly for attentions received at his hands while on a sick bed. He was prompt to do his duty and 'died at his post' in the van of the fight. A patriot's honors rest upon his brow."

Aug. 16, 1776; m. at Isle La Motte, Vt., Polly Scott, dau. of Henry, b. 1787; d. Jan. 23, 1864. Samuel Fisk, Esq., was born Aug. 9, A. D. 1776; came to Isle La Motte, in the State of Vermont, with his father Ichabod Ebenezer Fisk, a collegiate in the year A. D. 1788, said family being one of the first families who settled said Isle La Motte and located upon the real estate which afterward developed into the Fisk Marble Quarry in said Isle La Motte. Through the opportunities afforded by his father, Samuel became well educated. He had a very peculiar manner of expressing his ideas in language that indicated a large degree of magnanimity which he actually possessed. His sayings and aphorisms were remembered by his contemporaries and handed down to posterity. Those who knew him in his lifetime say that he was never known to distress or to attempt to distress or injure a person no matter how much he might be aspersed, maligned or traduced; retaliation and vindictiveness being foreign to his nature. He was always affable and generous in his impulses. The writer hereof lived a near neighbor to Samuel Fisk fifty years ago and knows that the statements above narrated are true. Samuel Fisk was one of the first organizers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in said Isle La Motte, and always gave liberally from his large resources for the maintenance of said church during his lifetime. He represented his town in the General Assembly of the State of Vermont in the year A. D. 1802, and gave his town a name at said Legislature, calling it "Vineyard." It bore that name until 1830, when it was changed and named "Isle La Motte." The said Samuel was the first of the Fisk family who originated and developed the noted Fisk Marble Quarry in Isle La Motte. By this industry and his large farming operations he became wealthy and was the richest man in town for a number of years and up to his death, which occurred at Isle La Motte Jan. 25, 1858. In his lifetime he married Polly Scott, and their children's names were Sylvia, Laura, Julia, Ira E., Nelson, Henry S., Hiram C., Sarah and Julius S., who are all deceased. Samuel Fisk was 81 years 5 months and 16 days old at his decease. He d. Jan. 25, 1858; res. Isle La Motte, Vt.

He is the only child of Edmund Brewster Green, of Smyrna, Del., and Mary (Fiske) Bound, of Middletown, Conn. The father was editor of newspapers in Hartford, New York and Panama, where he died in 1852, and his widow married Hon. Edwin W. Stoughton, of New York, in 1855. The son's name was originally Edmund Fiske Green. In 1855 he took the name of his maternal great-grandfather, John Fiske. He lived at Middletown during childhood and until he entered Harvard, where he was graduated in 1863. He was graduated at the Harvard Law School in 1865, having been already admitted to the Suffolk bar in 1864, but has never practiced law. His career as author began in 1861, with an article on "Mr. Buckle's Fallacies," published in the "National Quarterly Review." Since that time he has been a frequent contributor to American and British periodicals. In 1869-71 he was university lecturer on philosophy at Harvard; in 1870 instructor in history there, and in 1872-79 assistant librarian. On resigning the latter place, in 1879, he was elected a member of the board of overseers, and at the expiration of the six years' term was re-elected in 1885. Since 1881 he has lectured annually on American history at Washington University, St. Louis, Mo., and since 1884 has held a professorship of American history at that institution, but continues to make his home at Cambridge. He lectured on American history at University College, London, in 1879, and at the Royal Institution of Great Britain in 1880. Since 1871 he has given many hundred lectures, chiefly upon American history, in the principal cities of the United States and Great Britain. The largest part of his life has been devoted to the study of history; but at an early age inquiries into the nature of human progress led him to a careful study of the doctrine of evolution, and it was as an expounder of this doctrine that he first became known to the public. In 1871 he arrived at the discovery of the causes of the prolonged infancy of mankind, and the part played by it in determining human development; and the importance of this contribution to the Darwinian theory, now generally admitted, was immediately recognized by Darwin and Spencer. His published books are: "Tobacco and Alcohol" (New York, 1868); "Myths and Myth-Makers" (Boston, 1872); "Outlines of Cosmic Philosophy, based on the Doctrine of Evolution" (2 vols., London, 1874, republished in Boston); "The Unseen World" (Boston, 1876); "Darwinism, and Other Essays" (London, 1879; new and enlarged edition, Boston, 1885); "Excursions of an Evolutionist" (Boston, 1883); "The Destiny of Man Viewed in the Light of His Origin" (Boston, 1884); "The Idea of God as affected by Modern Knowledge" (Boston, 1885); and "American Political Ideas Viewed from the Standpoint of Universal History" (New York, 1885); "Critical Period of American History" (1888); "Beginnings of New England" (1889); "The War of Independence, for Young People" (1889); "Civil Government in the United States" (1890); "American Revolution," 2 vols. (1891); "Discovery of America," 2 vols. (1892); "History of the United States, for Schools" (1894). All the above published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co. Also "Edward Livingston Youman's Interpreter of Science for the People" (New York, D. Appleton & Co., 1894); "A Japanese Translation of The Destiny of Man" was published at Tokio in 1893.

He received degree of doctor of letters from the University of Pennsylvania, 1894; doctor of laws, Harvard University, 1894; has been a fellow of the American Academy of Sciences, member of the American Oriental Society, American Folk-Lore Society, British Folk-Lore Society, Massachusetts Historical Society, Military Historical Society of Massachusetts, Essex Institute, American Geographical Society, American Antiquarian Society, Historical Societies of Virginia, Missouri, California, Oneida County, N. J., in 1815, Judith Qureaux, b. 1801; d. 1865. Haley Fisk was born in Cumberland, R. I., in 1793. He was a machinist and engineer by trade, and while in Paterson, N. J., during the war of 1812, raised a company, of which he was Lieutenant, and went to Cape May for duty as a member of the State Militia; was not called on to go further. He was an expert swordsman and a good musician. During his life he had charge of a powder mill at Spotswood, N. J., which blew up after he left there. He was also in charge of the work of building the lower lock of the Delaware and Raritan canal at that city, when the canal was built, and afterward started the first iron foundry in that city and built the boiler and engine with which it was run. Before this was finished he ran the foundry by horse power. He was a friend of Henry Clay and other prominent Whig politicians and was a power in politics in the 40's, and up to the war, in that city and county, was Justice of the Peace for over thirty-five years. For a number of years he was a county judge, and was prominent in social affairs. His honesty was a proverb and as Justice he preferred to have litigants settle their differences rather than throw money into his hands by litigation. He was a Mason and when the two lodges of F. & A. M's. in that city were broken up during the anti-Masonic craze he was the means of gathering the members together and forming what was called the Union Lodge, which is still in existence. Nathaniel Fisk was an active, zealous Mason, as also were all his sons by his first wife, Lois Van Buren Hall. During the days of anti-Masonry, by the appointment of the Grand Lodge he had much to do in tracing out the life of Morgan, who was said to have been murdered by the Masons for being untrue to his Masonic obligations. Mr. Fisk found positive proof that Morgan was not murdered, but left the United States, went to Germany, where he lived many years and died there. One of our foreign Ministers saw Morgan in Germany, recognizing him and conversed with him concerning the reports of his murder. He d. in West Bush, N. Y.; res. Mayfield, N. Y.

Y., June 14, 1832, Adelia Wells, b. Mar. 7, 1812; d. July 27, 1888. Lonson and his brothers went to Newark at such an early age that important links in the history back of Jonathan were either not known to them or were lost or forgotten. The old family homestead is located about three miles southwest of Newark, N. Y., and on this farm nine children were born, all now (1895) alive, although the father and mother are dead. The father was deacon of the Newark Baptist Church forty years; held town and village offices, and, although one of the early settlers there, accumulated a very respectable property. He and his wife lived to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of marriage, enjoying the occasion in the presence of their unbroken family, together for the first time in twenty years. Lonson Fisk was a farmer's son, and chose farming as a life occupation for himself. At the age of 21 he located on a farm adjoining his father's, near Newark, in the southwest part of Wayne Co., New York. He had a good common school education, and by reading kept pace with the times in knowledge of the world's doings. He was a Christian man in the full sense of the word, and gave liberally of his time and means to the church. He, though interested in political affairs, never held office. In 1873 he left the farm in the care of one of his sons and resided in the village of Newark until his death. He d. Dec. 19, 1885; res. Newark, N. Y.

1562. WASHINGTON FISKE (Joseph, Joseph, Mark, Joseph, William, William, John, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Goffstown, N. H., Feb. 15, 1804; m. in Eden, Vt., Jan. 14, 1834, Hannah Whitney Alden, dau. of William and Susannah (Whitney) Alden, b. Needham, Mass., Sept. 13, 1806; d. Nov. 16, 1885, in Ashland. He remembers back to the age of two and a half years when a company of militia were passing the house, and the family had assembled at the windows leaving no place for him. So he thrust his head out of the cat-hole near the floor. The captain saw his head and wishing a little sport rode up and drawing his sword said, "Take your head in or I shall cut it off." At his advanced age of nearly 92 he laughs about it now and says it is needless to say his head went in. When 4 years of age his father moved to Eden, Vt., on a two-horse sled. He rode on one side of the sled while his sister Margaret sat upon the other side so no points of interest should be passed unnoticed on the way. At the age of 14 he and his sister Margaret were bound out to their brother Clark, until they became of age, to work out the old debt Clark had paid for his father when he lost so much as a huckster. He came to Boston at 21, and drove stage from Boston to Worcester for a few years. During that time became acquainted with Hannah Whitney Alden, and returned to Eden, bought a farm, erected buildings (near his father's home), and married, Jan. 14, 1834. There his six children were born, and in 1855 moved to Hyde Park, on account of better schools for his children. He returned to his own home in Eden in 1861. Sold and bought a farm in Ashland, Mass., in Apr., 1865, where he now (1895) lives at the age of 91 years and 7 months. He was always and even now is fun-loving, believing that it is better to not watch for the solemn shadows that will surely find us, but make the most of life as we go along. Honest and upright in his dealings, often telling his children that no Fiske was ever behind the bars. Is a Congregationalist in creed, Republican in politics. An Ashland paper in referring to its aged citizen says: "Four Score and Twelve Years.—Our honored townsman, Washington Fiske, reached the age of 92 years last Saturday, and was able to be up and receive his friends who called upon him with congratulations for a life so well rounded out in years, strength and usefulness. Your correspondent was shown the photographic group of four generations which are now represented in this household—Mr. Fiske, senior, the central figure; at his right his son, G. C. Fiske; his granddaughter, Mrs. Nina (Fiske) Prouty; and at his left his great-grandson, Claude Granville Prouty. Among the guests was his niece, Mrs. Lizzie Bassett, of Worcester. Mr. Fiske bids fair to round out the century, although he has for many years suffered from intemperance to which ordinary men would have succumbed." Res. Eden, Vt., and Ashland, Mass.

He resided at home in Londonderry until he was 20 years of age, when he went to Boston, where he was first engaged in the construction of wharves, and shortly afterwards turned his attention to coöperage. Later brick manufacturing and operations in real estate occupied most of his time and attention. However, he found time to successfully operate a quarry and till a large acreage for farm purposes. Before Somerville became a city he was for a number of years one of its selectmen and prominent in its affairs. He was one of the heaviest tax payers, as his interests in real estate were large. Being too old he was not drafted, but paid a man $500 to serve in the army at the time of the late war. One fact occurs as being important: He owned the patent and built the first kiln for the manufacture of bricks with one side glazed or marbledized. Bricks so treated are in quite general use today. Gen. James Dana and he owned and developed a large part of the northeasterly side of Somerville. He was abstemious, honest, frugal, of intense activity, and a very successful man of business in those days. Fruit culture was his hobby. He d. Apr. 12, 1866; res. Somerville, Mass.

Woodward. He entered college at Princeton, N. J., in the winter of 1846-47 and was graduated in the summer of 1849. His graduation was followed by a singular and very severe and protracted illness, unfitting him for any labor for three years. In the autumn of 1852 he had so far recovered that he gradually resumed his studies, having removed in the meantime to Terre Haute, Ind. He was licensed to preach in the spring of 1854 and immediately took charge of the Presbyterian Church at Greencastle, Ind.; was ordained and installed a year later and continued in this pastorate for more than twenty years. He received the degree of D. D. from the State University of Indiana. He was for some years president of the Indiana Female College. In Oct., 1849, he went with his father to Terre Haute, Ind., where he spent about four months as a clerk in a grocery store, and four months in school, after which he entered the shop of Barton & Co., as an apprentice, to learn the marble cutting trade. After two years at this work he entered Waveland Academy as a student. Near the close of his second year at this institution his health became so much impaired as to necessitate his leaving school and it was four years before he returned to it. A part of this time was spent in work at his former trade, one year of which was in Iowa, at Sigourney and Marion—this was the year 1855. In the spring of 1856 he went to St. Paul, Minn., where he spent six months at the same work. In Oct., 1856, he returned to Indiana, where he engaged in teaching until the summer of 1858. At the opening of the fall term 1858 he re-entered the school, then Waveland Collegiate Institute, where he graduated July 8, 1859, receiving the degree of B. S. In Sept. following he taught in the public schools of Paris, Ill., and afterward in Edgar Academy at the same place. From there he went to the Waveland (Ind.) Institute as professor of mathematics. In the fall of 1861 he took charge of Maple Grove Academy, near Vincennes, Ind., where he continued for about four years. In the fall of 1864, having read the course in theology under the guidance of his pastor, Rev. F. R. Morton, and passed the customary examination, he was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Vincennes, Sept. 10. In the spring of 1865 he took charge of a home mission field with headquarters at Petersburg, Ind., continuing in this work for five and one-half years, when failing health necessitated a change. In the fall of 1870 he took charge of Beulah Church, Rock Island County, Ill. After nearly two years in this charge he removed to Hamlet, Mercer County, Ill., becoming pastor of Hamlet and Perryton Churches. He continued in this field thirteen years, resigned, and in Sept., 1885, was called to the pastorate of Peniel and Millersburg Churches; he remained with them seven years, when, having been partially disabled by the grippe and compelled to seek lighter work, he obtained charge of the Viola (Ill.) In 1869-72 was chaplain of Vermont Senate; 1875-78 pastor Springfield, Vt.; 1878-82 pastor Lake City, Minn.; 1882-83 field agent Carleton College, Northfield, Minn.; 1883-84 Home Mission pastor, Plano, Ill.; 1884-86 H. He was married to Miss Alice Morgan, of Burlington. He had been in newspaper work for about half a dozen years, during which time he had worked on the Morrisville Citizen, both the St. Johnsbury papers, the Bennington Banner, Burlington Clipper and Burlington News. He was a bright and easy writer and a splendid newsgatherer.

Waitsfield, Vt., Feb. 1, 1842; m. there Nov. 28, 1876, Lilian A. Ramsay, b. St. Johnsbury, Vt., July 28, 1852. He received his education at the common schools and at Barre (Vt.) Academy. His student life was cut short by the war, however. He enlisted as private in Company B, Thirteenth Vermont Regiment. At the battle of Gettysburg, under Gen. Stannard, he took part with the Second Vermont Brigade in movements that good judges pronounce the "turning points" of this battle, which is called the "turning point" of the war. On the second day of the fight when the confederates had well nigh pierced our center, the Thirteenth Vermont was called into action and made a charge against a brigade of the enemy, driving it back and following it up for some distance and capturing many prisoners although the regiment was unsupported on either flank. Mr. Fisk was slightly wounded in this charge but did not leave the field, and the next day took part in the famous movement of Gen. Stannard's troops when they fell upon the flank of Gen. Pickett's advancing column and completed its discomfiture. Soon after this battle Mr. Fisk had an attack of typhoid fever which nearly cost him his life and left him unfitted for further army service. He settled upon the old homestead in Waitsfield and cared for his parents in their declining years. He has held several important offices in his native town, with acceptance. He was chosen deacon of the Congregational Church at the age of 24, which office he still holds. He has frequently written acceptable articles for the press, especially upon agricultural and Grand Army topics; res. Waitsfield, Vt.

was born on his father's farm, in Fayette, Me., Feb. 10, 1829. His family failing, his boyhood life was one of hard work, with little education. At 21 he was employed in a mill yard at Manchester, N. H., at 75 cents a day, working twelve hours at very hard work, out of which he paid board and expenses. After working in the mill yard, in a hotel and family, he returned to Maine; attended a private school eight weeks, the Maine Wesleyan Seminary twenty-three weeks, and the Waterville Academy fifteen weeks, working on a farm and teaching during vacations. He was compelled to use rigid economy, and for thirteen weeks carried his week's provision in a basket on his arm, while at the Wesleyan Seminary, and lived during two terms at the Waterville Academy on crackers, West India molasses and cold water, six days out of seven, and for a rarity had baked meat and beans, coffee and brown bread for Sundays. Hard work, hard study, the sudden change from school to hard work and from hard work to school, began to undermine his health, and in 1852 he came to Mt. Pulaski, Ill., and after peddling books awhile, he taught school until Apr., 1857, when he came to Lincoln, Ill., to complete his law studies (which he had commenced while teaching), at the same time writing in the office of the clerk of the courts. In Nov., 1857, he was elected Justice of the Peace, which office had yielded his predecessor $350 per year. He was appointed notary public in 1857, which office he has held for thirty-eight years, and was admitted to the bar of the State of Illinois, in 1858. In four years his office of Justice of the Peace and his other business yielded him over $7,000, which laid the foundation for a competence. His next move in life was a great sacrifice in health and financial success. In Aug., 1861, he entered the service as First Lieut., in Company H., Fourth Regiment of Cavalry, Illinois Volunteers.; was promoted to Captain, July 1, 1862; appointed Lieutenant-Colonel of the Third United States Colored Cavalry, by the President, in 1864, but declined and was mustered out of service in Nov., 1864, after serving three years and three months, his health having been completely broken down by the hardships of the service. He returned to Lincoln, where he has since resided. During his service, he took part in the capture of Fort Henry, Fort Donelson, the battle of Shiloh, siege of Corinth, advance into Mississippi under Grant, and many other sharp engagements. At Fort Henry, Lieutenant-Colonel McCollough, his commander, with 150 men, marched to the rear of the fort; the garrison, except those at the water-battery, fled up the river. McCollough entered the fort; about twenty men under the Captain of Company H went to the water-battery, while McCollough (Fisk in command of Company H.) charged the retreating rebels, over 2,000 strong; stampeded them; chased them ten miles, capturing all their cannon, baggage and rear guard. This taught Captain Fisk to fight his cavalry with a dash and desperation. Three incidents we will relate. Nov. 30, 1862, he was ordered, with his command of 125 dismounted men to develop the enemy, who were in a thicket. Moving in line to within close range, he ordered the men to hold their fire and charged the thicket. The enemy gave a volley, but with a yell Fisk's men dashed on, stampeded the rebels, who fled. The rebels proved to be a Texas regiment of 450 infantry. The Texan Colonel said he had believed one Southerner could whip three "Yankees," but he found one Yankee could whip three Texans. In May, 1863, with twenty men, half raw recruits, he suddenly met eighteen picked rebels. Fisk instantly ordered the charge, stampeded them, and captured five. Aug. 8, 1864, in Concordia Parish, La., 300 Texas rebels were about to surround forty of his regiment. With sixty men he galloped in column to close range, deployed in line at a gallop, ordered his men to hold their fire for close quarters, and charged without halting. The onslaught was so sudden, the rebels fled. His instructions to his men were: "If you are ever in close quarters, with nine chances of death, and one to escape, take the tenth chance and you will escape." Following these instructions, although many times in close quarters, he never had a man captured. His discipline over and kindness to his men were noted. But one man under his command deserted, although twenty-eight of his men deserted while under the command of his successor. He received an honorable mention in Davidson and Stuvee's "History of Illinois" for a reconnoissance on the flank of the enemy at the battle of Shiloh. In 1865 he was elected a member of the first city council of Lincoln, and served as chairman of the finance committee, and the other most important committees. In 1867 he was elected Justice of the Peace for four years. Finding his health would not permit a general practice of the law, he, in 1866, opened a real estate and counsellor-at-law office, which vocation he has followed to the present time. He married Miss Ellen M. Wakefield, daughter of Nathan B. and Ruth (Leffingwell) Wakefield, of Kingsville, Ohio, by whom he has two children, Ruth Melenda, and Franklin, Jr. He is giving his children a liberal education, of which he was denied, his daughter having taken graduate and post-graduate courses and a course in music, and his son entering college as freshman at 16. In politics, he was a conservative Whig, up to 1856, when being an eyewitness to the United States Marshal's border ruffian posse's acts at Lawrence, Kan., he became, and remained, a staunch Republican. His religious motto is: "Do right in all things, and trust God for the result." Res. Lincoln, Ill.

The ancestors of the Connecticut Bradleys appear to have been William and Isaac, both of whom settled in New Haven, the former in 1645, the latter (spelled Bradlee) in 1683, having stopped some time in Bradford, Mass. Both families have numerous descendants. Savage says twenty-three of this name had graduated at N. E. colleges before 1835. Col. John Bradley was born in Cheshire, Conn., in 1793. His parents were Bradley and Susan Mathews. Their children were John, Susan, Esther, and Roxana. Col. Bradley entered the military service of the United States during the war of 1812, and for meritorious conduct was promoted to the rank of Captain in the regular army. He was for some time in command of the military force stationed at Fort Dearborn, Chicago. In 1837 he retired from the service, having previously married Miss Sarah Brown, of Brownville, N. Y., in which place he settled, engaged in business, and acquired property. Upon the election of Hon. Wm. H. Seward as Governor of New York, he was offered and accepted a position on his staff, with the rank of Colonel.

Rev. Dr. William Allen Fiske was graduated at the Episcopal Theological Seminary in the City of New York, in 1849. On Sept. 22, 1852, he was married to Susan Mathews Bradley, daughter of Col. John and Sarah Bradley, of Brownville, N. Y. In Nov., 1849, he was appointed missionary to Theresa and Redwood, Jefferson county, New York, where he remained two years and three months, built churches and gathered in congregations. In Jan., 1852, he was called to the rectorship of St. Stephen's Church, New Hartford, N. Y. There he remained two years and later obtained a parsonage for the church. In 1854 he was called to Lyons, N. Y., where he remained five years. In 1859 he was called to Grace Church, Cleveland, O. He was called to St. Paul's Church, Cincinnati, O., in the winter of 1865-6. He built up this parish, until it was the largest in the diocese of Ohio; but his health failed in 1874, and he then gave up the parish, and retired for about a year to his farm in Indiana, near Rei. His health improved considerably here, so that he was able, in 1875, to accept a call to the rectorship of St. John's Church in Quincy, Ill. In 1876 he became rector of St. John's parish, Naperville, Ill., where he remained for four years, increasing largely the parish membership and doubling the size of the church edifice. While residing here the Northwestern College conferred the degree of LL.D. on him. In 1881 he was called to the rectorship of St. John's Church, Bangor, Me., where he remained until 1886. He was now 61 years old, and he gave up the parish and went to Boston, where he lived for about a year, doing light work in filling occasional pulpits. In 1887 he and his wife went to Brooklyn, to be near their children; and for three years he assisted the bishop and archdeacon in missionary work among the struggling parishes in the growing parts of the city. In 1890 he was called as rector of St. Andrew's parish, Brooklyn; and though he was 65 years old, he undertook the work, and pushed it ahead with extraordinary vigor. Not content with merely enlarging the parish as it was, he determined, after he had made the congregation too large for the edifice, to purchase land, and build a church and chapel on a scale commensurate with the future which he foresaw to be certain for that part of Brooklyn. He succeeded in his self-allotted task, aided in every way by the devotion of his wife and his youngest son, John, and actually bought the ground and superintended the designs for the church and chapel. But he overtaxed his strength, and did not live to see the completion of the work that crowned his latter days. He died on the 12th of March, 1894; died in the harness, as he always wished to do, died in the very midst of his work, died in the fullness of years; and the new St. Andrews Church is a lasting monument. He lived a noble and useful life; his aims were always pure and lofty; his ideals were exalted; he lived for others more than for himself, and he died for his Master, whom he had so long and so devotedly served. In a publication, "The Bishop's Address," in a lengthy obituary of Dr. Fiske, it is said: "Though in declining health for some months, his death at last was a surprise to his family and his people. It might be enough to say of him, in his somewhat secluded ministry and in his young and struggling parish, that he was a good pastor and a faithful preacher, and as such gave himself largely to the task of thoroughly grounding his flock upon the principles of the church's faith and order. He worked with a cheerful faith and undaunted courage which, under God, are always the sure pledges of ultimate triumph. Others will enter into his labors and build on his foundations; but let us hope, it will be with an unfailling memory of the debt of gratitude which St. Andrew's parish owes to its first rector." William Allen Fiske, LL.D., and Susan Bradley Fiske. His father was at the time rector of Grace Church, Cleveland, and left there in 1865 to become rector of St. Paul's Church, Cincinnati, where John's common school education was chiefly procured. A year and a half on the farm at Delaware, Ind.; a year at Quincy, Ill., and four years at Naperville, Ill., where he attended Northwestern College, gave him the experience of country and Western life which, together with seven years in New England, prevent him from being at all narrow. He nevertheless remembers that he is an Ohio man and will doubtless use this for all he is worth when occasion arises. While in Bangor, Me., where he moved with his father, in 1880, he studied law with Peregrine White and Hon. Frederick M. Laughton, and was admitted to the bar in 1884, and for two years practiced law there and argued a case in appeal before the full bench in 1885, in Trainor vs. Morrison, 78 Maine, 160, where the opposing counsel was an ex-Governor of the State. Strange to say, he was beaten, but his contention as to the powers of traveling salesmen has since become recognized as the law. Becoming convinced that a law school course was a proper one to fit a lawyer for his profession, he took the three years' course at the Boston University Law School in one year, and graduated among the first ten in his class, receiving his degree magna cum laude, in 1887. He then came to New York City, and was admitted to the New York bar, and acted as managing clerk for Hon. Peter B. Olney, Messrs. Kelly & Mackae, Cravath & Houston and Hays & Greenbaum. Since 1893 he has been connected with the firm of Messrs. Evarts, Choate & Beaman, 52 Wall St., New York City, and is the assistant of Hon. Charles C. Beaman, who headed the reform ticket in 1895 as candidate for Justice of the Supreme Court of the State of New York. Mr. Fiske is also attending to the legal wants of South Brooklyn, where he resides. He always, since a lad, evinced a strong love for music, and as a boy soprano won considerable attention. When in Bangor he sang tenor in the quartette choir at his father's church, and was quite prominent in the councils of the Cecilia Club, a local musical society. He studied the voice for three years under J. C. Bartlett and Clarence A. Marshall, of Boston, and while at Law School sang at St. Paul's Church. Coming to New York he sang for over a year in Trinity Church, and afterwards held solo positions in Calvary Church, New York, and Trinity, Hoboken. His father's health commencing to fail in the fall of 1893, he deemed it his duty to take charge of the choir of St. Andrew's Church, Brooklyn, of which his father was rector, and otherwise sustain him in his work. This move proved a very wise one, as the revival of the choir invigorated the energies of the parish, and kept the work going on during his father's illness, so that at his death the people of the church united with his son in the work of building a new church edifice. Mr. Fiske is a trustee of St. Andrew's parish, and a delegate to the diocesan convention, where he is a member of the standing committee on the incorporation of new parishes. He is treasurer of the local Y. M. C. A., and represents the Eighth Ward of Brooklyn in the councils of the Citizen's Union, of Brooklyn, a non-partisan organization. He is not married, but resides with his mother at 216 Fifty-third St., Brooklyn.

REV. ALBERT AUGUSTUS FISKE.

1777. REV. ALBERT AUGUSTUS FISKE (Allen, William, William, Ebenezer, William, William, John, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Troy, N. Y., Nov. 1, 1828; m. Nov. 23, 1859, Amelia Goodyear. Rev. Albert Augustus Fiske, third son of Allen and Eliza Fiske, was born in Troy, N. Y. The youngest of the brothers, the first fifteen years of his life was spent with his father, a student most of that time in his school, and fitted under his excellent training to enter upon an advanced collegiate course at the age of 16. Such had been his early purpose, but overruled by what was then deemed to be wiser counsels, he was persuaded to betake himself to the more practical training of the printing office, which he did, in the winter of 1844-5, at Auburn, N. Y., in the office of the Northern Christian Advocate, an organ of the M. E. Church, of extensive circulation. After serving his apprenticeship in this establishment, in the fall of 1847 he returned to his native city, and soon afterward commenced, in connection with his father, the publication of a weekly newspaper, called the Family Journal. In the fall of 1848 his brother, David E., from Amherst, joined them, and proved a most efficient ally. From this time onward, for more than twelve years, the Family Journal prospered, both in means and influence, recognized by its many thousands of readers, and by its contemporaries, as an able, popular, and influential newspaper, which result was largely due to the gifted pen of its principal editor, Allen Fiske, Esq. In 1854, David, and shortly afterward his father, severally retired from the concern, and soon the publication of "Fiske's Family Journal" was brought to a close. Albert A. Fiske married Miss Amelia, the accomplished daughter of Rev. George Goodyear, of Temple, N. H., and in the summer of 1862 they removed to Chicago, Ill., where shortly afterwards Mr. Fiske began the preparation and compilation of materials for a genealogical work, which was finally completed and published in 1867, entitled: "A History of the Family (ancestral and descendant), of William Fiske, Sr., of Amherst, N. H.," with brief notices of other branches springing from the same stock. This was the first attempt to publish a work on the Fiske genealogy in this country, and though the details mostly concerned certain branches descended from the Wenham Fiskes, yet so comprehensive was its view, that it has probably served as the nucleus of this larger and more elaborate work*.

In 1864-5 Mr. Fiske began his preparation for holy orders in the Protestant Episcopal Church, and in 1866 he graduated from the Nashotan Theological Seminary, Wisconsin. On Trinity Sunday of that year he was ordained to the diaconate by Bishop Whitehouse, and in November following was called to the rectorship of Zion Church, Oconomowoc, where he was advanced to the priesthood by Bishop Kemper, of saintly memory, in the spring of 1870. He remained for several years there, and was greatly prospered in his work. In 1875 he resigned his charge to give his invalid wife the benefit of a change of climate. In 1876 he returned to Chicago, and took missionary service for awhile under Bishop McLaren. In Jan., 1877, he was called to Christ Church, Harvard, Ill., where in 1881, he built a new and beautiful house of worship, and presented it to the diocese all paid for. He continued in charge, serving the people most acceptably, until Easter, 1886, when he was called to St. Paul's Church, Austin, Ill., a suburb of Chicago, where he remained about six years. In this field also he was signally successful, the membership of the church increasing threefold, but his health failing, he resigned in the fall of 1892, in order to secure much needed rest. In Nov., 1895, he was recalled to the church in Harvard, where he now resides, respected and beloved by the people. Several of Mr. Fiske's sermons have been published by request, and received flattering commendation from the Church Press. Although serving continuously in the ministry for over twenty-five years, Mr. Fiske has had but three parishes during that time, and is pleasantly remembered in them all. A very valuable heirloom came into the possession of Rev. A. A. Fiske, on the death of his uncle, David Fiske, Esq., of Amherst. It is an old

*The compiler, as stated in the introduction, expresses his appreciation of the valuable assistance rendered by the work of Rev. A. A. Fiske. When his book was compiled it was indeed a most difficult task. But few town histories and genealogies had then been printed and nearly everyone was diffident and indifferent as to their origin. A friend writing of Mr. Fiske says: "It would be entirely just and proper to recognize in some fitting way the fact of obligation to one who, as pioneer, had 'blazed the way' thro' the trackless jungle where reposed the ashes of buried generations. The fathers took little pains to keep track of their kindred in their migrations and ever widening groups of descent. It is only with a truer appreciation of its value that an interest in genealogical matters has revived. Hence the difficulty in this country of compiling a general family history. It is a big job, as he happened to know, for he spent the best part of two years at it and considerable money without pecuniary reward. Doubtless what he did has been some help to you."

English clock, of large dimensions and superior workmanship, which undoubtedly belonged originally to the Wenham Fiskes, as far back as the beginning of the last century (1700), as it is distinctly mentioned in testamentary documents signed by Dea. Ebenezer Fiske, of date 1764, and described as his "old clock," which came to him along with the homestead, from his father, Dea. William, whose will was probated 1725. As Dea. William, of Wenham, was the sole legatee of William the emigrant, it probably was bequeathed to him as part of his marriage portion (1662). There can be no question as to the venerable age of this clock, for its works are of chilled brass, harder than the hardest steel, and the process of such rare alchemy became a lost art a long while ago. It is perfectly safe to say that this clock is at least 150 years old, for in 1764 it was spoken of as an old English timepiece; was willed at that date by Ebenezer Fiske to his son William; was brought to Amherst from Wenham in 1771, and for ninety years stood in the mansion of Hon. William Fiske, firmly bolted against the oaken crossbeams. It is an excellent timepiece even now, and is greatly prized.

Rev. George Goodyear, of Temple, N. H., was a lineal descendant of Hon. Stephen Goodyear, who came to this country in 1630, and was descended from an ancient English family of that name, entitled to coat armor as appears by a royal grant dated 1569. In the records of the Herald Office, it is thus described: "Gules, a fesse bet. 2 chev. vair—Crest, a partridge, holding in its beak three ears of wheat." Res. s. p. Austin, Ill., and Harvard, Ill.

DEA. JOHN PROCTOR FISKE.

Proctor, the fifth and eldest son of Ebenezer and Hannah Fiske, desiring to fit himself for the profession of teaching, entered a teacher's department of Phillips Academy. After teaching two or three winters he took charge of a select school in Cedarville, N. J., from 1840 to 1842. He then entered the classical department of the Phillips Academy and completed the preparatory course in the languages. For two years he taught in St. Johnsbury, Vt., and for the following nine years was principal of the Hancock school, in Lowell, Mass. For many years subsequently he was principal of the preparatory department of the Beloit, Wis., College, which institution conferred the degree of M. A. upon him in 1857. In 1865 he was elected deacon of the First Congregational Church in Beloit. He left off teaching in the preparatory department of Beloit College in June, 1871, and went to Chicago to engage in business. After four years he began to sell books and continued in that course he attenuated between teaching and study. He taught schools in Methuen and East Abington, Mass.; Fairton, Bridgeton and Burlington, N. J. In Sept., 1845, he entered Yale College; he was graduated in 1849, and at once entered the theological department of the school. He was licensed to preach in 1852; was a tutor at Yale from 1851-53; student in Andover Theological Seminary during part of 1853, and also traveled in Europe. Compelled by disease of the eyes to abandon the idea of entering the ministry, he refused several calls to take a pastorate. He however, accepted the professorship of rhetoric and English literature in Beloit, Wis., College, to which he had been appointed while abroad and entered upon his duties Apr., 1854, where he continued until 1859, having previously been appointed to the chair of sacred rhetoric in the Chicago Theological Seminary, in which institution he has since continued. In 1865 he received the degree of Doctor of Divinity from Olivet College, Mich., and from Yale University in 1888; also the degree of Doctor of Laws from Beloit College in 1888. In the autumn and winter of 1871-72 he attended lectures in the University of Berlin, Germany, and in 1872 traveled in Arabia, Egypt, Greece and Palestine. In 1887 he became president of the Chicago Theological Seminary, with which he has been connected as professor and president for thirty-seven years. His work entitled "Manual of Preaching," published in 1884, has reached a third edition, and is used as a text-book in several institutions. In 1891 he went as delegate to the "International Congregational Council," which met in London in July of that year, and also traveled extensively in Europe. As a student in college he took the highest honors, being valedictorian of his class. As a scholar, writer and preacher he enjoys an enviable reputation; res. 532 W. Adams St., Chicago, Ill.

What he read he remembered, and, being a man of studious habits, he soon became well informed in all matters of general importance. In religious views Mr. Fisk was a Presbyterian, and had been a life long and consistent member of that church. He was at one time ruling elder and superintendent of its Sunday school. Fiske graduated from Amherst College in 1884, and from Hartford Theological Seminary in 1887. Took a high position as a scholar in college, and won the fellowship in the seminary. By advice of the faculty spent three years in the University of Berlin, studying oriental languages, specially Arabic. Was ready to return and enter upon a professorship at Hartford when his health, which by constant study had been seriously impaired, suddenly failed, and he died at the age of 29. As a lad he was deeply interested in ornithology. While in college he had charge of the ornithological collection, arranging and classifying it, and adding sixty-seven varieties to the number. Many of his drawings of birds and eggs were published by the Smithsonian Institute, and were helpful in settling some disputed points in New England ornithology. While in the seminary he made a Hebrew vocabulary of the Psalms. His proficiency in Arabic was very marked, and he left extensive translations from the literature of that people. He was interesting and instructive as a preacher, but important offerings failed to lure him from his chosen course. Through native gifts and high attainments a promising career was open before him. "Flebilis multis occidit," and by a wide circle his death was regarded as a serious loss to American scholarship. "He was an enthusiast in Christian work as in study. He was an artist in soul, as well as with pencil, pen, and brush; a student of architecture, a keen naturalist, proficient especially in ornithology. In the vacations of his theological course, he had won an enviable reputation as writer, speaker and preacher, and important pulpits had been open for his pastoral charge. He turned,

He was born at Strongsville, Ohio, in a big storm of snow and wind, in a pioneer log house: was brought back to Massachusetts when about six years old; went to common schools; worked on the farm; taught school in New Jersey a year when he was 15 and when 17 got into college at Amherst in 1851. He taught school winters, got through with a house-appointment at graduation; taught afterward at Canandaigua boys' boarding and day school. Went to Andover Theological Seminary; was called back to Amherst as tutor; was licensed to preach by the Franklin County Congregational Association in 1857; was tutor at Amherst and preached all through western Massachusetts for two years; leaving there went to St. Paul, Minn., for rest; preached there for a new First Congregational Church—the Plymouth; was ordained and installed first pastor in 1859; married in 1859; enlisted in the army in 1861; was elected chaplain of the Fourth Minnesota Volunteer Infantry same year; went into the field first after the battle of Shiloh; served through the war with his regiment or on detailed service, by special order of Gen. Grant. He returned to civil life in the summer of 1865; entered at once on the pastorate of the Second Congregational Church of Rockville, Conn., which was nearly doubled in strength in the course of a five years' ministry there; was called thence to St. Peters Presbyterian Church of Rochester, N. Y., in 1870; the church grew and he paid off an old debt of $30,000. Then he was unexpectedly called to the Harvard Church, San Francisco, Cal. In that city he remained in the pastorate of the Harvard Street Church for nine years. Thence he was called to the pastorate of the First Church, Ithaca, N. Y., where he still is. In the war times with Gen. John Eaton, Jr., he had a large hand in organizing freedmen's affairs on the Mississippi River; armed and equipped the first colored company of soldiers; built two log house towns of more than 1,000 houses each, and married 119 couples in half an hour. He was sent by Gen. Grant to Washington to endeavor to prevent the transfer of freedmen's affairs to a civil department, and to keep it in the department of war. Sumner's bill for such transfer was defeated and the Freedmen's Bureau was organized in the war office as was desired. He was employed afterward by the Bureau of Education to visit and report on the various penal and reformatory institutions of New England and the Middle States. Papers published in Reports of Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C. He was afterward invited to go as Government Commissioner to an International Conference in London, of the departments of education of the various governments of Europe and the United States, and to examine and report on the European National Educational systems, and their working. But, as he had only lately accepted a call to the church at Rochester and as it was anxious for his immediate service, he was constrained to decline so inviting an appointment. He has been too busy to try to write any books. A good many sermons and addresses on various occasions have been published and he has tried to do his duty by the newspapers—religious and others—as well as he could, and in all the reforms, temperance, civil service and civic federation lines as well as he has been able; res. Ithaca, N. Y.

Shelburne, Mass., Nov. 22, 1827; m. there June 11, 1857, Helen M. Anderson, b. at Lysander, N. Y., Oct. 17, 1835. He died suddenly of heart failure as the result of the shock he sustained by being thrown from his carriage in a runaway accident. Mr. Fiske accompanied by his daughter started to drive from their home to Greenfield. The horses were a pair of lively colts which had given some trouble before. Mr. Fiske was driving. When near the Col. Wells' place the colts became frightened and dashed down the hill at a lively pace. Mr. Fiske was thrown out but picked himself up apparently uninjured and followed the team. His daughter pluckily took the reins and after going some distance succeeded in reining the frightened animals into an open lot. She was thrown out and the horses stopped. Mr. Fiske came up and saw his daughter and then fell to the ground, dying almost instantly. The young woman was not seriously injured. Dr. F. J. Canedy, of Shelburne Falls, the family physician, and Dr. Deane, of Greenfield, were summoned. Dr. Canedy said that Mr. Fiske had shown symptoms of heart trouble for three years. He was a highly respected citizen and had always lived in Shelburne. Besides his daughter Mr. Fiske is survived by a widow, two brothers living in the West and a brother Charles Fiske of Holyoke. 1850. REV. FREDERIC A. FISKE (Elisha, Robert, Daniel, Daniel, Samuel, William, John, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Rev. Frederic Augustus Fiske, son of Rev. Elisha and Margaret Shepard Fiske, was born in Wrentham, Mass., Apr. 15, 1816; fitted at Day's Academy in his native town at so early an age that it was not deemed advisable for him to enter college then, so he taught school for a year or so and then entered Amherst College from which he graduated in 1836 and received his A. M. in 1837, after which, as his health did not then permit of his taking a theological course, he at once engaged in teaching, first as assistant in Washington Institute, New York City, then in Norwalk, Conn., next as principal of Monson (Mass.) Academy, 1833-34, and later in Fall River, Mass. While in Fall River his wife died and he then decided to enter the ministry in accordance with his original plan, and much to the regret of his patrons in Fall River he entered Yale Theological Seminary, taking the full course from 1847 to 1850, when he entered upon the work of the ministry, being ordained pastor of the Congregational Church of Ashburnham, Mass., Dec. 30, 1851, where he remained until Apr. 17, 1854, when he resigned. For about three years, from November 16, 1854, he was pastor of the Congregational Church in East Marshfield, after which at the solicitation of friends he resumed his former occupation of teaching, first as principal of the high school at Clinton, Mass., and for the next eight years as principal of a boys' boarding school in Newton, Mass., which grew in numbers and popularity under his care. In 1865 on account of a severe illness his physician insisted upon his leaving his school and strongly recommended his moving at once to a warmer climate, so that from 1865 to 1868 he was Superintendent of Education for the State of North Carolina under the Freedmen's Bureau, receiving his appointment from Gen. O. P. Howard. Having now regained his health he returned to Massachusetts, where he was for a short time pastor of the church in Raynham, Mass. The remainder of his life was spent in the service of the Protestant Episcopal Church, being ordained as deacon on June 25, 1870, and as priest on Nov. 5 of the same year. From July, 1870, to May, 1873, he was rector of Trinity Church, Van Deusenville, Mass.; from May, 1873, to Sept., 1876, rector of St. Paul's Church, Brookfield, Conn.; from Sept., 1876, until his death rector of Grace Church, North Attleboro, Mass., which joins his native town. He died of nervous prostration induced by overwork in his efforts to relieve his parish from a load of pecuniary indebtedness, but not until he had raised the last dollar. His bishop (Paddock), who officiated at his funeral, said of him in his annual address to the convention of 1870, as follows: "In the rectory that with the church at its side crowns the little knoll of an ample lot in a pretty village of Bristol County, one of our best rural pastors lay down to die soon after he had given God thanks for the good example of dear Dr. Wells. This man coming to his parish two years before, had found the wise and far-sighted work of his predecessor burdened with such honest, but partially unexpected indebtedness as changed times had brought upon many of the parishes all over the land. The time came last autumn when about $2,000 of this indebtedness must be raised to avert disaster. He did not create the obligation; but it was Christ's cross that lay athwart his path, to remove it. First letting it cost himself more, perhaps, than he would expect of any one else, he then roused the hearts of all, even to the children, of his flock and they responded nobly. Then strengthened as he supposed in his gentleness and modesty, by a statement and commendation from his bishop, he went from door to door in Boston, to let others bear the burden with him, and so fulfill the law of Christ. From a few he received refusals which pained him; from a few, good advice against parishes getting into debt; from others modest offerings toward his longed-for getting out of debt and saving a valuable church property. Twice he broke in his weary rounds; but at last he succeeded and went home with a church property saved and his life given for it." After a few weeks of exhaustion and suffering the Rev. Frederic Augustus Fiske, rector of Grace Church, North Attleboro, died Dec. 15, 1878, and was buried by one and other brethren amidst a town full of mourners. He was a man of manly and strong piety, clear and happy in his convictions and of willing and unwearying labor. His wife and son Frederic Elisha Fiske survive him. He d. Dec. 15, 1878; res. Wood. Mr. Fisk was born at Upton, Mass., and received a common school education. At the age of sixteen he entered upon his business career by accepting a clerkship. He married Lydia C. Wood, and soon after embarked in business for himself. In 1853 Mr. Fisk came to Chicago, and with B. M. Fisk and J. E. L. Fraser opened the first millinery house in Chicago on Wells St., between Lake and South Water, under the now familiar firm name of D. B. Fisk & Co. The business continued to grow through Mr. Fisk's energy, until it became the largest millinery establishment in the world. Mr. Fisk had never known a sick day until about three weeks before his death when he caught a bad cold, which developed into bronchitis. He was not, however, confined to his home. Nothing serious was anticipated until a short time before he died when a decided change for the worse occurred. He became unconscious and so remained until death came. Mr. Fisk was a lover of outdoor sports, and a member of the Chicago, Calumet and Washington Park Clubs, yet he was in no sense a club man, nor was he what is known as a society man. He was devoted to his home, and there were very few pleasures that could draw him away from his fireside. The remains were taken from the family residence, 2100 Calumet Ave., to Rosehill, for burial. None but the family and a few intimate friends were present. The funeral services were held at the residence, Rev. Thomas C. Hall, pastor of the 41st Street Presbyterian Church, officiating. The members of the old Tippecanoe Club were present. He d. July 29, 1891; res. Upton, Mass., and 2100 Calumet Ave., Chicago, Ill.

She came north in 1859 with her baby son, and the second child was born in Upton. His store was seized by the Confederate army and he was forced into the ranks as a surgeon; was captured by the Federal army in Red River, and was in prison some time; finally exchanged, and came north in 1865; lived in Upton about one year; then he moved to Springfield, where he went into the publishing business (subscription books), D. B. Fisk & Co. In a few years went into the grocery business on North Main St., for several years, then took in a partner who took him in and did him up. Peck; d. Middletown, Conn., 1886. He studied law, but after a long and serious illness abandoned the profession and entered the itinerant ministry in 1818, when he was licensed as a local preacher in the Methodist Episcopal Church. He took high rank as a pulpit orator, was pastor for two years in Craftsbury, Vt., and in 1819, removed to Charlestown, Mass. At the conference of 1820 he was admitted into full membership, ordained as a deacon in 1822, and from 1823 till 1827 was presiding elder of the Vermont district, which then comprised the whole of Vermont east of the Green Mountains. He was placed upon the superannuated list, but was requested, in so far as health would allow, to act as agent for Newmarket Academy, at that time the only Methodist institution in New England, dress of welcome to Lafayette in 1824. He was also a delegate to the general conference in that year, and was chosen to write the address to the British conference. While here he was chosen to make the address of welcome to Lafayette in 1824. He was also a delegate to the general conference of 1828, when he was elected bishop of the Canada conference but declined. In 1829 he also refused the presidency of La Grange College, Alabama, and a professorship in the University of Alabama. In 1830 he was chosen first president of the Wesleyan University, in whose organization he had materially aided. The duties of that office were entered upon in 1831; the institution under his direction became the most influential of any in the Methodist denomination in America. At the general conference in 1832 his appeals in behalf of Indian missions resulted in the organization of the Oregon mission, and he was at this time instrumental in founding Williamstown Academy. For years he was useful to educational interests at large by recommending or furnishing professors and presidents to the rapidly multiplying colleges of the far west. In search of health, he passed the winter of 1835-6 in Italy, and the summer of 1836 in England, when he also represented the M. E. Church of the Wesleyan conference as a delegate. He was elected bishop of that church in 1836, but declined. In 1839 he became a member of the board of education of Connecticut. He was said to be unsurpassed in eloquence and fervor as a preacher, and was often compared to Fenelon, being endowed with like moral and mental traits. The degree of D. D. was conferred on him by Augusta College, Kentucky, in 1829, and LL. D. by Brown in 1835. His published works are: "Inaugural Address" (New York, 1831); "Calvinistic Controversy" (1837); "Travels in Europe" (1838); "Sermons and Lectures on Universalism: Reply to Pierpont on the Atonement, and other Theological and Educational Works and Sermons." His account of his European travels had a wide circulation and was greatly admired. His "Life and Writings" were published by the Rev. Joseph Holdich, D. D. (New York, 1842). Among the truly representative men of St. Lawrence county, whose life and character entitle them to record on the pages of history, was the late Orin M. Fisk, Esq., who during his life deservedly held a prominent position in the community in which he lived. He was born in De Kalb, N. Y., Apr. 25, 1807, and after a brief life of usefulness died at his home in De Kalb, Jan. 20, 1857, much lamented by kindred and friends, he was a man of more than ordinary ability in all the vocations of life, and could never say no to the needy and destitute. His adhesions to the principles of honor were so strong that nothing could break them, and money would not tempt him to do a wrong act. In early life he devoted considerable time to teaching and bore the enviable reputation of being one of the finest penman in St. Lawrence county, consequently under the earnest solicitations of the various school districts of De Kalb he gave instructions which were long cherished by those who were so fortunate as to come under his tuition. In later years he was successful in doing business as a merchant in De Kalb, as one of the firm of Fisk & Slosson; still later he opened a store at Cooper's Falls. At the organization of the De Kalb works at this place he was chosen as its head manager, investing $10,000 of his capital towards a grist mill, which was said to be one of the finest in the county, but was subsequently burned down some years after his death. He was for a long period agent for several of the original proprietors of land in St. Lawrence county, among which were Frederic De Peyster and W. C. H. Wadell, of New York City. In politics he was formerly a member of the Whig party, but joined the Republican organization on its formation. He held the office of Justice of the Peace for many years, and in 1847 was elected supervisor of the town of De Kalb, which office he held till his death, in 1857. It is needless to add any encomium to Orin M. Fisk's reputation as a man and worthy citizen, as the foregoing record amply testifies to his worth, and the estimation in which he was held by his fellow citizens. Although not a member of any church, he exhibited a Christian principle in all his dealings, and many can testify to the timely aid received from his hands in their direst extremity. He d. When war was declared, in 1860, Orin L. was a prominent druggist, doing business at Watertown, Jefferson county, N. Y., and subsequently was on a visit to his half brothers and sisters west, when he enlisted in the Fourth Iowa Cavalry. In obedience to the promptings of true patriotism and loyalty the son went forth to serve his imperiled country in the gloomiest hour of its struggle for an existence. Gallantly he shared its fortunes under Sherman and other Generals at Vicksburg, Memphis and Cairo. Possessing a delicate constitution, he soon fell a victim to that relentless scourge, chronic diarrhoea. He lingered for many months, subject to sanitary treatment, till at length an honorable discharge relieved him from the stern duties of military life. Buoyed up by his indomitable will, though physically incapacitated to endure the fatigue of travel, he soon reached the home of his childhood. Here, the mere shadow of his former presence, he greeted his doting mother, a loving sister, and a younger brother.

Clinton B. Fisk

1850, Janette A. Crippen, b. Nov. 24, 1832. Clinton Bowen Fisk.—A Life-Sketch of the Prohibition Party's Probable Standard-Bearer.—A Typical American Life—From a Log Cabin to Positions of National Honor—His Early Struggles for an Education—Walking Twenty Miles to Learn How to Pronounce a Latin Diphthong—His Creditable Record in the Civil War and After—Endearing Himself to Whites and Blacks in the South—His Intimate Friendships with Lincoln, Grant and Greeley—A Splendid Business Career Side by Side With Noble Christian Activities. The Voice, New York City, May 15, 1888, said: In a conspicuous box at the Metropolitan Opera House, on Monday night, May 14, as the great Prohibition rally there drew near its close, a man sat down and looked out with swift interest upon that vast assemblage. It was near eleven o'clock, and he had just come from a down-town appointment so binding he could not sooner get release. At the wide street entrance only some stragglers appeared, and he had sought the special box assigned him, half believing that because of storm and small attendance the meeting had early broken up, and he should find but vacancy and darkness. When he entered and took his seat, his beaming blue eyes ranged over the stage below him, packed with well-known Prohibitionists, and thence over the spacious auditorium facing them, crowded in all its five great galleries with men and women whose enthusiasm was electric. Scores of people near by observed this man, with whose form they had grown familiar. The attention of hundreds more was speedily drawn to him. And all whose gaze turned that way beheld a gentleman of portly build, with rather short gray beard, partly veiling a face roundish in outline, rising to a forehead high and intellectual. The rather rotund figure and the genial countenance were suggestive of comfortable living, little care and happy temperament. From the gray whiskers, and the bald crown above them, one might have guessed this gentleman past middle life, though surely not yet old.

Who was he? The crowd soon told his name. When Professor Dickie's clear, masterful voice rang out its final word, with one mighty volume of sound the shout went up for "Fisk!" "Fisk!" The man in the box was wanted upon the platform. These many years, indeed, he has been wanted there, at any gathering of which he might form part, whatever its occasion or character. His wonderful aptness of extempore address, his choice command of language, his unfailing good humor, and his magnetic charm, have made him a general favorite in ecclesiastical bodies, in party gatherings, and in commercial assemblies, whenever speech-making came in order.

There is no man in all our country more popular as an off-hand talker than Gen. Fisk: no man, it may be added, whose talking gifts have been tested in more various ways, or on wider fields. He could speak to his newly recruited regiment of soldiers in St. Louis with such persuasiveness that they agreed he should do all their swearing, well aware he would not swear a word. In camp, at the front, he could lead a prayer meeting with tender exhortation and fervent appeal. When reconstruction days came on he could gather thousands, white and black, upon some Southern plantation, and win them to ready acceptance of the great change from slavery to freedom. And in these later years, South and North, at the general conference of his church, as a fraternal delegate with Southern brethren, in the great convention at Pittsburg which nominated St. John, at some great business banquet where capital massed itself, or where old army comrades met in annual reunion—oftener than almost any other American he has been called to say the word most fitting, to lend the final grace of flowing rhetoric and felicitous quotation. Upon this night of particular reference, in the great opera house of this great metropolis, it was not so much that another speech was wanted—for four speeches had been heard already—as that the vast audience desired to recognize and salute, in this genial man of gracious manner and warm heart, the next probable standard bearer of Prohibition—the almost inevitable nominee for President by the Prohibition party. And their greeting was such as to honor and exalt the most princely. Under its inspiration thousands of pulses leaped aflame and glowed with sudden fire. It was magnificent. It was thrilling. Could she have lived to see it, how glad and proud one woman must have been! Her name was Lydia Aldrich when a girl in Rhode Island; she was the wife of Capt. Benjamin Fisk when on the 8th of December, 1828, she gave to the world a boy they christened Clinton Bowen. That was in the little hamlet known as Griggsville, town of York, Livingston County, N. Y. Clinton Bowen was the fifth male child born to this pair of young Puritans since they had settled in the Genesee Valley. Half his patronymic came from New York's "Canal Governor," De Witt Clinton; the other half was from the mother's family tree. It was a humble home wherein the boy saw daylight first, but in a region beautiful and fertile, though sparsely peopled then. His father was a man of local reputation, and getting on fairly well for one in so new a country. He was a blacksmith, wagon-maker, and miscellaneous manufacturer, for quite an area round about. He trained with the military, as was natural, for his grandfather had been under Washington. And sometimes, on general training days, as was also natural, he took a little stronger drink than his son ever takes, for even a deacon could do it then and not lose religious caste. When his fifth and youngest boy was less than two years old, Capt. Fisk removed to Michigan. Better opportunities were there to be found, in his opinion, for building the fortune his growing family must need. He turned some modest savings into timber land in the wilderness country of Lenawee, bought out a mechanic who had located five mile north of Tecumseh, on the river Raisin, and there, surrounded by not unfriendly Pottawattomie Indians, set about fortune-making. The new place thus established he called Clinton, in honor of the Governor left behind and the baby brought along. Two years later, poisoned with the malaria then so pervading that whole region, he sickened and died, leaving his wife Lydia with yet another babe to care for, and at the mercy of conditions most unkind. Mistress Lydia did the best she could for her six fatherless boys and with her untilled lands. Losses came, lands went, times grew hard. One by one the lads were put out to earn their own support, and Clinton's turn to go came at last. He was then but 9 years old, yet eager to help his mother and to make a chance for himself. When Farmer Wright offered a horse, a saddle, a bridle, two suits of clothes, one hundred dollars, and three months of "schooling" every year, if he would serve him till 21, Clinton saw his chance. To him the "schooling" was powerful inducement. He hungered for knowledge, young as he then was. He left mother and home even cheerfully, and wondered why his mother so often put her apron to her eyes after he bade her good-bye, as he rode away. He lived with Deacon Wright between two and three years, busied in the many ways a chore-boy can be occupied on the farm. But he grew ambitious for wider things. He craved better chances still. By hook and crook (though he hooked none of them) he had obtained a few books, and read them stretched out upon the broad hearthstone before a huge fireplace. There he had learned to write—that handsome back-hand script his correspondents know so well—using the hearthstone for a copy-book; and on this novel slate he had wrought out the problems Daboll gave. Verily, "a little knowledge is a dangerous thing." It made this young lad restless, dissatisfied and eager. Then his younger brother died, and the widowed mother grew so lonesome that she secured his release from the contract binding him out, and Clinton returned to her, sure the broader chances which he hungered for were waiting not far ahead.

We have not the space here to detail his varied struggles to secure an education during the next ten years. They form a long and interesting chapter in the full biography which has been written. He had pluck, push and perseverance. Chiefly he was self-taught. He earned his own text-books and studied them in his own way much of the time. As he had secured his first coveted volume—a mutilated Shakespeare—by hoeing corn for a neighbor, so he bought a Latin grammar by special effort and sacrifice. He caught a coon, like many another lad of twelve, but hoping, as few lads would, to realize upon him for educational ends. By patient applications he made the coon expert at many things, and came to love him as a boy might. Then he walked with his pet to Jackson, a half-day's journey, and sold him as a trick animal to the circus which exhibited there, that "Anthon's Latin Lessons" might be his. So he lost the pet he loved, but gained the book he coveted. It was not easy to study Latin alone, unaided. But at night, in front of the fireplace, and by day while a-field, with the help of written slips prepared for such field service the night before, he plodded on through nouns and verbs, declensions and conjugations. The Latin diphthong troubled him as to pronunciation, but his pluck conquered it. Nobody near him knew a Latin word, but by chance he learned of another boy studying the language who was to be at a camp-meeting ten miles distant. To meet that boy he walked the twenty miles of that round trip, and he fairly hugged himself the whole way home because of his success in pumping the boy dry of Latin information without telling how little he really knew himself. When he was 13 years old his mother married William Smith, a well-to-do farmer living at Spring Arbor, in Jackson county, and for awhile he had better advantages, which faithfully he improved. His stepfather liked him, and wished him to have the most liberal college education. All the plans were laid for him to enter Wesleyan Seminary at Albion, in preparation for Michigan Central College, now at Hinsdale, when Mr. Smith died. Again his dream of fine opportunities was broken, but again he set manfully about making the best of things. His twice-widowed mother removed to Albion, where and near where Clinton studied and labored and taught. He achieved first place in Latin and Greek, and, spite of many obstacles, was going forward well toward graduation there, when utter disaster befell him on this line. Hard study by night, and the intense heat of firelight, by which, as a boy, so much study had been done, bore fruit in disease of the eyes, so acute and continued that study became impossible, and with keen, lasting regret, he abandoned his fondest hope.

At Albion he met Miss Jeanette A. Crippen and her brother, fellow-students, and after college dreams were over he took up mercantile business with Miss Crippen's father and brother at Coldwater. In 1850 he married Miss Crippen, whose bright black eyes had fascinated him in recitation hours, and so perfected a partnership which brought him compensation for loss of college honors. Mr. Crippen was the leading merchant and banker of that region, and the firm of Crippen & Fisk kept and increased the commercial standing and enterprise of L. D. Crippen & Co. Clinton B. Fisk's adaptability, goodfellowship and swift business sagacity came into full play. He grew prosperous rapidly, and was known through all that country round. Success attended every step he took. He mingled in or led every social and religious movement. He bought a farm near Coldwater and made it the premium farm of that county. He was versatile, far-sighted, fortunate. Then came the financial crash of 1857. Banks went down on every hand. Business firms failed everywhere. Creditors could not pay. Loans were not collected. Friends advised him to suspend and so protect himself; but Mr. Fisk would not. His bank paid dollar for dollar to the end. But when the end came, though he had some money left, he was without health. That year of constant overwork and terrible strain had broken his hardy constitution and bankrupted his nervous resources. He lay by some months ensuing, and in 1858 took up residence in St. Louis, as western financial agent of the Etna Insurance Company. For a year more he traveled widely the whole length and breadth of the Mississippi Valley and contiguous States. He made broad acquaintance with men, from Abraham Lincoln at his home in Illinois to the humblest planter on a Mississippi bottom. Health came back. New opportunities for usefulness opened before him. He was growing ripe for the richest work a patriot could do. The business men of St. Louis knew and admired him. In the church life there he was a vital force. With 1860 came mutterings of war. Mr. Fisk knew the South and the North. He foresaw conflict and helped make ready for it. He enlisted as a private for three months, and helped capture a camp secretly formed outside the city. The Merchants' Exchange, of vast commercial influence, grew doubtful for the Union and was likely to cast all its weight upon the disunion side. He called a meeting of seceders from the Exchange and organized a Union rival to it which swallowed the old organization completely. He spoke, he wrote, he worked for the cause of right. By birth a Puritan and an Abolitionist, he could do no less. Even as a boy he had been with the Abolition army in politics, small as it was. In 1840 the boys all round him were Whigs, and carried their banner "for Tippecanoe and Tyler, too;" but he raised a solitary flag for Birney and Morris, and bore it to victory. To victory, because he had to fight for the privilege to carry it at all, and won his first conflict in life on that very issue. It wasn't much of a flag—three-fourths of a yard of white cotton cloth, bought with the sale of molasses candy, painted with axle grease, and affixed to a broomstick—not much of a flag, but dear to the boy whose ingenuity devised and whose patriotism bore it. A little dearer than ever, may be, after his mother had spanked him for spoiling her broom. In July of 1862, at President Lincoln's request, he set about recruiting a regiment. Back of him loyally stood the Union Merchants' Exchange, with money to assist. September saw it mustered in and at the front. Then he recruited a brigade, and was commissioned Brigadier-General, Nov. 24, 1862. One month later he proceeded with his full command to Helena, Ark., and until June, 1863, he was on duty in the Department of the Tennessee, where Grant was seeking to capture Vicksburg. After that his service was continuously in Missouri till the war closed. He was some months in command of all southeast Missouri, with headquarters at Pilot Knob, and for a time had charge of certain very lawless north-western counties, which he made orderly and inhabitable. Later he commanded the District of St. Louis, comprising all the territory before in separate districts. When Sterling Price attacked the State capital, General Fisk was ordered to protect it, and met the emergency with cool tact and judgment. The forces of Price were led by Marmaduke and Shelby, and commanded in person by Price. General Fisk had only a handful of troops, but, by strategy, he multiplied them to the ears of Price, and raised such defenses as gave color to these fictitious reports. The first assault was met gallantly, and Price retreated with his large force. Fisk ordered a pursuit and Shelby and Marmaduke were captured; the capital was saved. In February, 1865, he was made Major-General of the Missouri militia, and one month later Andrew Johnson commissioned him Major-General by brevet "for faithful and meritorious services during the war." In May that year he was assigned to special duty as Assistant Commissioner of the Freedmen's Bureau, in which important and delicate capacity he served till September, 1866. The entire States of Kentucky and Tennessee, and parts of Alabama, Mississippi and Arkansas were under his jurisdiction. Through all that once rich territory devastation reigned. The negroes, freed, were largely unwilling to work, and their notions of what they should have and should do, were extravagant, often absurd. To restore confidence between white and black, to readjust the relations of society, and to bring about that industrial status which was imperative, was the task General Fisk took up. He gave it the best work in his power. Mild in his methods, calm always in judgment, decisive as to conclusions, judicial in mental habit, he was at once in his own person a court of just appeal, and a commission to execute. He won common respect. Going up and down the region under his command, he invited before him the former master and slave, set forth to their mutual understanding the law governing both, and the whole facts relating to their mutual interest. He made each his friend. More than any other one man, it is safe to say, he made possible the rehabilitation of Southern fields, and the sure beginning of a better future. Out of this work grew, naturally, the institution of learning for colored youth, known now as Fisk University, at Nashville. General Fisk early saw the need of such liberal helps for the Freedmen, and his influence has been constant in their behalf. Throughout the South today his name is held in reverence among the blacks, and is mentioned in terms of candid respect and confidence by the whites. General Fisk resigned from the army in the fall of 1866, after over four years' unremitting service, and since then has been busily occupied with railroad, banking and ecclesiastical affairs. For eight years he was treasurer of the Missouri and Pacific Railroad; since 1879 he has resided in New Jersey, with headquarters in New York. In Missouri he declined all political honors when urged upon him. In 1884 he came out from the Republican party, whose great leaders—Lincoln, Grant, Greeley, and others—had been his intimate friends, and supported St. John. Two years ago he consented, as a matter of duty and sacrifice, to lead the Prohibition campaign in New Jersey, and as candidate for Governor polled about 20,000 votes—a three-fold increase of the vote previously cast. In that campaign he made one hundred and twenty-five engagements to speak, filled them all, and was never five minutes late. To meet these he traveled five thousand miles. Scrupulous of his every duty, considerate of all men, the soul of personal honor, sensitive as a woman, Clinton B. Fisk shrinks from political warfare, and protests against his preferment as a political leader. The most conspicuous layman in the Methodist Church, to which, as a boy of 10, he gave himself, he gives to religious and denominational progress his chief concern; but he sees how closely the church of God is related to this question of the ages, and his whole heart is alive, his entire nature consecrated, to the fight now up for settlement along political lines. He will refuse no clear call of duty, whatever to him the cost.

Gen. Fisk actively aided, as stated above, in establishing Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., in 1865, and it was named for him. He had been identified with its financial and educational interests, and was president of its board of trustees. He was also a trustee of Dickinson College, of Drew Theological Seminary, and also of Albion College, Michigan. He was trustee of the American Missionary Association, and also a member of the book committee of the M. E. Church. He rendered conspicuous service in Methodism in his efforts toward a reunion of the Northern and Southern branches of the church. He was also identified with the temperance movement. From 1874 to his death he was president of the board of Indian commissioners. He was the Prohibition nominee for President of the United States at one time. He d. July 9, 1890; res. New York, N. Y.

His father-in-law, David Anthony, was one of the earliest cotton manufacturers in the country, and a pioneer of the now immense cotton manufacturing interests of Fall River. He was highly esteemed in the church and State, and very successful in business. The subject of this sketch was educated in the Fall River schools, which are most excellent, finishing with a six years' course in the high school. At 18 years of age he entered the Massasoit bank in Fall River as clerk; was in the banking business for eighteen years, the last ten of which he was cashier of the Fall River National bank. Having acquired quite a little property and being tired of the routine of bank life, he improved the opportunity which was opened by the great fire of 1872 in Boston, to go into the firm with which he is now connected, North, Fiske & Co., Mrs. North having lost largely by the fire and needing capital. Roxbury (suburb and part of Boston) has been his home ever since coming to Boston in Feb., 1873. He has tried to exert a good influence in a quiet way, and lead an upright, honest life. He has held many offices in the Congregational Church, deacon, superintendent of Sunday school, etc. He has had ups and downs in business for the last twenty years, but has enough to live on comfortably if spared to old age; res. 50 Elmore St., Roxbury, Mass.; Boston office, 51-53 Chauncy St.

His parents were Quakers and while he was quite young emigrated west, settling in Centreville, Montgomery County, Ohio, where he lived the remainder of his life. His father was the village blacksmith as well as farmer. Nathan received a liberal education for the times, learned his father's trade but took to farming after his marriage in 1828 to Rebecca Whitehill Cowan. He was frequently elected or appointed to local office by his neighbors and friends, who held him in high esteem. He was one who had a happy faculty of looking on the bright side of passing events and was charitable to a fault. The following incident was characteristic: Hearing a noise at the corn crib one night, he went out and found a ne'er-do-well neighbor helping himself from the crib. Watching him until at least two bushels were in the sack, he stepped up and said, "I guess that is as much as you can carry," and regardless of the plea of the pilferer, who wished to empty the sack, made him tie it up and take it home. City, Aug. 24, 1858, Mary Amanda Greenwood, b. Dec. 12, 1832. Of excellent ancestry. Mr. Cornelius Fiske was born at Lincoln, Mass., completed his preparatory studies at the Lawrence Academy, Groton, Mass., and at the Phillips Exeter Academy, entered Harvard College, and was graduated in the class of 1853. Among his classmates were President Charles W. Eliot, John Quincy Adams, John Davis Washburn, Justin Winsor, and others well known to the public. He studied law in Boston, and later in New York City, in the office of Hon. Erastus C. Benedict (the then leading admiralty lawyer in the United States), of the firm of Benedict, Burr & Benedict, who, together with Beebe, Dean & Donohue, were the leading admiralty lawyers in New York. After leaving the office of Benedict, Burr & Benedict, Mr. Fiske took an office on his own account, and commenced practice in the United States District and Circuit Court, and acquired a large practice in all the courts of New York. Among his clients were many of the leading merchants. For eighteen years he was attorney and counsel to Ball, Black & Co., as long as they were in business, the leading merchants in watches, jewelry and gas fixtures, occupying the place in the mercantile world which Tiffany & Co. now occupies; also to the leading dry goods houses for many years, such as A. T. Stewart & Co., Strang, Adriance & Co., Arnold, Constable & Co., and several silk firms and sugar houses. With this mercantile practice, Mr. Fiske also represents several corporations and is entrusted with the investments of large sums of money upon real estate, and in other first-class ways. It is said that he has never lost a case of which he had the management, except one; in which latter case his client reports that Mr. Fiske strongly advised, not only that the case was extremely doubtful, but that he would lose the case and costs, and expenses. Mr. Fiske stands high in the profession, and is universally respected. Res. New York City; add. 120 Broadway.

Wellington. He remained on the old homestead and carried on farming until about the year 1859. At that time he sold his farm to his brother-in-law, Mr. Elijah Brown, and removed to the center of the town, where for a time he was engaged in the stock business. Later he was engaged in the grain and produce business for several years. The last seven or eight years of his life he was connected in various ways with the Waltham Water Works. He served five years as water commissioner, being chairman of the board at the time of his death. "The Waltham Water Commissioners in making their seventh annual report are reminded that they have sustained a great loss in the death of Mr. Calvin Fiske, the Chairman of the Board. His late associates bear willing testimony to his industry, his fidelity to the best interests of the water works, as well as his earnest desire to act impartially and justly to all the water takers. He was what one would call an old-fashioned man, conscientious and very religious. He never used tobacco or intoxicating liquors and all his habits were of the simplest. He had seven children by his first wife (Susan Hurd), all boys; two children (both girls) by second marriage to Sarah Huntress. He died in 1863 of softening of the brain. 2151. HON. LUKE FISKE (Elijah, Samuel, Samuel, William, John, Nathaniel, Nathaniel, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Waltham, Mass., Feb. 6, 1794; m. there Nov. 23, 1817, Susanna Sweetzer Piper, of Boston, b. Sept. 25, 1796; d. Apr. 30, 1876. Luke Fiske was a remarkable man and one respected and talked about by the people of Waltham while living and his loss was much felt when he died. He was spoken of as one of the intelligent and distinguished men of Middlesex County. He was popular. Broad paths to distinction and eminence lay open before him, were thrown open to him, and smoothed for his footsteps, onward and upward, and few knew why he never took full advantage of them. Luke Fiske might have been one of the great men of the country—a Senator of the United States—had he but stepped forward and used the means and advantages that absolutely stood begging at his side, and wide open for him. Much reliance was placed on his judgment and opinions. During his life he was commissioned to carry out many public measures, but before he acted, every measure was fully canvassed in all its bearings. He always seemed to give with cheerful alacrity his time to the public whether the duty to be performed was an agreeable one or not. He had pride, but placed himself on a footing of equality with all. There was a time in his life when it would have been difficult to provide a man with a more advantageous passport into the political world than a favorable word spoken by Luke Fiske. He entered Harvard College when quite young, and graduated with a good deal of honor. In 1819 he was the orator of the day for the Fourth of July in the town of Waltham. He was an open-hearted, honest man, generous and free in his sympathies, a genial companion, a lover of the social circle, and when roused was a debater of power. He would probably have studied a profession, but being an only child, his father and mother were not willing to have him leave them and he would not disappoint them, and as his father owned two farms adjoining each other he went on to one of them, but did very little but oversee it, as his time was taken up in other ways. He cared very little for money excepting for what it would buy.

In referring to the organization of the Waltham Bank a local paper says: "The Hon. Luke Fiske was chosen from the board of directors as the president of the bank. Mr. Fiske retained his office until a short time before his death, when declining health induced him to resign. He will long be remembered as one of our leading citizens in his day and generation. Possessed of great energy, of will and independence of character he was one of that class of men who are sure to exercise a controlling influence over the community in which they reside. In all matters relating to the well being of the town he took a lively interest. From occupying the most important of town offices he had risen to the position of a Senator for the county of Middlesex and to the honor of a seat in the council of Governor Lincoln. He died in the midst of his usefulness." He d. Feb. 26, 1845; res. Waltham, Mass.

2194. DR. OLIVER FISKE (Nathan, Nathan, Nathan, Nathan, Nathaniel, Nathaniel, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Sept. 2, 1762; m. at Worcester, June 9, 1796, Sarah Duncan, b. 1775; d. Apr. 22, 1855, in Roxbury at her daughter's home. She was the daughter of Mr. Andrew Duncan, a native of Glasgow, Scotland, who in company with his countryman, Wm. Campbell, established himself in trade in Worcester before the Revolution and married Sarah, daughter of Joseph Lynde, Esq., of Charlestown. The loyalty of Mr. Campbell compelled him to leave the country and settle in Nova Scotia, where for more than twenty years he was Mayor of St. John. He died in 1823, aged 82. Mr. Duncan shared the same political feeling, but continued to reside in Worcester under unfavorable influences. He was drowned in a fishing excursion on Quinsigamond Lake, soon after the termination of the war. Mrs. Fiske was his only daughter.

Dr. Oliver Fiske, son of Rev. Nathan Fiske, was born in Brookfield, Mass. His early education was superintended by his father, whose productive farm, during most of the Revolutionary war was from necessity, principally confided to his management. In the summer of 1780 a requisition for recruits for the Revolutionary war was made. The quotas of men had thus far been furnished without compulsory process; but levies had been so frequent that none would enlist freely, at a season so busy. The company then commanded by the late Major General John Culter, was ordered to met for a draft. Exempted by the courtesy extended to clergymen from military duty, and never having been enrolled, Dr. Fiske offered himself as volunteer, with the approbation of his father, who applauded the patriotic spirit, while the personal sacrifice it involved was severely felt. Animated by the example, the requisite number came from the ranks on the parade. The regiment in which they were embodied was ordered to West Point, and was stationed in the vicinity of that post at the defection of Arnold and the capture and execution of Andre. On being discharged he returned to the farm, and was employed in its cultivation until the close of the war in 1783, when he entered Harvard College.

At the breaking out of Shays' insurrection he was instrumental in reorganizing the Marti-Mercurian Band of the university, in obtaining an order from Gov. Bowdoin for sixty stands of arms at Castle William, and was second officer of the company. When the court commenced at Concord he was the organ of a petition from this corps, to march in support of government, which was properly declined by the authorities of the institution.

In the winter vacation (1786-7) he took a school at Lincoln, but hearing of the threatened movements of the malcontents to stop the judicial tribunals at Worcester, he procured a substitute to assume his engagements, exchanged the ferrule for an appropriate weapon and hastened to Worcester. Finding the enemy dispersed and the troops on their way to Springfield he set out to visit his father. On the heights of Leicester the report of Gen. Shepherd's artillery diverted him from his course. Uniting himself to a body of light horsemen, then en route, he joined Gen. Lincoln's army. When the rebellion was suppressed he resumed his studies, without censure for the long absence, and graduated in 1787. After the usual preparation, under the tuition of Dr. Atherton of Lancaster, he commenced business in Worcester in October, 1790.

He was active in forming a county medical association, and in obtaining the establishment of the present district organization of the Massachusetts Medical Society. Soon after the formation of the last named body in the second medical district, he was elected president and held the offices of councillor and censor until he retired from the profession. In February, 1803, he was appointed special justice of the court of common pleas. During five years succeeding 1809 he was member of the executive council. The commissions of Justice of the Peace, of the Quorum, and throughout the commonwealth, were successively received, and the latter has been renewed to the present time.

Dr. Fiske was corresponding secretary of the Linnaean Society of New England in 1815, of the Worcester Agricultural Society from 1824, and councillor of the American Antiquarian Society. He was Register of Deeds during the triennial term from 1816 to 1821. From this period an increasing defect in the sense of hearing induced him to retire from busy life and devote himself to the pursuits of horticulture and agriculture, those employments, in his own graceful language, the best substitute to our progenitors for their loss of Paradise, and the best solace to their posterity for the evils they entailed. The results of that taste and skill in his favorite occupations, early imbibed, ardently cherished and successfully cultivated, have been freely and frequently communicated to the public in many essays, useful and practical in matter and singularly elegant in manner. He published an oration delivered at Worcester in 1797, an essay on "Spotted Fever," forming part of the "Transactions of the Massachusetts Medical Society," and other writings.

By the exertions of Dr. Oliver Fiske the most respectable and influential physicians of the country assembled and formed the Worcester Medical Society Dec. 18, 1794. Dr. John Frink, of Rutland, was elected president and Dr. Fiske, of Worcester, secretary. At an early meeting a petition presented to the Legislature for incorporation was referred to a joint committee of physicians and resulted in an arrangement to enlarge the numbers of the general society and a proposal to create district associations. This system, removing the evils which had been felt was mutually satisfactory, was carried into effect, and on the 26th of Sept. 1804, the Worcester District Society was organized. The succession of presidents has been as follows: 1794, John Frink; 1803, Israel Atherton; 1806, Oliver Fiske. He d. in Boston, Jan. 25, 1837; res. Worcester and Boston, Mass.

He was called into public service in 1856 as a member of the Legislature, and was a member of the Board of Aldermen in 1858-59, and was elected Mayor of the city in 1863-64. He became a director in the Boston & Albany Railroad corporation in 1858, and was its vice-president and president in 1878, which office he held at his death which took place accidentally at New London, Conn., in 1880. 2198. REV. THADDEUS FISKE (Jonathan, Nathan, Nathan, Nathan, Nathan, Nathaniel, Nathaniel, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. June 22, 1762, in Weston; m. June 17, 1787, Lucy Clarke, b. May 2, 1767, dau. of Rev. Jonas Clarke, of Lex.; d. Mar. 9, 1855. Her great-grandmother was Lucy Hancock, sister of Rev. John Hancock, father of the signer of the Declaration of Independence. The Rev. Thaddeus Fiske, in an account of himself and ancestry appended to a "Sermon delivered at West Cambridge, Apr. 13, 1828," at the close of his ministry, and published at Boston by Charles C. Little and James Brown, 1843, states: "I was born on the 22d of June, 1762. At the age of 17 I began to prepare for college under the tuition of Rev. Mr. Samuel Woodward, who was an able instructor and linguist, the minister of Weston, my native town. I was offered by him for examination, and was admitted a student of Harvard University in July, 1781, and graduated in 1785."

After he had taken his degree, he taught a grammar school in Lexington, and boarded in the family of the Rev. Jonas Clark. He returned to the university in Cambridge, and studied divinity under Rev. Prof. Wigglesworth, and was licensed to preach Aug. 8, 1786, by the "Association of Ministers in and about Cambridge." He preached his first sermon in his native town, and after supplying several vacant parishes, was invited in March, 1787, to preach to the Second Congregational Church and Society in Cambridge, then called Menotomy, now "West Cambridge." On July 16, 1787, he received a call to settle as their minister. "I hesitated," he said, "for some time, whether to decline or to accept their invitation. The parish was very small and poor and considerably involved in debt, having been destitute of a settled minister about six years, and was in a broken state, very much reduced in numbers and property. It was generally thought doubtful whether they would be able to support a minister, or pay the small salary they offered me. But it was feared by many, and so stated to me, that if I gave a negative answer, the church and society would not make any further effort to obtain a minister, and would be broken up and dissolved."

He accepted their invitation, and was ordained Apr. 23, 1788. Having cast his lot with the "Second Church and Congregation in Cambridge," he immediately endeavored to allay the difficulties that obstructed their prosperity. He began by relinquishing a part of his salary. To supply the deficiency of his support, he boarded and instructed children and youth, and some he prepared for admission to college; he instructed many daughters of his parishioners, and other young ladies of the neighboring towns.

Though this employment occupied much of his time, yet he was enabled to perform the usual duties of a minister, and to study and write and preach upward of twelve hundred sermons during his ministry. He visited and taught his flock from house to house, gave religious instruction to youth, and continued the practice adopted by his predecessor, the Rev. Samuel Cooke, of meeting the children annually, and oftener, for the purpose of examining and assisting them in their knowledge of the assembly's catechism, which was universally taught then by their parents and heads of families. Sabbath schools were designed at first to aid this practice. He assisted in defraying the current expenses of the parish; he contributed fifty dollars toward furnishing a new house of worship, built in 1805; he remitted annually, during his ministry, the parish taxes of many individuals who were either unable or unwilling to pay their annual assessments; he gave fifty dollars in aid and support of a singing school for the service of the house of worship, and ten dollars toward purchasing an octavoviol for the use of the singers; had a set of curtains put in the foreseat of the front gallery for the singers' convenience, and the pulpit painted at his expense. He commenced, in 1806, the establishment of a social library, and took the entire care of it in his house, and delivered books to the proprietors for more than twenty years without compensation. This and other things he did; and hence, in a few years, "the appearance of the town, and the morals, and habits of the people," were changed for the better, and "its favorable aspect induced many individuals and families of other towns to come and settle in the place and aid and share in its growing prosperity." He received from his people at the same time "many tokens of their respect and benevolence," and enjoyed his full share of "their regards and affections."

In 1788 the Rev. Mr. Fiske became a member of the Board of Overseers of Harvard University. In 1821 he was honored with the degree of Doctor of Divinity by Columbia College, New York. He voluntarily resigned his pastoral office and charge Apr. 23, 1828, leaving a church of about one hundred members and a congregation of about five hundred souls for his successor.

Such is the substance of the narrative of this aged minister, appended to the discourse delivered at the close of his ministry. The text of this farewell discourse was Acts xx. 18-21. Subject: The Life and Character of St. Paul, a Model for Christian Ministers. During his ministry he baptized 749; number of funerals he attended, 665; admissions to the church (including those owning their covenant), 288; joined in marriage, 386 couples. He lived to see five ministers successively ordained over this society, three of whom died before him; was at the time of his death the oldest clergyman in Massachusetts. A marble monument marks the spot of his burial in Arlington's old burying ground, amid the members of his flock.

In 1788 he wrote as follows in accepting the call to the church: "To the people of the Church and Congregation of the North West Parish in Cambridge. In answer to the invitation you have given me to settle with you in the work of the ministry, I, in the first place return you my most hearty thanks, especially for the many instances of your friendship, esteem and affection. The sincerity and ardency of your desires are completely manifested in the disposition you have shown, and your willingness to do whatever the heart of a reasonable man can wish. And in considering your invitation in every point of view, I find my duty and happiness unite in the acceptance. And as you have agreed to be satisfied in the choice of me as your minister, and being induced by the encouragement you have offered, and in confirmation of the contract we have made, I now accept of your invitation. And being fully convinced that in the promotion of your prosperity, peace and happiness, I shall increase my own, I do cheerfully devote myself, my strength and future years to you, my fathers and brethren, in the service of my Maker, and our common Lord and Master. Under the protection and blessing of Almighty God, being assisted by Him who is the Great Shepherd and head of the Church, and being indulged with your prayers, I hope I may be a happy instrument as a minister of the Gospel, to advance the Redeemer's kingdom, and promote the glory of God in the world, that I may serve you faithfully all the appointed time of my days. And that in the morning of the Resurrection, I may be enabled to appear, and say, here, Lord, am I, and here are the souls which Thou hast given me.

Thaddeus Fiske."

Rev. Dr. Fiske's Resignation. May 8, 1828. The Rev. Dr. Fiske having previously signified his wish to the parish to resign the pastoral office, he was this day regularly dismissed by vote of the parish. The parish at the same time gave an affectionate and respectful testimonial of the good character and long and faithful services of their pastor. For a full account of all the proceedings relative to the resignation of Dr. Fiske, see the Parish Records.

May 14, 1828. At a meeting of the church—chose Jeduthun Wellington moderator and Miles Gardner clerk pro tem. On motion, voted unanimously that the following resolve be accepted and a copy of the same given to the Rev. Doctor Fiske, viz.:

To all whom these presents may come. Whereas it has become expedient for reasons stated in a communication made to the church and congregation of West Cambridge, by the Rev. Dr. Fiske, Pastor of said church, that his pastoral relation be dissolved by mutual consent, and that Mr. Miles Gardner, the parish clerk, be a committee from the church to express to him the due sense we have of his long and faithful services among us and the deep regret we feel that existing circumstances should dissolve a union which has been so endearing to us by time. And during forty years of his ministry he has maintained a fair character as a man and as a Christian in the performance of his various and arduous duties; and has been an example of the believer in the word, in conversation, in faith, in benevolence, in humility, in purity, and in piety. And it is our ardent and fervent wish that his life may be prolonged to do good; that the infirmities of age may rest upon him with joy and hope. And that many blessings and comforts may attend him in his retirement from his pastoral labors among us. He d. Nov. 14, 1855; res. West Cambridge, Mass.

2256. HON. JOSIAH JONES FISKE (David, Henry, Nathan, Nathan, Nathan, Nathaniel, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Sturbridge, Mass., Nov. 28, 1785; m. at Wrentham, May 6, 1813, Jerusha Norton, b. there Apr. 5, 1779; d. in Boston Apr. 1, 1867. Mr. Fiske graduated from Brown University, in the class with Gov. Wm. L. Marcy, whose friendship he enjoyed. After graduation he became preceptor in an academy in Maine, but shortly determined to study law, and entered the office of Nathaniel Searle, LL. D., of Providence, and later, that of Timothy Bigelow, Esq., of Boston. Mr. Fiske became an able and successful lawyer. His office at Wrentham, Mass., was noted, and a large number of students acquired their knowledge of law under his care and instruction. Mr. Fiske was a man of great energy, quick perception, and a fluent speaker. His ability to analyze a case and properly present its strong points, contributed largely to his success, and if he had devoted himself exclusively to the law, he would undoubtedly have ranked among the distinguished in that profession. Early in life he became interested in cotton manufacturing. He built a mill at Sturbridge in 1827 and later erected a mill containing 10,000 spindles and 200 looms. The village of Fiskedale, Mass., commemorates his name. Men of Mr. Fiske's stamp have molded the generation in which they lived. He was active and enterprising and earnest in promoting the general welfare. That he was deemed a public spirited man by his townsmen is evidenced by the fact that he was repeatedly elected to office. He was State Senator from 1823 to 1826 inclusive; was member of the Governor's Council in 1831 and was a member of the first board of railroad commissioners created by the State. From 1823 to 1827 he was aid de camp to Major-General Crane. He was a prominent Mason, being District Deputy Grand Master and member of the Grand Lodge, F. & A. M. of Massachusetts. He was far seeing in his thought and plans, and subsequent events in Sturbridge and Wrentham proved the wisdom of his judgment. He was courteous and kindly in his disposition, and these traits were marked in his family intercourse. He married Jerusha, daughter of Dr. Jenckes Norton and Jerusha Ware of Wrentham. His death occurred at Sturbridge, his birthplace, Aug. 15, 1838. His brothers, David Woodward, a lawyer who settled in Detroit and died in 1871, and Calvin P., a physician who lived most of his life in Sturbridge and died in Chicago in 1874, were both graduates of Brown University. Of his ten children Josiah Jones and George Jenckes were members of the well known firm of James M. Beebe & Co., of Boston, and contributed largely to its success. Josiah was unmarried and died in 1850. George died in Nice, France, in 1868, leaving a widow Frances Lathrop, daughter of James M. Beebe, a son George Stanley, born in Paris in 1867, and a daughter Esther Lathrop, born in Nice in 1868. He d. Aug. 15, 1838; res. Sturbridge, Mass.

3842. i. JOSEPH NORTON, b. Mar. 4, 1814; m. in Detroit, Mich., May 24, 1849, Charlotte M. Morse, dau. of Dr. Elijah Morse, of Mt. Vernon, Me., for several years member of the Senate and House of Representatives of Maine. He d. in Boston, s. p., June 18, 1892. Joseph Norton received his early education at Day's Academy. In 1833 he entered the counting-room of Shaw, Patterson & Co., where he remained five years, and afterward became confidential clerk of the banking house of Geo. B. Blake & Co. In 1846 he became a member of the Boston Broker's Board, and opened a banking office on State Street. He met with great success during his active business life, his ventures proving very lucrative. He enjoyed the highest confidence of the business public in a wonderful degree. This was due not only to his unquestionable personal integrity but also to his well known business methods and careful arrangement of his financial matters. While at times his operations were immense, his capital was invested in assets only of the highest character, so that he could in every emergency meet his obligations without inconvenience or sacrifice. He never speculated, and his connection with an enterprise was a guarantee that it was founded on sound business principles. He retired from active business in 1870, spending the next three years in Europe, during which time he studied the financial affairs of Europe, making himself familiar with the moneyed interests of the old world. He was among the first of the large property holders to inaugurate the erection of the modern, palatial office buildings. In 1888 he erected on State Street the well known Fiske building, one of the finest buildings in Boston, a model of beauty and convenience. In richness of interior finish and beauty of architecture it is unsurpassed in New England. Mr. Fiske devoted the remaining years of his life to the care of his extensive private business. Up to the very last of his life he enjoyed remarkable vigorous health, and his well preserved faculties of mind and body were a source of comment and congratulation. The illness which terminated in his death, June 18, 1892, was the result of a severe cold, which confined him to the house only ten days. Mr. Fiske was retiring in his disposition, finding his chief enjoyment in his family. His sunny and kindly disposition rendered his home life a very happy one. His charities were unostentatious and seldom extended where publicity would be given to his acts. Deserving young people struggling to improve their condition strongly appealed to his sympathies. He was a firm believer in the cardinal doctrines of Christianity and all his life was guided by their teachings and precepts. Though a Republican in politics, he was never an intense partisan, nor did he have the least desire for public office. His aim was to discharge conscientiously the duties of a private citizen

After the death of his wife, in 1866 he came to Chicago, Ill., and in 1870 was married to Mrs. Mary A. Hetfield, who still survives him. Mentions son, Lucius C., Henry M., and George D. and daughter Sarah. In the town of Sturbridge, Mass., is a rise of land (and a very sightly place, too,) which has gone by the name of "Fisk Hill" for more than 150 years. Henry M. was born there and lived on a farm fifty-six years. His father and mother were born, lived and died there. His father's father was born and lived there between fifty and sixty years, but died in Woodstock, N. Y. His mother's father and mother were born, lived and died there. They, together with his father and mother, died on the same farm that Henry lived on fifty-six years. At one time there were seven families by the name of Fisk living on the Hill, and there was no family by any other name. Henry can recollect when there were five families of Fisk's, and only two by any other name. His sister Sarah and himself were the last ones to leave the Hill, but they still live in plain sight of the old farm, about two miles away. They have outlived all their relatives that are nearer than cousins; no uncles or aunts, nephews or nieces. He d. Dec. 7, 1859; res. Sturbridge, Mass.

He presumes if his mother was living she would say that he made more work than he did in the first years of his life; still he lived there. He sold the farm and moved to Southbridge and spent the rest of his life there. For a few years after he went there he worked in a machine shop and kept a hotel. The rest of the time he has been in no business. On that farm his mother, a daughter of Henry Fiske, was born, and lived there till she was married. He was a man of thoroughly upright, honorable, Christian character, a loyal citizen and a true and faithful friend. His kindly, genial nature endeared him to all who came into contact with him, and his integrity commanded universal respect.

Y., Maria Louise Hodges, of Warren, Mass., b. Apr. 4, 1814; d. Aug., 1889. Samuel Lyon Fiske, son of Samuel and Sally Lyon Fiske, was born at Southbridge, Mass. As a youth remarkably precocious and with maturity developed remarkable ability and strength of character. Associated with Sayles & Merriam, he became at 21 agent of the Hamilton Woolen Company, and planned and built that company's water power, mill building and houses. The crisis of 1846 when the change in tariff prostrated so many woolen industries compelled the company to make great changes in plant and make worsted delaines, then a new fabric, instead of broadcloth, which had been their product. At this period his genius was especially demonstrated, as the change was successfully inaugurated, and later the plant was greatly increased by the building of print works. Unfortunately the strain on his system was so great that his health broke down and the death, at this critical period in his career, of his firm friend, Willard Sayles, the head of and largest stockholder in the company created changes in the organization and put another man in control. His future career was varied, but he never failed in successfully conducting any undertaking. He died in Philadelphia at the early age of 54. He was always a staunch Republican, and an advocate of protection principles. A strong temperance advocate, never touched intoxicating liquors or tobacco. He was honored and respected by all who knew him. He d. in Sept., 1869; res. Southbridge, Mass.

Reuben Eames, of Revolutionary fame and direct descendant of Thomas Eames, of Dedham, who came to America as early as 1634. David Fiske, Jr., descended from good Puritan stock from three lines, Fiskes, Babcocks, Lelands, and was a noble specimen of manhood of the times; honorable, quiet, unassuming in his manners and dealings, and acquired property sufficient to purchase a large farm, and occupied and improved well. In the year 1815, there occurred a very severe storm of wind, very much like the western cyclones, but at that time such storms were unknown here, and never have occurred since. At that time there was a very great damage to buildings, orchards and forest trees. He was the owner of a large forest of pine, hemlock and other woods, which was destroyed and laid low; and this storm has always been designated by the men of those days as the Great Blow. In trying to recuperate his fallen fortunes he set himself to converting the fallen trees into lumber as speedily as possible, and thus overworked his natural strength and he died of typhoid fever at the age of 53 years. July 19, 1780; d. Aug. 14, 1874. Rev. Abner Morse, A. M., in his history of inhabitants of the towns of Sherborn and Holliston, on page 86, writes as follows: Timothy Fisk, A. M., M. D., M. M. S. S., graduated from Harvard University 1801, subsequently studied medicine, settled in his native town and was her first regularly educated physician. His course from the first was marked with that modesty and gentlemanly bearing which cultivation insures, and which are equally removed from the swaggering pretensions of empiricism and the low and vile arts of rude and jealous rivalry. His skill was soon appreciated and his conduct rewarded in a wide practice. This he retained to the great advantage of the public, for a series of years, seldom attained by a laborious physician. He has long held a high reputation abroad, shared largely in the confidence of the faculty; ever maintained the strictest regard for moral virtue; and he cannot fail of being long remembered as the beloved physician. Holden, Mass., Aug. 31, 1822; m. at Worcester, June 20, 1844, Rebecca Haskell Sumner, b. Apr. 20, 1825; d. Aug. 18, 1883. Edward R. Fiske was a printer and publisher of assured position in Worcester, one of the oldest in the city, and once a prominent newspaper man. He was born in Holden, Worcester county, Mass., and spent his boyhood there. In Oct., 1837, he came to Worcester, and commenced working at the printer's trade with Mirick & Bartlett, on the Worcester Palladium and Worcester Republican, the latter being afterward merged in the Palladium. The papers were published in the Central Exchange. In May, 1841, Mr. Fiske formed a partnership with Samuel D. Church, and in connection with job printing, published the Worcester Waterfall, a temperance paper, afterward burned in the fire of the Central Exchange, 1843. After the fire, Church & Fiske having sold the Waterfall, printed the Palladium in the Central Exchange, which was rebuilt. From this time until 1851 he spent a few months printing the State Sentinel, a year as bookkeeper in Clinton, and the remainder of the time as bookkeeper in the office of the Worcester Spy. In 1851 he began business as a book and job printer in Flagg's block, opposite the Bay State House, and was burned out there in 1853. In Apr., 1855, he purchased the daily and weekly Transcript, with Werden Reynolds, which they published for one year. From this time until his death he continued uninterruptedly the book and job printing business, publishing in connection with it the Worcester Daily Press, from Apr., 1873, to Dec., 1874, when, on account of ill health he relinquished his interest in the Press to his partner, J. A. Spalding. His printing office was widely known as "The Franklin Printing Office." Mr. Fiske was a member of All Saints' (Episcopal) Church, and was at one time largely identified with its interests. He was a member of the vestry for nine years, from 1870 to 1879, being its clerk in 1870. He was also active in the Sunday school, serving as superintendent for awhile. He was a member of the City Council for two years, 1872 and 1873; of Montacute Lodge A. F. & A. M.; and of the Worcester Typothetae, the organization of master printers of the city of Worcester. He was in ill health for some months before his death, which occurred at Mt. Holyoke, Northampton, Mass., June 29, 1891. On June 20, 1844, he married Rebecca Haskell Sumner, of Beverly, Mass., who died Aug. 18, 1883. He d. June 29, 1891; res. Worcester, Mass.

When the call for volunteers was made in 1863 he was one of the first to enlist in Company E., Fifth Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, and served until the close of the war. Returning home with honors, he worked at his trade and studied medicine, believing that he was better fitted for the latter vocation in life. In 1871 he began the practice of medicine at Springfield, Mo., under the able tutorship of his brother, Francis H. Fisk, M. D. In 1873 he returned to Olney, Ill., to assist his father, whose health was rapidly declining. After his father's death, which sad event occurred July 22, 1874, he took up the entire practice, continuing successfully until 1878, when, feeling that the invigorating gulf breeze of the southwest would rebuild his overtaxed constitution, he decided to move to Texas, since which time he has devoted his exclusive attention to the study and treatment of nervous diseases of men and women, building up an enviable reputation over his competitors, and today Dr. R. W. Fisk stands pre-eminently at the head of his well chosen profession in the special branches he has outlined. The Fort Worth (Texas) Gazette, says editorially: "Dr. R. W. Fisk.—This distinguished physician, located permanently in Fort Worth about three years ago, and has built up an enviable reputation in the treatment and cure of chronic nervous diseases of men and women and catarrh. His success has been marvelous in curing diseases that baffled the skill of the best physicians in our city or State. Hundreds in this and adjoining States who have been cured by this skillful physician will long sing his praises. Dr. Fisk is an affable gentleman, modest and unassuming for one of his ability and attainments. In his relations with all with whom he comes in contact he is uniformly courteous and kind. Dr. Fisk has cured many who were without hope, languishing on the bed with disease that baffled the most learned physicians. Under his treatment they improve, as if by the magical touch of one inspired. Dr. Fisk has carried sunshine and gladness into many households where once the dark gloom of disease enshrouded the hearthstone. Many friends and patients join in their approving voice to swell the grand chorus that goes up from all over the land in his praise and honor. May he live long to do much good for his skill is marvelous."

2545. EX-GOV. JOHN FLAVEL FISK (David, Ebenezer, Ebenezer, Ebenezer, David, David, David, Jeffrey, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Dec. 14, 1815, Genesee County, N. Y.; m. in Cincinnati, Ohio, Oct. 25, 1842, Elizabeth Sarah Johnson, b. Jan. 1, 1822. He was born in Genesee County, N. Y., and when quite small moved with his parents to Kentucky. His father, Dr. Fisk, died in Mt. Vernon, Ohio, while on a journey from Kentucky to New York. The subject of this sketch received an excellent education, studied law and was in due course of time admitted to the bar. He has practiced since continuously, until his retirement, in the courts of the State of Kentucky. He has been one of the most prominent citizens in Covington, Ky. He has been president of two academies in Kentucky, president of the school board in Covington, Ky.; several times attorney of the city—called city attorney; several times county attorney; eight years State Senator; part of the time president of the Senate and thus ex-officio Lieutenant-Governor. He has been through all the grades of Odd Fellowship, including Grand Master of this State—that is of the I. O. O. F., and Grand Representative of the Sovereign Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F., of the United States; at present a director in the Covington and Cincinnati (Suspension) Bridge Company; director in the Covington Gas Company; director in the First National Bank of Covington, Ky.; president of Highland Cemetery; president of the board of trustees of the First Christian Church, and vice-president of the Covington Protestant Children's Home. One of the religious papers in Kentucky in referring to Gov. Fisk says: "Last Saturday, Gov. John F. Fisk celebrated his 80th birthday by a family reunion, at the old home on Eleventh Street. It was a very enjoyable affair. Brother Fisk has held many honorable positions in the gift of the people, and his family is one of which he can be justly proud. He has been one of the pillars of this church for many years, and we all hope he may be spared yet a long while to aid us by his counsel and timely advice. As was truly said at the reunion, he is the highest of God's creation—a Christian gentleman." In Jan., 1879, at the invitation of the Mexican minister, a company of merchants and others visited Mexico. There were nearly one hundred of them. The first night out of Chicago—the starting point—they organized under the name of "The American Industrial Deputation," elected officers, and appointed Governor Fisk president. Under this organization they visited Mexico as the guests of the Republic, remained there one month, being feasted by cabinet officers, by Hon. John W. Foster, the then American minister, and others. They returned via Vera Cruz and Galveston. Several years since, Diaz, the president of Mexico, visited several cities of the United States, Chicago among them. Governor Fisk was invited to meet President Diaz in Chicago, and did so. A banquet was given at the Palmer House, at which the Governor responded to one of the toasts: res. 13 W. 11th St., Covington, Ky.

Q., Dec., 13, 1836, and is the third son of Nathaniel Fisk and grandson of Capt. Cotton Fisk, a United Empire Loyalist, who came from Epping, N. H., to Canada in 1788. John, one of the four, as soon as he was old enough, worked on the farm during the summer months and attended school in winter, finishing his education at the age of 18 possession of his father's farm in 1840, he married Ellen Maria Knowlton, by which marriage there were ten children at the Granby Academy. Coming into born, five sons and five daughters, all attaining maturity, excepting the two youngest sons who died in infancy. As one of the leading agriculturists of his county, he has been called to fill various positions of trust, doing duty for thirteen years as a member of the local council, a member of the school board, and filling other minor positions in municipal office. He was appointed a Justice of the Peace by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province in 1882. At an early period of his life he developed a taste for horticultural pursuits, and for many years has been engaged in the nursery business, and as a fruit grower becoming an authority of some note on the fruits of his Province. United with others of similar tastes, who, in 1874, succeeded in organizing a Fruit Grower's Association at Abbotsford, he was elected one of its chief officers, and for several years has filled the position as president. This society published the first fruit list for the Province of Quebec in 1875, and for many years entered largely into experimental work and the introduction of new fruits, which have become widely known through the dissemination of its trees and collections of fruits which have appeared on most of the exhibition tables of the Province from time to time, as well as on those of the Centennial at Philadelphia in 1876, the Intercolonial and Indian at London, England, in 1886, and the World's Fair in Chicago in 1893. Feeling the need of a Provincial organization and associating himself with other leading fruit growers of the Province, application was made to the Provincial Legislature for incorporation, which was granted by the government in January, 1894, under the name of "The Pomological and Fruit Growing Society of the Province of Quebec." A meeting was convened during the following month at Abbotsford for the purpose of organizing and electing a board of directors, when Mr. Fisk was honored by becoming the first president of the new society. When old enough he was sent each winter to the district school until the fall of 1888, when he went to Knowlton, P. Q., to attend the academy, returning home in the spring to help his father on the farm at Abbotsford. He went to Knowlton again the following fall for another winter in the academy, and it was after returning to Abbotsford again that he decided to study medicine, and immediately commenced work on the subjects necessary for his matriculation in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the Province of Quebec, studying evenings after the day's work on the farm was over. In Oct., 1890, he entered the high school at Granby, P. Q., and the following spring he took with honors the degree of associate in arts from McGill University. He continued his studies during the winter of 1891-92 at the Granby high school, and in May, 1892, successfully passed his matriculation for the study of medicine in the Province of Quebec. In Oct., 1892, he commenced the four years' course of medical study at McGill University, Montreal. During his final year there he was elected by his fellow students to the position of president of the Undergraduates Medical Society. Graduating with first class honors, he received from the university on the 31st of March, 1896, the degree of doctor of medicine and master of surgery. Dr. Fisk then applied for the position of resident medical officer in the Montreal General Hospital, and stood first in the entrance examination given to the twenty-eight applicants by the Hospital Medical Board, thereby receiving the appointment for one year.

Nov. 20, 1867, Clara Lucelia Fiske, b. Jan. 6, 1845. His education was obtained at the public schools at Abbotsford, Granby, Lennoxville and McGill College, Montreal, all in the Province of Quebec, Canada. While at Lennoxville, in the fall of 1857, he unfortunately met with an accident to his right knee which necessitated his using crutches for the two following years. In June, 1860, he went to England for a trip for his health, returning much benefited. In Dec., 1860, he went to Montreal and entered the office of Dr. Aldis Bernard, surgeon dentist, to study said profession, and became a pupil of Dr. Bernard. After remaining with the doctor until the 21st of February, 1861, he was accepted and indentured to him for two years, having to pay him $200 and board himself; also having to attend lectures at McGill College, with the understanding that he was to become a partner at the end of the two years. Unfortunately when his time was up his health was so broken from hard study and work that his doctor ordered him out of the city and to take a long holiday. In May, 1863, he left the city and went knocking about the townships, returning every few months to Dr.

Bernard to see how he could stand the city practice. After remaining for some time he found he was obliged to go to the country again. This went on until Oct., 1866, when he went to Waterloo, P. Q., and bought out A. A. Knowlton, dentist, and remained there until May, 1888, when he returned to Montreal, where he is at present located in the practice of his profession at No. 2 Cathcart St.; res. 2 Cathcart St., Montreal, Canada.

2563. REV. NATHANIEL BENJAMIN FISK (Sewell C., Cotton, Ebenezer, Ebenezer, David, David, David, Jeffrey, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Abbotsford, P. Q., Mar. 6, 1848; m. there June 4, 1872, Katherine S. Gillespie, b. there Nov. 12, 1849. Rev. Nathaniel B. Fisk was born in Abbotsford, P. Q., Mar. 4, 1848, son of Sewell Cotton Fisk and Mary Ann Gorton. In 1866 he entered the New Hampshire Conference Seminary, where he graduated, taking immediately thereafter the theological course at the Boston University, from which he graduated in 1871. He was ordained a deacon in the Methodist Episcopal Church at Lynn, Apr. 6, 1873, and an elder at Springfield, Apr. 11, 1875. He has occupied stations in the New England Conference since 1871, all his pastorates being three years. He has had a grand record as pastor, winning all hearts to himself, and directly leading multitudes to the Savior of men. His preaching is strong, pathetic, convincing. He moves men. He is a man of intense energy and tireless industry. This is his fourth year at Chicopee Falls, and the church under his lead has reached its most prosperous history, with a Sunday school of more than 300 members and a church membership of 275 members in full and 43 probation. It has today the largest Sunday school and largest congregation of any church in the city. He built a fine church at Upton, Mass. The elegant Grace Church at Cambridge, a $6,000 parsonage at Ashburnham, besides raising $14,000 to pay off the debt on the Ashburnham Church. He secured the gift of a $7,000 parsonage from his personal friend, Hon. Luman Tufts at Hudson. While at Grace Church, Cambridge, Mr. Fisk was invited by the pastor, official board and the presiding elder to take the assistant pastorate of People's Church, Boston, but declined. He was also offered the business management of the New England Conservatory of Music, having 2,250 pupils. Since coming to Chicopee Falls he has declined an offer of $4,000 per year, with a guarantee for five years, and also an interest in the business, if he would take charge of a stock company in Boston, as business manager. His record of 2,200 pastoral calls last year shows him to be abundant in labors. In 1872 Mr. Fisk was married to Miss Katherine Gillespie, who has labored with him earnestly in the gospel. In 1878 he enjoyed a protracted vacation in Europe, visiting Scotland, England, Ireland, Belgium, Holland, Switzerland, Germany, Prussia, Italy and France; res. Chicopee Falls, Mass.

His life up to the death of his father in 1861 was a very easygoing, uneventful one, his time being mostly spent at the schools of the district and adjacent towns. Being the youngest son and at that period the only one at home, his father's death threw the care of the farm and postoffice upon him, and his life for a few years was an active and rather laborious one, but he found leisure to prosecute his studies and in 1865 he was indentured to Mr. Houghton, barrister of Montreal, and entered upon the study of law at McGill College. In 1866 his articles of indenture were transferred to his cousin, John J. C. Abbott, Q. C., then the leading lawyer in the city and afterward Sir John Abbott, premier of the Dominion of Canada. In May, 1868, he received the degree of B. C. L. from McGill College, and in the month of December following was admitted to the practice of the law. After spending two years in the practice of his profession in Montreal, he removed to Coaticook in 1871 where he has since resided. He married Aleyda E. David, daughter of the late Lieutenant-Colonel David, of Montreal. After an active and successful practice of his profession for ten years he became interested in manufacturing industries, and in 1881 assumed the management of an extensive knitting industry in his town and is at present at the head of the Lenman Manufacturing Company there, a wealthy corporation controlling a number of factories both in this Province and in Ontario. He has taken an active interest in politics, and usually directs the political contests in his section of that county in the interests of the liberal conservative party; res. Coaticook, P. Q.

4397. i. ALMON PERRY, b. July 10, 1835. It is probable that Mr. Fisk has the distinction of being the oldest dry goods merchant in Rock Island county, Ill. He is a native of Northern New York and spent the first ten years of his adult life in railway service. He then went to Geneseo, Ill., and engaged in the dry goods business for ten years after, which he located in Moline, the date being 1873. As proprietor of the Boston Store he has had several of the best locations in the city and his removals have been due to the changing course of business. The new store in the Rosenstein block, which he will occupy before Nov. 1, 1896, is to be the most elegantly fitted and furnished store in that city. Mr. Fisk is a shrewd buyer. As a merchant he is successful and as a citizen has hosts of friends who hold him in high esteem.

2721. DANIEL FISK (Abraham, Jonathan, John, Benjamin, John, John, Phinehas, Thomas, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Whitesboro (Utica), N. Y., June 10, 1792; m. May 29, 1816, Sarah Doolittle Brown, b. St. Johnsbury, Vt., Dec. 24, 1798; d. in Sparta, Wis., in July, 1877. Daniel Fisk, second son of Abram and Elizabeth (Arnold) Fisk, was born at Whitesboro, N. Y. (now Utica), June 10, 1792, and reared there and at Watertown, N. Y., on his father's farm receiving only the rudiments of an education. He served an apprenticeship at the trade of a molder which he afterward followed at divers times. He served in the War of 1812 at Sacketts Harbor. In 1816 he married Sarah D. Bowen, of St. Johnsbury, Vt., a daughter of Pelig and Eusebia (Harvey) Bowen. After marriage he owned and operated a farm in Jefferson County, N. Y., until 1820, when he moved to Ohio and on to a farm purchased at Conneaut, Ashtabula County. In 1823 he sold the farm and returning to New York was connected with a foundry and furnace at Rossie until 1826, when he moved to Springfield, Ohio, where he purchased lands containing a bed of potter's clay and built a pottery which he operated very successfully until 1835, when he sold the Springfield property and purchased an interest in a pottery at Hamilton, Ontario, Canada, and a gypsum bed near that place. In 1836 he built a pottery at Cleveland, Ohio, and moved his family there into a fine home located on the city square, opposite the court house. He was now a wealthy man but in 1838 the business failure of a partner with whom he had become connected in Cleveland swept away a large portion of his property, and refusing to take advantage of the newly enacted bankrupt laws, he gave up everything, including his home in Cleveland, except his interests in Canada. He went to Canada, built a mill at his gypsum beds, and commenced what proved a profitable business; but the locality proved very unhealthful; his eldest son, Lorenzo, coming over to assist in the business, was taken sick and died there, and his own health failing he disposed of this and his Hamilton property in 1842-43 and purchasing wild lands near Middleburg, Ohio, returned to his old occupation—molding—at that place, improving his lands from time to time as the opportunity offered. In 1852 disposing of his property he removed with his own and the family of his son-in-law, W. W. Robinson, to Sparta, Monroe County, Wis., where he secured lands and continued to live, with the exception of a short sojourn in Minnesota, 1859-60, until his death in April, 1868, devoting his attention to farming, though not exclusively, as he claimed to have found a valuable bed of potter's clay in Monroe County and was gathering means to purchase the lands containing it when he died, the secret of its location dying with him. He was a man of wonderful energy and pluck, of a happy and rollicking disposition, never cast down or discouraged. He died without a moment's indisposition, seated in his easy chair, nearly 76 years of age, but in manner and carriage not more than 50. His widow survived him ten years, dying in 1878. 4519. ii. SARAH JANE, b. Sept. 18, 1819; m. Feb. 5, 1842, Col. William Wallace Robinson. He was b. Fair Haven, Vt., Dec. 14, 1819; res. Wildwood, Wis. William Wallace Robinson (husband of Sarah Jane Fisk), son of John Williams and Rebecca (Merritt) Robinson, is a descendant in the seventh generation from John Robinson of Leyden, Holland, Fame ("the Puritan Father"). Born at Fair Haven, Vt., Dec. 14, 1819, he received his education in the common schools of Vermont and Castleton Seminary and Rutland Academy, graduating from the last named when 19 years of age. He also took a course at the Norwich Military Academy. From 1838 to 1840 he taught school in his native State and New Jersey, when he went to Cleveland, Ohio, and in company with Wm. Murphy, a professor of languages from Philadelphia, opened and conducted for some years the "Cleveland High School and Academy." Feb. 5, 1842, he married Sarah Jane, the eldest daughter of Daniel Fisk, and continued to teach until war was declared with Mexico in 1846. He promptly enlisted with Ohio volunteers and was elected First Lieutenant of his company which was assigned to the Third Regiment Ohio Volunteers, as Company G, his commission bearing date June 12, 1846. Oct. 26, 1846, he was promoted Captain of his company. He served at Fort Brown and Matamoras, Carnargo, Monterey and Buena Vista, though his command took no part in those battles being engaged on detached service. In July, 1847, the terms of enlistment of the regiment expiring, the entire command was mustered out of the service at New Orleans and he returned to Ohio and engaged in farming and teaching until the summer of 1851, when he made a trip to Wisconsin, locating lands for himself and father-in-law, Daniel Fisk, at Sparta, Monroe County. Returning to Ohio in the fall, intending to move his family to Wisconsin in the spring, he changed his plans, and went to California himself, leaving his family with Mr. Fisk who removed with them to Wisconsin in Sept., 1852. The trip to California, overland, consumed six months to a day, he arriving at Whiskey Diggings, Sierra County, in September. He engaged in mining for a few weeks but soon with several partners took a contract to construct a flume, some eleven miles in length, for the Minnesota Water Company, which was to conduct water from a mountain stream for use at "Smiths" and the "Minnesota Diggings." After completing this job he engaged in various enterprises of a more or less remunerative character until the fall of 1855, when he rejoined his family at Sparta, Wis., and removing during the winter of 1855-56 to Waseca County, Minnesota, founded the town of Wilton which for a time became the county seat. In 1858 he ran for the State Legislature on the Democratic ticket, but was defeated, and was appointed Colonel of the Ninth Regiment Minnesota Militia, by Governor Sibley. In 1859 selling his Minnesota property he returned to Sparta, Wis., and built a home on his lands near that village. At the breaking out of the Civil war he was engaged in drilling the first company raised in the county, and Aug. 15, 1861, was commissioned Lieutenant-Colonel of the Seventh Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and with this regiment, which with four others constituted the famous Iron Brigade, he served, taking part in every battle fought by the Army of the Potomac except the first Bull Run, Antietam (fought while he was in hospital with a severe wound received at battle of Gainesville) and Five Forks. He was promoted Colonel of the regiment in Feb., 1862, and was frequently in command of the brigade by reason of his seniority before 1863, but from the morning of the first day's fight at Gettysburg, when Brigadier-General Meredith was wounded, he commanded the Iron Brigade through the bloody campaigns of 1863-64 and until the army sat down in the trenches around Petersburg, when suffering from sickness and the breaking out of his wound received in 1862 he resigned in July, 1864. He had taken part in over thirty battles and "affairs" and though "hit" three times, received but one serious wound, that at Gainesville. His regiment, the Seventh Wisconsin, lost more men killed and wounded by four than any other taking part in the war, as is shown by the records of the War Department and recently published. At the close of the war he was tendered a Brevet Brigadier-General's commission, but declined it. After somewhat recovering from his wounds (1865), he engaged in farming and lumbering, removing to Chippewa Falls, Wis., in 1874. In 1875 he was appointed United States Consul to Madagascar by President Grant, and undisturbed by succeeding administrations held that office until the fall of 1886, when, heeding the remonstrances of his children, he resigned and came home to spend his old age surrounded by his children and grandchildren. During his service in Madagascar he made the treaty with that government which the French at this writing are attempting to set aside, and at the urgent request of the Queen of Madagascar was directed by our State Department to accompany the Malagassy Embassy on its visit to the courts of Europe and to the United States in 1882-83 during its vain search for peace. He and his wife are now living with his youngest son in Wisconsin, hale and hearty, though both are in their 77th year. He is a descendant of the Rev. John Robinson, the Leyden pastor, b. in Lincolnshire, England, 1575; emigrated to Leyden, Holland, in 1608, with his congregation, and there formed the nucleus of the Plymouth Colony of 1620. He is a direct descendant of his through his son Isaac, b. 1610; Peter, b. 1660; Peter, Jr., b. 1697; Eliab, b. 1742; John William, b. 1782; William Wallace. Ch.: 1, Edward Lorenzo, b. Mar. 23, 1845, Christiana M. Borst, b. Sept. 3, 1827. Squire Gilbert Fisk inherited his father's farm in Oneida Co., N. Y., but while the parent enjoyed country life and succeeded in fancy farming and stock breeding, the son preferred another line of occupation. Gilbert, as he was called, had, in search of education, found city life more congenial than the lonely and drear days and nights on a farm. He soon disposed of the farm and removed to Oswego, N. Y. He here established a teaming business, which he conducted with fair success for many years. He had a thorough knowledge of horses, and in his string of teams, private and draft horses, he had the pride of the city, and was noted for his fine stock. He was a very conservative man, strong in his political preferences, yet would never consider political preferment. But his Republicanism was very pronounced. When nearing 50 years of age, his health became poor, and he gave up business cares, and sought many sources for the restoration of physical forces, with limited success. In this way he spent the last ten years of his life, and after about four years of serious throat trouble, partial paralysis developed, and he died at the age of 64 years. He d. Sept. 10, 1880; res. Y. where he attended the schools of that city (rated the best in the state), finishing there his studies in Oswego, in 1867, after which he went to a preparatory school for one year, at Hannibal, N. Y. He spent the spring and summer of 1865 as a clerk in the Oswego postoffice, thus being a government clerk at the time President Lincoln was shot, and wore for thirty days the customary evidence of mourning, crape on the left arm. In the spring of 1868 he went to Albany, N. Y., to prepare for a medical course. Prior to entering upon the full course of medicine, he took the advanced course in the Boys' Academy, Albany, N. Y., and following this course he took a six months' private course in study with Professor Swan, principal of the above named school. Following this course he entered the office of Dr. Andrew Wilson, of Albany, then the president of the Albany County Medical Society. He soon became a favorite of Dr. Alden March, the founder of the Albany Medical College, and accompanied this great surgeon to most of his capital surgical operations up to the time of his death, which occurred in the fall of 1869, the doctor favoring young Fiske, owing to his steady nerve, placing him in the fore when there were several bleeding arteries to pick up and tie. While yet a student, in May, 1870, he was offered and accepted a position, with large advantages for study, in the Marshall Infirmary, Troy, N. Y. He remained here until Sept., 1871, when he went to the City Hospital, Albany, N. Y., and took the final course at the college, graduating the same year, Dec. 26, 1871, the anniversary of his birthday. As a medical student young Fiske was very popular in classes, being chairman of the first quiz class, and one of the foremost and officers of the football and baseball teams. He was elected poet of his class, and on two occasions replied in witty verse to newspaper criticisms of exposure of canned and dried anatomical specimens, for a short time exposed in the museum windows, while cleaning the museum. After graduating, he returned to the Marshall Infirmary as assistant physician, which position he held until Apr., 1874, when he was appointed by the Mayor of Troy (without his knowledge) city physician, May 10, 1874. He accepted the office, left the Infirmary, and located in the city.

He held this office four years, when he resigned and accepted the editorial head of the New York Medical Brief. He held this position but one year, finding journalistic work too severe and trying. He returned to Troy, and has since confined himself to the advancement of his knowledge of medicine, keeping in active practice. Dr. Fiske is a recognized authority on diseases of throat and lungs, and has a large practice in this line, being much called, near and far, in consultation.

I., Sarah Marchant, b. Sept. 5, 1814. Mr. Fisk was born in Scituate, R. I., Oct. 16, 1813. He learned the trade of carpenter in Providence, and went to Pawtucket in 1836. For a year or two he was foreman of the building operations at the Dunnell Print Works, and then went into business with Nathaniel Lewin, under the firm name of Lewin & Fisk, carpenters and builders. Subsequently Charles E. Kenyon was taken into the firm, when the name became Lewin, Fisk & Kenyon. This firm built some of the largest mills in the State of Rhode Island at that time, among them being the Atlantic Delaine Mill in Olneyville. Mr. Fisk retired from this firm in 1868, and entered the employ of the Providence, Washington, Equitable, Atlantic and Hope insurance companies as adjuster and examiner. With the two companies first named he remained until the day of his death, twenty-five years, but the Atlantic and Hope companies went out of business at the time of the Chicago fire, at which time Mr. Fisk settled claims amounting to over $1,000,000. During his connection with these companies he settled thousands of claims, and was one of the oldest and best known insurance adjusters in New England. He was elected one of the directors of the Pawtucket Mutual Fire Insurance Company in 1859, and held that position as long as he lived, a period of thirty-four years, being the oldest director in the company. He was one of the trustees of Park Place Church from its organization, and one of the building committee of the church. He was a member of the Knights Templar and in his younger days took an active part in that order. He took no part in politics, but gave his whole attention to business and was active and energetic, showing little of the marks of advancing age up to the time he was taken ill. His wife was Miss Sarah Marchant, of Yarmouth, Mass. She and two sons, Stephen F. and Frank D., survive him. He d. May 18, 1893; res. Pawtucket, R. I.

 4037. ii. FRANK DUANE, b. Dec. 13, 1843; d. Mar. 19, 1895. He was born in Pawtucket, and was a son of the late Stephen P. Fisk. For many years he was connected with the firm of J. E. Caldwell & Co., silversmiths, of Philadelphia, and later he was of the firm of Fisk & Co., druggists, of Pawtucket. Of late years he had not been engaged in active business pursuits. He was greatly attached to his family, being especially devoted to his aged mother, with whom he lived, making brighter her declining years. During the War of the Rebellion he was a member of the Ninth Rhode Island Regiment, and when Tower Post, No. 17, G. A. R., was formed, he was consequently qualified to become one of its charter members, and for two years he served as its commander. He was also a charter member of the Pawtucket Veteran Firemen's Association. He never held public office, although deeply interested in whatever concerned the Democratic party, and he was frequently selected as a delegate to city and State conventions. He was kind of heart, true to his friends, and many will join the bereaved family in mourning his loss.

At an early age he became a merchant's clerk, and followed that occupation for several years in New York State, when, upon reaching man's estate, he married. Deciding to come west he journeyed to Ohio. Two years later he came further west, and in 1835 stopped in Green Bay, where he engaged in the lumber business and also opened a mercantile establishment. In 1836 he went after his wife and son, and brought them to his new home. He was the pioneer lumberman in certain sections of northern Wisconsin, and built the first mill at De Pere. He also erected the first grist mill at Fond du Lac. In inspecting the timber lands of Wisconsin in 1835, he walked over the territory between Green Bay and Chicago by Indian trail. He was admitted to the bar soon after his arrival at Green Bay, and during his younger years was an active politician. He was Judge of Probate at Green Bay in 1836; was appointed Postmaster at Green Bay in 1836 and again in 1846, and also appointed Register of the United States Land Office in 1848. He laid out and platted the original site of the city of Fort Howard, recently consolidated with Green Bay. He later abandoned the legal profession for more active mercantile pursuits, and in these, and real estate investments, amassed a fortune. He was an active worker in the Baptist Church. He d. After leaving school at the age of 15 he was apprenticed to a jeweler in Troy; was given his time at 20; came to New York; started in the stove business at 109 Water St.; invented the first air tight coal stove, the first heating drum for second floor, the movable top to cooking stoves, and was at work on the base burner self-feeding stoves at the time of his death. He also was the inventor of the Fisk metallic burial case, and the first to introduce steam power in his foundry at Newtown. While on a trip to Cuba he saved the vessel by his ingenuity, when it was given up for lost by the captain. He brought on a hemorrhage of the lungs by jumping into the East River and saving a drowning boy, and from this he never recovered, and finally succumbed to lung and bowel troubles. HON. HIRAM CYRUS FISK.

Cynthia Clark, dau. of Wm. A., b. July 28, 1828; d. May 18, 1886. Hiram Cyrus Fisk, son of Samuel Fisk, was born in Isle La Motte, Vt., Aug. 19, 1818, and attended several academies and seminaries of learning and obtained a good education. Before the period of adolescence in his life history had passed he united with the Methodist E. Church in Isle La Motte, and during his life was one of the principal supporters of that church. Held town office in Isle La Motte the greater part of the time he lived there. He represented the town of Isle La Motte in the Legislature of Vermont in the years 1867 and 1868. Upon the death of his father, the said Samuel, Hiram C. Fisk became the main proprietor of the said Fisk marble quarry, and worked the same more successfully than his father did before him and accumulated more property than his father had, being the wealthiest man in Isle La Motte at the time he removed therefrom. He bought the farm or homestead once owned by his uncle, Solomon Fisk, in Chazy, N. Y., and moved there in 1876. He, like his father, was the furthest estranged from malevolence, unkindness and enmity to other persons under any circumstances. He was always social, generous and forbearing in his nature, and was a public benefactor. He d. Sept. 7, 1884; res. Isle La Motte, Vt., and Chazy, N. Y.

 4653. ii. NELSON WILBUR, b. Aug. 5, 1854; m. Feb. 25, 1880, Elizabeth Beckwith Hubbell, b. Aug. 31, 1859. Res. s. p. Fisk, Vt. The Hon. Nelson Wilbur Fisk, son of Hiram C. Fisk, Esq., was born Aug. 5, 1854, in Isle La Motte, Vt., and attended the Montpelier Seminary and Fort Edward Institute, and is a graduate of Eastman's Business College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and obtained a good education. His father, the said Hiram C., deceased when Nelson W. was quite young, when the large property and business operations of the father devolved upon the son, Nelson W. He administered in a remarkable manner upon his father's estate, being so young in years. He afterwards became sole proprietor of the Fisk marble quarry, and owns it at this time, and has been very successful in that enterprise; is a general merchant and owns a large amount of real estate. He is the ablest man, pecuniarily, in said Isle La Motte. His property in value far transcends that of his father's and grandfather's combined. The said Nelson W. has held the principal town offices in town and represented his town in the Legislature of Vermont for two terms, from 1882 to 1886. He afterward in 1888 was elected a Senator from Grand Isle County in the Legislature of Vermont for two years. While in the Senate he introduced bills that became important laws of the State. He was appointed by the Governor of Vermont chairman of the Industrial School, an institution run by the State at Vergennes, Vt.. He is also one of the trustees of the Montpelier Seminary, also a trustee of the State Normal School at Johnson, Vt. Was a member of the delegation in the National Convention, held in Chicago, 1888. neapolis, 1892. Mr. Fisk is eminently a public spirited man; pays liberally of his large resources for pious, charitable and beneficent purposes. He also inherited the virtue from his ancestors and progenitors of being possessed of no ill-will, prejudice or bias toward his fellowmen. The Hon. Nelson W. Fiske is one of the best business men in the State of Vermont. His advice and counsel are sought after by high State officials in matters of municipal concerns and the policy of State affairs. When said Fisk was Senator, as aforesaid, the Chaplain of the Senate said to the writer hereof that he (Fisk) was one of the best business men, one of the best Senators in that Senate. Mr. Fisk is a young man now, comparatively, and will accomplish a great deal of life's attainments if permitted to live to a tolerably good age.

When he was being urged by his friends as a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor of Vermont, the Burlington Free Press said editorially: "He has yielded to the wish of many of his warm friends throughout Vermont in that he will be a candidate for the second place on the ticket. The announcement will be gratifying to a large proportion of the Republicans of the State. Mr. Fisk is a staunch Republican. He is an honorable, genial and popular gentleman. As a Representative in the House in '82 and '84; Senator from Grand Isle County in '88; trustee of the Vermont Reform School, and leading member of the Fish and Game League, and in other public capacities, he has shown ability, sound judgment and large capacity for business. He has not asked for support, nor shown any eagerness to become a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor. In fact, it is the simple truth that he has up to this time resisted a very considerable amount of pressure from many quarters, urging him to permit the use of his name. His candidacy is thus an honorable one and every way creditable to him. His name, when placed upon the ticket, will add strength and popularity to it; and when he is elected the office will have sought the man, and it will be a source of gratification to many in other sections of the State that the good Island County has at last been recognized by the bestowal of an important elective State office." At the Republican State Convention, held in 1896, he was nominated by acclamation for Lieutenant-Governor and elected by a very handsome majority. At the joint session of the Vermont Legislature Lieutenant-Governor-elect Fisk was administered the oath of office. On assuming the president's chair the Lieutenant-Governor said: "The most agreeable duty assigned me by the people of the State of Vermont is that which brings me into official relations with the Senate. At this, the commencement of the session, I am forcibly reminded of the importance of the position we occupy. On us is centered criticism as well as the good wishes of our fellow Vermonters. I bring to the discharge of this chair but little experience, and shall, therefore, be compelled to rely largely upon that forbearance which has always characterized the courtesy shown by the Senate to its presiding officer. I indulge in the hope that the session upon which we are now entering will result in such beneficial legislation as the people have the right to expect and demand. My ambition is to so preside over and govern your deliberations as to merit at all times your commendation and assistance. I await the pleasure of the Senate." The speech was greeted with applause.

In 1849 he left for Chagres, Panama, where he engaged in business, doing a large trade with the California pilgrims or '49ers. His goods he had taken with him to South America. His health being greatly improved in the spring of 1850, he returned to New York City, where he remained until fall. He then returned to Chagres, taking his wife with him, and leaving his only child in New York City with relatives. Not long after their arrival in Chagres, Mrs. Fisk was taken dangerously ill with the "isthmus fever." The press of business and care and anxiety for his sick wife proved too much for his nervous system.

He was later attacked with the fever, Feb. 1, 1851, and died on the 25th. Soon after he had been taken on board the line steamer for New York City. Y., Laura Newell, d. June 10, 1856; m. 2d, Aug. 20, 1856, Mrs. Betsey (Tuttle) Newell, d. May 24, 1873. He was the oldest son of Ira Fisk; was born on Isle La Motte, Grand Isle Co., Vt., Oct. 26, 1815, of pious parents, and brought up in Chazy, Clinton Co., N. Y., after he was 2 years old. Was a steady, obedient, truthful, reliable, persevering, diffident, courageous, religiously inclined boy, and never had a bad habit. He was called to preach at 18, and yielded, after passing through great mental agony. A few months after he entered the traveling ministry, and at the end of three years, with others, in consequence of slavery in that church, united in organizing the anti-slavery Wesleyan Methodist Connection, and was then, June 7, 1843, ordained elder at Utica, N. Y., which position he still occupies. Most of his life has been spent in preparation and labor to benefit the human family. It has been in pastorates, anti-slavery work, college agency, peace work against the horrid custom of war. Some years have been spent in recovery of wasted energies, in excessive work; also in efforts without financial success, though appearances were flattering, to recover from losses that in appearance incapacitated to carry out a written pledge, that in the end was to reach the establishment of a central point of mission work on heathen soil. Also in missionary work, pleading for the poor heathen, in going to Jerusalem as missionary, where he had the pleasure of seeing fifty Jews and one Arab seeking God, when there about two weeks. After a few months he returned to America, to secure a few of the right kind of workers, and means necessary. Persons have been secured, but there is delay in lack of means. In the meantime he is holding missionary meetings, mostly in behalf of Jews and Arabs. Rev. Fisk writes: "I should be pleased to have God honor our name by others taking a part in the accomplishment of this blessed work and share with Pliny and Fidelia Fiske in forming a bright galaxy around the throne of God." Res. Burlington, Vt.

Gaylord Stevens, b. Jan. 5, 1795; d. Nov. 16, 1864. He was a most successful farmer, carried on a very large business. By his efforts he acquired farm after farm, and at one time he owned thirteen hundred acres, all of which were connected. He had a wonderful memory, kept all of his numerous accounts on tablets, and he never omitted an item. In his time he was considered a rich man. His real estate was divided among his sons and his personal property was left to the management of his eldest living son. He was a member of the Universalist Church. His last illness was of short duration. He contracted a cold, which developed into pneumonia. One of his last wishes was that Cora Etta, then a babe of a few months old, be brought to his bedside. The wish was granted, the dying old man patted the child lovingly, and said: "I meant to have had many a good time with you, but it has all gone by now." It was his request that he should be buried on his own ground. A pretty plat within sight of the house, overlooking the pond, was chosen. From there he was called to the First Congregational Church of Toledo, O., May, 1891, at a salary of $4,000. He is still serving that church. Professor Fisk has the academic degrees of A. M. (from Brown University) and Ph. D. (Findlay College). H., Feb. 27, 1863, Angelina S. Drew, b. Aug. 23, 1837. His father was an invalid from his earliest remembrance. His mother was the mainstay of the family. They owned thirty acres of hilly, unproductive land. The mother did the work, with the help of the children, outdoors and in. It was a struggle for the necessities of life. She took wool just as it was clipped from the sheep, worked it up on shares and from her share carded by hand, spun, wove, cut and made up nearly all the clothing that was used in the family during the 40's. His brother, Franklin, next younger than he, was early accustomed to labor. He could not be spared to go to school in the summer time, after he was 9 years of age. In the spring of 1852 they moved to Lowell, Mass., where the mother and all the children old enough, found work in the factory. They remained in Lowell two years and had much sickness. His oldest sister died and was buried in Lowell. In the spring of 1854 his father bought another farm, and they moved back again to Vermont. The boys were now old enough to do the most of the work required, and what was too hard they exchanged work, and got their neighbors to do. Sept. 5, 1861, he enlisted in Company E., Second Regiment Vermont

Volunteers, and served till the end of the war. He was discharged July 24, 1865. He was married to Miss Angelina S. Drew, to whom he had been some time engaged, while home on a furlough, in the winter of 1863. At the close of the war he removed to a farm he had purchased in Kansas, where he contended with drouth and chinch bugs till the spring of 1875. As opportunity offered, he held meetings at different places near his home, and in the winter of 1875 was invited to go to Freeborn to do home missionary work in the Congregational denomination here. In connection with Freeborn he has had several other points. He has preached at Hartland, Berlin, Lemond, New Richland, Alden, Manchester, Minnesota Lake, Freedom, St. Clair and Janesville. He has been pastor of the church at Freeborn over twenty years, at Freedom over twelve, Hartland eighteen, and Manchester eight. H., Jan. 9, 1825; m. at Contoocook, N. H., Dec. 8, 1848, Amanda M. Putnam, b. July 8, 1831. Dr. Fisk was born in Chichester, N. H., the eldest son of Ephraim and Margaret Dow Fisk; studied medicine at Contoocook with the late Charles A. Savory, M. D., took his degree at Dartmouth College, and in 1847 returned to Contoocook to begin the practice of medicine. The following year he married Amanda M. Putnam, and with his young bride removed to Bradford, where they remained for twenty-four years, he having a large and constantly increasing business, making himself one of the leading men of the town, loved and respected by all. He was a man of generous heart and genial disposition, ever bringing sunshine and confidence into the sick room; and was universally considered a most reliable and skillful physician. In 1863 he enlisted in the Sixteenth Regiment, New Hampshire Volunteers; was appointed Assistant Surgeon and promoted to Surgeon. Served under Gen. Banks in the expedition before Port Hudson. In August, the following year, was mustered out of service and returned home to resume his practice. In 1872, with his family, he removed to Lowell, there to engage in broader fields of usefulness. He then entered the office, as an associate of his old instructor, Dr. Savory; who had preceded him many years. After a time the partnership was dissolved and Dr. Fisk continued the practice of his profession alone, winning for himself the name and reputation of a skillful physician, second to none in that city. He was a member of Ladd and Whitney Post, No. 185, G. A. R.; Massachusetts Medical Society; Middlesex North District Medical Society, at different times being president, vice-president and counselor; was on the medical staff of St. John's Hospital; advisory board of Lowell Hospital; served on the school board for a time; was chairman of the board of pension examiners for twelve years; one of the board of trustees of the Lowell Institution for Savings; was also an active member of the Medical Journal Club, in which he took much interest. After a residence of twenty-two years in Lowell, he conceived the happy thought of returning again to Bradford, hoping to enjoy for a few years the rest and quiet which his active life and close attention to his arduous and trying profession so richly entitled him. "We have watched with interest and pleasure during the past summer, the progress made in building and decorating the new home. At last it was finished, and they were cozily settled. All were rejoiced at their coming, and ready to stretch a welcoming hand across this gulf of many years. Our fond anticipations were realized only a few days ago, the occasion being the 70th anniversary of his birth. Congratulations and good wishes were heartily extended by many and hopes expressed, that this happy couple might live to reach their fifty years of wedded life, which seemed so near at hand; but, alas, that was not so to be. It is easy to realize the sorrow and disappointment so keenly felt by all, at his untimely death."

Possibly no young M. D. was ever more uniquely started upon his career than was the doctor, when, in the winter of 1848, the western part of the town was smitten with the scourge of small-pox. Even Dr. Ames, another physician, fell a victim to the horrible disease. It was then that the boy, Dr. Fisk, came to the rescue. Rising to the occasion he showed the stuff that was in him. He went into quarantine with Bradford's afflicted townspeople, caring for and ministering to them as physician and nurse, and coming forth from the ordeal with flying colors, and the confidence and respect of the whole community. He was married just previously, and he often laughingly remarked that this was his honeymoon, spent among small-pox patients, as he was isolated for weeks from his then young bride. The doctor's sense of humor carried him successfully through many a dark scene and served to brighten many a dismal sick chamber. He had for many years been much interested in ornithology, not only as a scientific study, but pleasant pastime, and had, for a private one, a large collection of birds, which he enjoyed showing and explaining to his friends. I., 1812; m. at Brattleboro, Vt., in 1832, Love B. Ryan, b. 1809; d. July 2, 1892. He was a manufacturer in Adams, Mass.; was burned out, and as the business at that time was unsatisfactory, he went to Brattleboro, his wife's home, and started what he called a "traveling emporium." He had twenty teams and a salesman on each one. His own team was very handsome; on it he drove four horses, a coachman in livery. He also had another four horse team, which was the "wholesale wagon." In this way he traveled all over New England. Each Saturday every salesman reported to him, at a given place. His bookkeeper was there, and, in fact, the business was carried on then as the large stores are now in the city; everything was systematized. He carried only silks and handsome shawls and wraps on his own team; he had his regular customers all over the country, who waited for him, and in many towns he would stay from two to three weeks. He was a very handsome man, six feet two inches, and the "pink" of neatness; very careful about his dress, and of a very elegant, courtly manner. His wife used often to say laughingly: "I first met Mr. Fisk in a stage coach, and was attracted by his fine clothes and noble bearing." He was a strong Prohibitionist, and built the Revere House in Brattleboro and opened it, the first temperance house ever opened and kept in the State of Vermont. After the death of his son he was ill for a year, in fact, out of his head, made so by the shock of his sudden death. He was walking up Broadway and heard the newsboys crying the murder on the street. He fell unconscious and remained so for twenty-four hours; he never saw his dearly loved boy again. Fiske, Sr., learned the moulders' trade in his father's foundry in New Brunswick, N. J., and afterward, with his brother, Squire, took the business, his father retiring, and ran it until after the war. He was a good draughtsman and musician, he, his father and brothers having belonged to a band when the sons were young men. After the war William was an inspector of streets in New York, and afterward held a position in the postoffice, but for a few years before he died was not in business, his health having failed him. When a young man his father obtained a place for him in a New York liquor store, but only remained one day, as he did not like the business. He never drank or used tobacco in any form, though the latter was not offensive to him. He early joined the Presbyterian Church (old school) and for nearly twenty years was librarian of the Sunday school, being assisted at times by his sons, Stephen and William. He d. May 28, 1892; res. On the third story of the Lotos clubhouse there is a square, high cardroom, fronting on Fifth avenue, and here, on his working mornings, Mr. Stephen Fiske may be found seated at a table-desk writing "copy" for the numerous papers to which he contributes. As he rises to welcome the interviewer, he displays a large, stout, portly figure, above the medium height—a strong, pleasant English face, with frank, mischievous blue eyes and dark brown hair and mustache tinged with gray. His manner is straightforward; his voice clear and honest. He pushes aside his papers, offers a box of choice cigars to his visitor, and, with a laugh and a jest at the idea of a hunter being hunted, glances over my notes and fills up the gaps in reply to my questions. "Yes," he says, in response to a remark about his surroundings, "having seen many writers, from Dickens down, annoyed by the absence of a particular chair, table, kind of pen or paper, I have always tried to be independent of such fads, and can write anywhere with equal facility. Give me a flat table and the light on my left hand, and I am comfortable in any room or company. I do not care to be alone; in fact, the talk of people about me, so long as they don't whisper, is a sort of inspiration. My writing is only a transcription and correcting of phrases already formed in my mind, and, therefore, is very rapid and seldom altered. But, if I have a choice, it is to write in a printing office, with the presses rumbling below me, and the printer's boy taking my pages as fast as I can scribble them. There is no music for a writer like the rumble of the press, and the jarring is like a series of beneficent electric shocks." Stephen Fiske was born November 22, 1840, at the little old Dutch city of New Brunswick, N. J., about thirty miles from New York. His parents had moved out from the metropolis and settled there. His grandfather, Haley Fiske, was a Judge, and a prominent leader of the Whig party. His father was a partner in a large iron foundry. He was educated at Rutgers College in his native city. As a schoolboy, his compositions were published in the local papers. He commenced his paid contributions before he was 12 years old, and at 14 he was the editor of a small daily paper, the Times, which, much enlarged, is still prosperous. He used to hear his father laugh over his editorials while he was afraid to avow their authorship; for his father was a Republican in politics, and the Times was the Democratic organ. The precocious journalist edited the Times during his collegiate studies. Before his year of graduation he contributed to the College Magazine the opening chapters of a satirical novel, called "Charles Herndon, a Modern American Student's Progress," in which the professors and their antiquated methods of teaching were keenly caricatured. The professors demanded his resignation; but the reforms which he had suggested in his novel were carried out, and the caricatured professors were soon retired, and the college thoroughly reorganized. Alluding to this incident in a speech at the Delmonico banquet of the Rutgers Alumni, Mr. Fiske said: "I graduated, not exactly at the head of my class, but two years ahead of it." Then, for the first time in his life, the venerable President Campbell, D. D. and LL. D., was heard to laugh, and the speech thus became historical. Stephen Fiske first attracted attention outside of local circles by an article upon "Sunshine," which was extensively copied and which a New York paper accused him of plagiarizing from Dickens. The works of Dickens were searched in vain, and the paper was forced to apologize and explain that the writing was so like Dickens' that the editor could not detect the difference. This high compliment to a boy resulted in the departure of the young writer for New York to seek his fortune. Horace Greeley, his grandfather's friend, offered him a position upon the Tribune; but he preferred to become a reporter upon the Herald. In a few months he was promoted to be a special correspondent, and in that capacity he accompanied the Prince of Wales on his American tour, from Newfoundland to Portland. He used the telegraph exclusively, and his despatches were published in the English papers a fortnight in advance of the English correspondents' letters. At Niagara Falls, he telegraphed to the Herald chapters of Matthews and Revelations in order to hold the wires against all rivals, and Jules Verne has adapted this incident in a well-known novel and play. Afterwards he accompanied Abraham Lincoln, "The Martyr President," in his memorable trip from Illinois to Washington, and he relates with great glee the introduction of Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln to Washington society. "Here," said Mr. Lincoln to the brilliant company assembled to greet him at Willard's Hotel, "here is the long and the short of the Presidency," and Lincoln bent his tall figure as he held his little wife by the hand. In 1866 Mr. Fiske was an editorial writer on the Herald and the editor of the Leader, a local Democratic organ. He had produced a play at Wallack's, and wrote regularly for Bonner's Ledger and the leading magazines. Without hesitation he threw up all his engagements to go with Mr. James Gordon Bennett on the Henrietta in the first ocean yacht race which was sailed in December. The Henrietta arrived at Cowes on Christmas day after a stormy passage, and won the race. Hurrying up to London, Mr. Fiske wrote a report of the race for the Times, and then cabled a full account of it to the Herald. He refused to accept the seventy-five guineas offered him by the Times for his report; but the elder Bennett sent him a check for $1,000 by way of compensation. This is the largest sum ever received for a two-column article.

After a brief rest, Mr. Fiske was sent to Ireland to explode the Fenian conspiracy. He traveled over most of the country on a jaunting-car, interviewed all the leading Fenians, and cabled to the Herald not only the results of his investigations, but the editorials upon his reports, and the effect was that the Fenian movement was thoroughly discredited in America. From Ireland Mr. Fiske went to Paris to describe by cable the opening of the Paris Exposition; to Buda-Pesth to witness the coronation of the Emperor of Austria as King of Hungary; to Rome, to picture in words the canonization of the Japanese martyrs; to Naples to see an eruption of Mt. Vesuvius, and to Spain to report the war which threatened to break out with England on account of the "Vittoria" affair. Subsequently he went to Italy and took part in Garibaldi's campaign against Rome, which was settled by the French chassepots. His were the only despatches which came through from the seat of war at that time, the other correspondents being locked up in Rome, and they were recabled from New York to the London papers. Settling down in London as the Herald correspondent, Mr. Fiske became intimate with Charles Dickens, Wilkie Collins, Charles Reade, and other literary celebrities. One day, at Boucicault's the question was discussed whether the art of writing in character was not lost. Mr. Fiske proposed to write an article in the character of an American Fenian, if Mr. Yates would publish it in Tinsley's magazine, which he was then editing. The article, called "Ireland for the Irish," created an immense sensation, the London journals reviewing and denouncing it in elaborate leaders. Several similar articles followed in the magazine and in the Pall Mall Gazette, and the authorities searched Mr. Fiske's rooms, at the Queen's Hotel, for incendiary documents. For the same magazine Mr. Fiske wrote a series of papers called "English Photographs, by an American," dedicated by permission to Charles Dickens. These were republished in book form; obtained a wide popularity; were quoted in Parliament, and were so much esteemed by Dickens that he carried the book with him on his railway journeys, and "dipped in to it," as he said, constantly. Mr. Fiske contributed several papers to All the Year Round, and had arranged for the publication of his first novel in that periodical, when the death of Dickens ended the project.

"English Photographs" is still a readable book, full of suggestions of practical reforms, many of which have been adopted. The advance sheets of it were published in Harper's Magazine. With its profits Mr. Fiske purchased the Hornet, a satirical paper with a small city circulation, and attempted to open the way to what is now called society journalism. He also edited and published the Home Journal, to which Miss Braddon contributed a new novel, and a trade paper, called the News Vendor. As if his hands were not full enough of work, he undertook to manage the St. James' Theatre for Mrs. John Wood, and succeeded in running "She Stoops to Conquer" for 200 nights, and in delighting the town with the humors of that best of burlesques, "La Belle Sauvage." Afterward, he organized the Royal English Opera Company, with Rose Hersee and Belle Cole as his prima donnas, and sent out this troupe for a tour of Great Britain and Ireland. In 1874 Mr. Fiske returned to America and took charge of the Fifth Avenue Theatre, New York, which he saved from ruin and conducted for four years against the disadvantages of hard times and an unpopular house. There he first introduced to the public Mary Anderson, whom he advertised so boldly as to command attention and success. "I do not say that she is a great actress," he remarked to an interviewer, "but it is worth the money to see such a lovely girl." There, also, he brought out Madame Modjeska, who, a failure on the first night in "Adrienne," soon achieved an extraordinary success in "Camille." In 1878 Mr. Fiske withdrew from the theatre and returned to journalism, his first love. He accepted the position of dramatic critic of the Spirit of the Times, and Col. Buck, the editor and proprietor, made an engagement with him for life. His work upon that paper is almost as well known on the other side of the Atlantic as on this, so extensively is it read and quoted. Almost alone among writers in English, he has made criticism a fine art. For two years he was the editor-in-chief of the New York Star, and when he left that paper it waned and died. Editors and compositors always welcome his "copy," which is as clear as print, and, beneath the plainest statement of facts, has a sub-acid of satire and humor which precisely suits the tone of modern journalism. He has published three books, "English Photographs," "Holiday Stories," and "Off-Hand Portraits," in which he predicted Cleveland's election to the Presidency two years beforehand, and he has produced "Martin Chuzzlewit" (Olympic), "Corporal Cartouche" (Winter Garden), "My Noble Son-in-Law" (Wallack's) and "Robert Rabagas" (London) dramatizations or adapted plays, all very successful. In the prime of life, and with enormous capacities for work, Stephen Fiske's future is likely to be as varied and eventful as his past. "I used to think," he says, as he concluded the long chat from which these particulars have been gleaned, "that I had been everywhere and seen everybody and everything; but the world renews itself every year, and I often feel like beginning life all over again. I have lived every minute of my time, and I find that the only thing which really fatigues me is to stop and try to rest." Nov., 1896, he is writing a series of articles of intense interest on "The Personal Side of Dickens" for The Ladies' Home Journal.

Fiske spent his early years until the age of 17 on his father's farm, attending the district school, and doing such work on the farm as was required. In addition to the common school education, he was allowed a few terms at the Macedon Academy, to fit himself for teaching. He "taught his first school" while in his 18th year (1853-54), and continued in the profession until June, 1864, when he resigned his position in the Canandaigua Academy to accept a position as bookkeeper in the Bank of Ontario in Canandaigua. At the end of a year he was made assistant cashier, and for a considerable time had charge of the bank, whose business was large and the responsibility of his position great. He continued to fill responsible positions in the banking line until the spring of 1874, having been cashier of banking houses in Marathon, N. Y., Herkimer, N. Y., and Newark, N. Y., and for three years held positions in the Merchants Savings, Loan & Trust Co. of Chicago, and the Traders National Bank of Chicago. In 1874 he went to Buffalo and engaged in insurance business in partnership with Stephen F. Sherman. In October, 1875, he entered the office of Richard Bullymore as bookkeeper, continuing in that capacity until December, 1878, when he resigned this position to become cashier of the Buffalo Grape Sugar Co. He remained with this company and its successor, the American Glucose Company, until the summer of 1894, nearly sixteen years. In April, 1894, the American Glucose Company's plant in Buffalo was destroyed by fire, which resulted in the severing of his connection with that company. He now (1896) holds the position of chief bookkeeper in the office of the Comptroller of the city of Buffalo. In politics he is a Republican, though never taking active part in politics, except as a voter. As a proof of the regard in which he is held, it may be said that in the several important financial positions held by him, involving the handling and care of large sums of money, he was never required to give bonds; res. 34 Fifteenth St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Strickland, b. Dec. 18, 1820; d. Mar. 8, 1887. Joseph W. Fisk was born in Susquehanna County, Pa. He was the eldest son of Joseph and Fanny (Brown) Fisk who were among the pioneers that helped to develop the northeastern part of Pennsylvania. He had four sisters and one brother. His sisters with himself have all passed to the higher life. His brother, Clark S. Fisk, lives at Morrison, Ill. When Joseph was but ten years old his father died of consumption leaving a widow with six small children with very limited means of support, therefore his chance for education was small. We do not know that he ever attended school a day in his life, yet we take it for granted that he must have done so some time somewhere, as he possessed a knowledge of the three "R's." Soon after the death of his father Joseph went to live with his uncle Washington Fisk in Vermont, making a trip of three hundred miles on foot through the woods and over the mountains of Pennsylvania, New York and Vermont, with his wardrobe in a bandana. When about 20 years old his uncle advised him to return to Pennsylvania and take possession of the farm his father had settled on and this he did. Joseph W. Fisk and Rhoda E. Strickland were married. Miss Strickland had been devoted to teaching school for nearly eight years at the time of their marriage. With her superior education, active temperament and ambitious energy, she brought to her husband the qualities he so much needed. His judgment was sound and had he had the benefit of an education he would have been a strong man. He had an acute ear for music and could play almost any instrument. He was about six feet tall and well proportioned, in his palmy days weighing two hundred and forty pounds. His family consisted of twelve children, nine sons and three daughters, seven of whom are living, viz.: Wilmot, Melvin, Calvin, Everett, Mrs. Harriet E. Emery, Theron and Alfred. In 1860 he built the Union Hotel at Niven, Pa. In 1861 was made postmaster of that place, under Lincoln's administration, which office he held until he moved west in 1865. In the autumn of 1864 he went to Whiteside County, Ill., and bought a farm near where his brother and eldest sister (Mrs. Mary Champlin) lived. The following spring he moved his family there and continued the vocation of farming the balance of his life. In his early life he was religiously inclined, but as his family grew his son Calvin brought a class of free thought literature such as the "New York Truth Seeker," Prof. John Fiske's "Unseen World," Paine's "Age of Reason," Ingersoll's "Lectures," "Boston Investigator," etc., into his house, the reading of which somewhat changed his mind on dogmatic theology. His faithful wife died Mar. 8, 1887. This was a greater calamity than he could well bear, and three years one month and two days later he followed her to their long home. He d. May 10, 1890; res. (Clay) Seavey, b. Lee, N. H., Jan. 20, 1835. Albert Richard Ober Fiske was born in Beverly, Mass., on what was then "Dodge's Row." His father, Abraham Fisk, was a farmer who moved afterward to Beverly Cove where the children were brought up, helping their father to pay for their home at the Cove, which was at the foot of Woodbury Street. The boys numbered five, all but the subject of this sketch following the sea. Albert was apprenticed to learn the shoemaker's trade at the early age of 11 years. He was courageous and active, and was early in life in business for himself. Failing in this, his first endeavor, he became foreman cutter in the factory of Francis Dane in So. Danvers, after which he was a partner in the business, having a separate factory on the corner of the "Square" and Chestnut Street. He was in business with varying fortunes at this stand for many years, removing to Wenham in 1870, eight miles away, where the workmen were mostly located, and where he continued to do business for himself until the great Boston fire, which swept away so many fortunes, so seriously impaired his business that he never fully recovered from the blow. He struggled on, however, for several years, when he was obliged to give up. He has lived since then in West Peabody, in Lynn and in Beverly, where he now resides. Albert R. Fisk is much respected wherever he is known, and is a man of sterling integrity, honest and incorruptible. In politics he was active in his younger days, serving two terms as Postmaster in So. Danvers, under Democratic administrations. He was loyal to the Union during the Civil War period, and though never joining the army, was a good friend of the soldier at the front, and their waiting families at home. He married, in 1846, Elizabeth White Safford, of Salem, who was born in 1825. In Aug., 1879, this truest of wives and fondest of mothers died. He subsequently married, at Lynn, Mrs. Jennie Seavey, a friend and acquaintance of many years. They resided for a time in Lynn, moving later to his native town of Beverly, where they live at 14 Home Street; res. South Danvers, Mass., and 14 Home Street, Beverly.

Mr. Fiske is a mechanical engineer and quite an expert in his line. Last year he came very near losing his life while at work in Washington, D. C., because of the carelessness of some individual unknown. In company with several other workmen, Mr. Fiske, who is an erecting engineer in the employ of the Providence Steam Engine Company, was engaged in fitting a portion of one of the Greene engines connected with the multipolar generator which supplies the motive power for the new electric system of propulsion being introduced by the Metropolitan company. While standing on the axle of the immense fly wheel, with his mind fixed on the work, Mr. Fiske was startled to feel that the axle was revolving. In the hope of saving himself he jumped to a wooden beam nearby, but it gave way with a crash, and the engineer was precipitated to the bottom of the wheel pit. Before he could move he was dragged beneath the revolving wheel, the space between the same and the cement flooring being less than one foot. In less time than it takes to tell it the unfortunate man had suffered a compound fracture of the right leg, a lacerated wound on the left hand, contusions of the back and shoulders and an abrasion of the left leg. A heavy iron casting which fell at the same time as did Mr. Fiske was smashed. The wheel, which had been set in motion by the shifting of a lever by some person among the many spectators watching the erection of the engine, was quickly stopped, and half a dozen of his fellow workmen lifted the injured man from his precarious position. The fact that the man had been badly injured quickly spread about the neighborhood, and in a few moments a surgeon with several members of the ambulance corps reached the scene from the hospital of the Washington Barracks, which is but half a block distant from the new power house. Several other physicians were also summoned, but it was decided to send Mr. Fiske to the Emergency Hospital. At the latter institution his injuries were attended to. Res. Providence, R. I., and Milan, O.

CHARLES DUDLEY BLAKE FISK.

Sparhawk, b. Oct. 20, 1854, dau. of Edward Carey and Susan Elizabeth (Greenwood) Sparhawk, of Brighton, Mass. Charles Dudley Blake Fiske, second son of Dudley Blake and Mary Ann Ashton Fiske, was born at Hookset, N. H., Feb. 17, 1850. His father died in 1851, leaving his mother destitute, with two small boys, his brother, William Francis, and himself. The first seven years of his life were passed at the home of his grandparents, in Lowell, Mass., his mother working hard to earn sufficient to care for her children. When Charles was nearly 7 years of age, his mother married an honest, hard working mechanic, who proved kind to the children, but of a roving nature, consequently Charles' early life was passed in various places, remaining in each hardly long enough to form any personal friends, and too short a time to acquire an education. At the age of 11 he worked in the early morning on a milk route, and in the evening sold papers on the streets of Providence, R. I. Two years later he had a cheap jewelry stand on Central St., Lowell, Mass., and later, at the age of 15, worked in a paper box factory. Again returning to Providence, Mr. Fiske, at the age of 16, drove a grocery order wagon. Realizing fully his ignorance, he attended a commercial evening school for about a year, learning bookkeeping, and laying the foundation for what knowledge he acquired later. Going to California at the age of 18, he soon spent what little he had saved, and went to work laying track for the Central Pacific Railroad at Sacramento, at $1.50 per day. After that he worked in the car shops, building cars, and yet later secured a position as clerk in the motive power department, at a salary of $1,500 a year, all the changes occurring within a year from his arrival in California, although when he landed he was an entire stranger to everybody. His last position carried him to the wilds of Nevada, where he mingled with the hardest set of men that could be gathered together from the four quarters of the globe. There might was law, and pistols and knives settled many a dispute. He dabbled in mines more or less, and became interested in a patent, which he thought would make his fortune. He returned East in 1871, soon became stranded, and was compelled to begin life anew as entry clerk in a large clothing house of J. B. Barnaby & Co., of Providence, R. I., at a salary of $6 per week. A year later he entered the employ of the Howe Sewing Machine Company, as bookkeeper; became their temporary general agent of Rhode Island and Connecticut, settled up their broken business and returned as head bookkeeper of the said clothing firm. In 1874 he went to Portland, Me., and opened a clothing store under the name of C. D. B. Fiske & Co., being backed by J. B. Barnaby & Co., his former employers. In 1879 Mr. Fiske was elected to the common council of Portland, and in 1880, was elected president of that body. In 1881 he removed to Boston, and opened a much larger store, under the name of J. B. Barnaby & Co. In 1893, as Mr. Barnaby had died, the business was sold, and in April of the same year, taking a partner, he opened a very large store as Fiske & Goff, clothiers. Since then the firm added a store in Portland,

Me. In 1875 Mr. Fiske married Susie E. Sparhawk, of Brighton, Mass., daughter of Edward C. Sparhawk, a wealthy and honored citizen of that place; res. Boston, Mass.

This apparatus is now (1895) in use in may of the ships of the navy; promoted to master Jan. 10, 1881. The title of master changed to that of lieutenant, junior grade, Mar. 3, 1883; promoted to lieutenant Jan. 26, 1887. On Feb. 15, 1882, he married Josephine Harper, daughter of Mr. Joseph W. Harper, head of the publishing firm of Harper & Brothers. On Oct. 1, 1882, obtained leave of absence for one year, to study electricity. During this year he wrote "Electricity in Theory and Practice," which Van Nostrand published. This book in 1895 was still selling, in its tenth edition. On duty in Bureau of Ordnance, Navy Department, from Oct., 1883, to Oct., 1885. During this time, i. e. in Oct. and Nov., 1884, was member of International Conference of Electricians at Philadelphia, and also was detailed in charge of the Naval Exhibit at the International Electrical Exhibition; made cruise in U. S. S. Atlanta, the first modern cruiser of the United States Navy, from July, 1886, to Dec., 1888. During this cruise invented electrical range finder for measuring distances at sea and in forts. This instrument is now in use in the principal ships of the navy; carried on, also, while on this cruise a number of experiments in electrically signalling through the water and the air. Up to the present time these experiments have not borne fruit in the shape of practical apparatus. From Dec., 1888, to Nov., 1890, engaged in shore duty in New York and Philadelphia, and also perfecting in leisure moments the range finder. In Oct., 1890, received a year's leave, most of which spent in Europe with wife and daughter. In Oct., 1891, ordered to U. S. S. Yorktown and went in her to Chile; was in Valparaiso during the height of the crisis there, under the command of Captain R. D. Evans (Fighting Bob), whose conduct during the episode gained so much honor for himself, his ship, and the United States; went from Chile, after the crisis had passed, to Bering Sea, and spent the summer in the Yorktown, then flagship of the patrol fleet for suppressing seal poaching. In July, 1893, the Yorktown being then at New York, was transferred to the Flagship San Francisco. Shortly after this, the San Francisco was ordered to Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, to watch over American interests during the rebellion of the navy, under Admirals Mello and da Gama against the government; was on board the San Francisco, under Admiral Benham, when that gallant admiral cleared his fleet for action and forced the Brazilian navy to agree to the just demands of the United States. After the conclusion of hostilities, the San Francisco was ordered to Bluefields, Nicaragua, to protect American interests in the triangular dispute going on between England, Nicaragua and the Mosquito Indians; detached from the San Francisco in Oct., 1894. During this cruise perfected range finder, and invented new form of position finder; invented also stadimeter, range telegraph, helm indicator, steering telegraph, telescope sight, electric telescope-sighting-system, and electric engine-telegraph. At the present moment, the range finder has been adopted by the navy and is placed in all the new ships; the stadimeter has proved a complete success in service and is being supplied to all the ships. The range indicator, helm indicator, steering telegraph and electric engine telegraph have passed successful tests in service at sea, and are being installed in the new battleships. The telescope sight is being tested now in various ships. In the summer of 1895 invented electric lachometer for continuously indicating on the bridge of a ship the direction and speed of revolution of the ship's engines. This instrument is now undergoing a test in service on board the

3271. PROF. FRANKLIN PROCTOR FISK (Franklin W., Ebenezer, Ebenezer, William, Ebenezer, William, William, John, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Chicago, Ill., Oct. 27, 1857; m. Dec. 27, 1881, Katherine Tanner, of Rockford, Ill. She was born in Wisconsin, but when quite young moved with her parents to Rockford, Ill., where she always resided. When 12 years of age she entered the Rockford College, where she graduated in 1881, only six months before she was married to Frank Fisk. Very soon after removing to Chicago, she began her musical career as a pupil of Miss F. A. Roots, and she there enlisted the interest of Professor Tomlins, who was her next teacher. After much solo work, Mrs. Fisk sought the advice and guidance of Mrs. S. H. Eddy, who admired her wonderful voice, but said that she must give years to study before she could expect to do much with it. She accepted the verdict, and studied for four years intently under Mrs. Eddy. From that time she became the most popular singer in the West. She soon determined to go to London, and having been heard by Mr. Daniel Mayer, was induced to sign a three years' engagement with him. After her arrival there she studied French and German songs under Mr. Henschel and Mr. Blume and passed her oratorios with Signor Randegger, making her debut at St. James' Hall at the close of 1892. Her success was such that before the end of January, 1893, she had been heard in that hall fourteen times, as well as at the Crystal Palace, Albert Hall and the London Symphony Concerts. After a short visit to her native country she returned to London, which will be her headquarters, though she will sing throughout Europe. In private life Mrs. Fisk is as charming as she is in her professional, for she is singularly gifted both mentally and physically, has most excellent taste in dress, speaks French fluently, and has a good knowledge of German and Italian. The rise to her position as one of the leading American contraltos is really a record of labor, perseverance and patience. Prof. Fisk was born in Chicago and in referring to him the Post says: "Abreast of the times, keeping along with all requirements at the recognized Chicago pace, is the Northwest Division high school, at Potomac Avenue and Davis Street. Dominated by the idea that sound practical sense and reason may be drilled into the young as well as Greek, Latin, mathematics or history, and possessed of a curriculum which is far more elaborate and attractive than that of a large number of the small colleges in the West, this Chicago school is growing in popularity, and has come to be the ideal school for the thousands of children who live in the northwest section of the city. The pride which Principal Franklin B. Fisk takes in his school is indeed pardonable. He has stamped his individuality indelibly on the institution over which he presides and the credit of it all is his, to have and to hold. Northwest Division high school is now a little more than six years old and it is a prodigy. Seven hundred scholars attend it regularly and nineteen teachers assist Mr. Fisk in their instruction. Studying is a business under Mr. Fisk's regime. His pupils go to school to learn, and not simply to be where they cannot annoy their parents for a day. The hours in school are short, only one session being held from 9 o'clock a. m. to 2 o'clock p. m., with a half-hour for luncheon and a whispering recess of five minutes. The best of order is maintained in the class and recitation rooms, and nothing distracts the attention of any pupil. To describe Northwest Division high school, its rooms, its departments and its course of study would be simply going over old ground. It is a complete school from alpha to omega, and it is a great institution. It fills a place in Chicago's educational facilities which no man attempts to dispute and it affords children who would be compelled to stop with finishing at the graded schools an opportunity for a higher education, which they and their parents most assuredly appreciate. It is asserted that at least thirty per cent of the seven hundred pupils in the school would have been compelled to go to work for a living this fall had not Mr. Fisk's school been available, simply because their parents couldn't afford to send them to a college or a university. And an education means more than dollars and cents to the average child of school age. As an example of the plan upon which Mr. Fisk conducts this school one scene in the big gymnasium in the basement may be thus described: Thirty girls, of all sizes and forms, dressed in blue trousers, very full, blouses of the same material, stockings to match and light shoes, romping and racing, jumping, leaping, laughing, swinging on ropes hung from the ceiling, with rings attached, turning on the horizontal bar, climbing ladders, their feet higher than their heads half the time and every mother's daughter of them ruddy-faced and seemingly not exhausted. No unseemly behavior, no rough jesting, no false modesthood. Just healthy girlhood effervescent." Res. s. p. Chicago, Ill.

May 15, 1842, Shelburne Falls, Mass. He was but 13 years of age when his father went west, and he went to work to support his mother and earn his own living, and do what he could to obtain an education.

After the war broke out he enlisted in the Forty-third Regiment Massachusetts Volunteers; was in the service about one year, and saw some hard marching and fighting, and came home broken down in health. Having saved his bounty, $125, and a part of his wages, he went to Wesleyan Academy, Wilbraham, Mass., and feeling it to be his duty to enter the ministry, he began study in preparation for that work. After spending two years at the academy, he went to the Methodist General Biblical Institute, at Concord, N. H., where he received two years in theological training. Soon after which he joined the New Hampshire Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and has continued in the work of the ministry from that time to the present, with about the average success; res. Jan. 17, 1838, Emeline Moulton, b. Sept. 5, 1809; d. May 2, 1890. Charles Lee Fisk, M. D., was born at Hampton, Conn., Dec. 25, 1804, and is therefore in his 92d year in moderate health, except nearly total loss of eyesight. He studied medicine and taught school in Pittsburg, Pa., in his younger days; practiced for some years in Killingly, Conn., and for the past forty-three years in Greenfield, Mass., where he now resides. He has led a very active life and has always had a large and successful medical practice up to his 80th year. He was an early abolitionist and a contemporary of Garrison, Phillips and others. He is an independent free thinker and fully believes in nature's laws and that cause and effect govern and control the universe. The old doctor was made a Freemason in Pittsburg the night he was 21 years of age; he was loyal all through the turbulent times of Morgan and has long been a Knight Templar and a 33d degree Mason. There have been but few men of his pluck and nerve and strength of blood, strong perceptions, reasoning powers, readiness in debate, conversational gifts and extemporaneous speech. When he departs from this existence he will be long remembered as a man of remarkable personal character and ability, of a tender and sensitive nature, a lover of science and art, poetry, music, and all that is grand and glorious in life; res. 3618. REV. ELI COOLEY FISK (Eli, Hezekiah, Asa, David, John, John, Nathaniel, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Cincinnati, O., Aug. 22, 1825; m. June 23, 1867, Rosanna Wagoner, b. Oct. 19, 1840. He attended with his brother the free schools at Cincinnati, and with his mother, in 1834, went east and visited relatives. While there the house was burned in Cincinnati. When they returned home in the fall they were three weeks coming down the Ohio River from Wheeling, W. Va. to Cincinnati, on a canal boat, for the river was so low that the steamboats could not run. They all came to Illinois in 1835, arriving at Havana, Aug. 7, being delayed by Eli C. having the small-pox. His father brought a steam engine to put up a saw mill, but not having the necessary capital, he sold out, but put up the mill for them; then moved on the farm in Aug., 1837, Eli C. now lives on. In Oct., 1842, a team ran away with him and harrowed him under; he has been a cripple, and walks with a cane, ever since. He attended school two or three quarters while living in Havana, and three while on the farm. In 1847 he entered the preparatory department of Illinois College. Graduated in 1852. He colported for the American Tract Society one vacation, and another for the American Sunday School Union. His labors were in Mason Co., Ill., and organized Sunday schools in nearly every schoolhouse in the county. He read theology with Rev. A. Hale, of Springfield, Ill. He preached his first sermon Oct. 12, 1856. Ordained Feb. 20, 1858 as pastor of the Mason Congregational Church, which he was the means of forming. He resigned Dec., 1859; preached for more than two years after, and supported himself. Finally the disloyal element became so defiant that he held many meetings throughout Mason and other counties in favor of the Union. He has been persecuted by that disloyal element ever since. In order to meet them, he studied law, so that the legal principles involved could be used by him in the controversy. He was admitted to the bar in Mar., 1868. He rarely practices, for he would rather have a clear conscience than the best legal reputation in the State. He has followed farming ever since he resigned the pastorate of the church, continuing on the old homestead. His marriage has been crowned with seven children, four daughters and three sons. He has continued on the farm, and by successful crossing and interbreeding, produced the "Fisk" corn, both white and yellow. He is and has been the president of the Mason and Fulton Counties' Old Settlers' Society for nearly two years; been school treasurer quite a number of years, until he resigned; eight years notary public; got the Mason County Farmers' Institute on its feet, then resigned its secretaryship. He has been engaged in quite a number of other things, but never joined a secret society; res. Havana, Ill.

3621. REV. WARREN COOLEY FISKE (Stephen, Hezekiah, Asa, David, John, John, Nathaniel, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Wales, Mass., Sept. 21, 1816; m. May 19, 1847, Harriett Mindwell Parsons, b. East Haddam, Conn., Apr. 12, 1823. She now res. in Southington, Conn.; is a dau. of Rev. Isaac and Sarah (Budd) Parsons. He was born in Wales, Mass., formerly a part of Brimfield. His father was a farmer and he passed his early years in the customary round of duties pertaining to the life of a farmer's boy. When he was 12 years old he was converted and very soon formed the plan of getting an education. His father gave him his time and he went to Northampton where he was employed in a mill until he was able to enter Monson Academy. From there he went to Amherst College, from which he graduated in 1840. After teaching for two years at Salem, N. J., he entered the Theological Institute of Connecticut, then at East Windsor, from which he graduated in 1845. While pursuing a post-graduate course he was called to assist in evangelistic meetings at East Haddam, where he met and won for his wife, Miss Harriet M. Parsons, the daughter of the honored and beloved pastor of the East Haddam church for forty years, Rev. Isaac Parsons. There he was ordained May 19, 1847, and there, upon the same day he was married, the wedding ceremony following the ordination exercises. He immediately went to Wisconsin, as a home missionary, under the Connecticut Home Missionary Society. There his first child was born, and there too, in those western wilds, it was buried. His wife's health failed and he returned to the east and was installed pastor of the church in Marlborough, Nov. 8, 1850. Here he remained seven years. From this place he went to Canton, where he was installed Feb. 2, 1858. While at Canton the excitement over the anti-slavery controversy reached its height and preferring not to remain where the church seemed likely to be somewhat broken up by it he resigned and removed with his family to East Haddam. His wife's aged parents were still living and greatly needed his care. There he remained several years, but removed to Colchester where he taught in Bacon Academy. There he had a severe attack of pneumonia. His health improved somewhat, and he again entered upon pastoral work, first at Barkhamsted, for nine months, and then at Wolcott, for three years. But the labor of a pastor's life proved too great for his failing health, and having purchased a farm at Charlton, Mass., he removed to that place, where he lived very quietly for twelve years. At the end of that period his health had so far declined that he was unable to even superintend the small farm which he owned. He sold it and removed to Southington, where his oldest son is a physician. There he lived for three years, slowly yielding to consumption; and there he fell asleep at the ripe age of 70. So ended a quiet, unobtrusive, successful life. Mr. Fiske's most prominent characteristic, perhaps, was faithfulness. Possessed of none of those elements which the world calls brilliant, never attracting attention by anything in any degree sensational, his ministry was successful because it was faithful. Mr. Fiske was a conservative man, emphatically a man of the "old school." He was interested in all the questions of the day, and had very decided convictions upon them all. He kept track in his sick room of all the current themes of the pulpit and the press, and talked with intelligence upon them. But he clung with ardent devotion to the belief and customs of the fathers. His convictions were the result of honest and earnest thought and he did not yield them to any one. He d. A recent issue of the Boston Traveler says: "Colonel Francis S. Fiske, the United States Commissioner, is one of the most familiar figures in Milton. Everyone, almost, seems to know him and he has a kind and cheerful word for ail. For a man of his age, he is a great pedestrian, and on a pleasant morning he likes nothing better than to walk from his home on Milton Hill to the electric car and enjoy the ride into the city. Colonel Fiske is a good type of the gentleman of the old school, courteous and affable to all, with a special aptitude of bringing out a bright bon mot at the appropriate time. He has a dry, humorous way of speech which many of the younger generation have encountered in an attempt to appear bright at his expense; res. Keene, N. H., Boston and Milton, Mass.

Fiske was a well known printer and died at his residence on Pleasant View, near Pawtucket, R. I., in his 41st year. He was a native of Dover, N. H., where he learned his trade. For a score and more of years he worked in Springfield, Mass., Worcester, Mass., and Providence, R. I. He was employed several years in the book department of the Providence Press Company and as proofreader for Messrs. Hammond, Angell & Co., of Providence. He had musical talent and was literary in his tastes, frequently writing in verse. He was patriotic and loved his country, not being able to fight on account of poor health which terminated in consumption from which he died. He was beloved and respected, and was a brother of the well known actor, Moses W. Fiske. He d. May 4, 1874; res. Holyoke, Mass., and Pawtucket, R. I.

3707. CAPT. WALTER LESLIE FISKE (Jacob, Thomas, Jonathan, Thomas, William, John, Nathaniel, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Belvidere, Ill., Jan. 8, 1855; m. Apr. 29, 1884, Mary Almeda Briggs, b. 1860; d. Mar. 9, 1885. He was born in Belvidere, Ill., where he was educated at the public schools and at Waverly, Ia. Later he taught school and worked in a drug store. In the Iowa Congressional District, represented by Hon. D. B. Henderson, young Fiske passed a successful competitive examination, both mental and physical, and was appointed to a West Point cadetship in 1873. While at school he was studious and at his graduation was number two in the large class. Captain Fisk is an officer of large experience, having been in charge of a number of important government works in various parts of the country. He graduated at the United States military school in June, 1877, and was assigned to the corps of engineers. He was on duty at the United States engineer school at Willets Point, N. Y., until September, 1880, when he was detailed as assistant to Gen. Q. A. Gilmore, and, under him, had local charge of United States river and harbor improvements in Florida until Feb., 1882. He started during that time the jetties both at Cumberland Sound, Georgia and Florida, and at the mouth of the St. John's River, Florida. These are important works, one of the jetties at the St. John's River being 9,400 feet in length, and the other 6,800. They are now doing good work, and have materially benefited the navigation of the river, up which deep-draught steamers ascend about 100 miles. Captain Fisk was assistant to Major S. M. Mansfield, corps of engineers, at Galveston, Tex., from Feb., 1882, to Oct., 1884, on United States river and harbor improvements in Texas, assisting during that time in making various hydrographic surveys of different harbors. From Oct., 1884, to Aug., 1885, he acted as secretary and disbursing officer of the Missouri River Commission, with immediate charge of the surveys of the Missouri River from Fort Benton, Mont., to its mouth. From Aug., 1885, to Aug., 1887, he was assistant professor of civil and military engineering at the United States Military Academy, and during September and November acted as assistant in the office of the chief of engineers, United States Army, at Washington, D. C. From Nov., 1877, to Feb., 1891, he was at New Orleans, in charge of United States river and harbor improvements in Louisiana, south of Red River, except the Mississippi River above the head of the passes and the upper end of the Alchafalaya. He had charge of the construction of about three miles of jetties at Sabine Pass, and reported upon "the depth and width of a channel secured and maintained by jetties at the mouth of the Mississippi River," upon which payments were made to the Eads estate, and as engineer of the seventh and eighth lighthouse districts had charge of the erection of eight lighthouses. From Feb., 1891, to Oct., 1892, Captain Fisk was stationed at Duluth, Minn., in charge of United States river and harbor improvements on Lake Superior, except the Portage lake and Lake Superior ship canals, having charge of important harbor improvements at Duluth, Superior, Marquette, Ashland and elsewhere. From Oct., 1892, to Nov., 1895, he was at the United States engineer school, Willet's Point, N. Y., in command of Company A, Battalion of Engineers, United States Army, and instructor in electricity and torpedo service, or, technically, of "submarine mining." Since going from Willet's Point to Portland, Ore., Captain Fisk has had charge of all river and harbor improvements in Oregon, Washington and Idaho, and is also engineer of the thirteenth lighthouse district; res. Willet's Point, N. Y., and Portland, Ore.

Boston, Aug. 14, 1841; m. there Dec. 14, 1870, Kate Washburn, b. Mar. 19, 1848. He was born in the good old city of Boston and has clung very fondly to it ever since his birth. His school days, preparatory to his college life, were passed at that well known Boston institution named Chauncy Hall school, where he was fitted for college, entering Harvard in the year 1858, without condition and graduating in the class of 1862; was a member of the famous Hasty Pudding Club. On Sept. 29, 1862, he enlisted as a private in the Forty-first Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteers, commanded by Col. Thomas Chickering, of piano fame. He was with the Forty-first as Commissary Sergeant until its departure to the Department of the Gulf, and just on the day of its departure received a commission as Second Lieutenant in that regiment, and was ordered to report for staff duty to Brigadier-General George L. Andrews, then in command of the remainder of the Banks expedition, with headquarters in New York City. With the last regiment composing the expedition, he sailed with General Andrews and staff for New Orleans early in 1863; was present during the whole of the memorable siege of Port Hudson, La., and with General Andrews was one of the first to enter that desolated place on the morning of its surrender; was placed in charge of General Gardner, one of its bravest defenders, and assisted in the parole of its other defenders. After its evacuation he remained at Port Hudson on garrison duty. He visited Vicksburg after its surrender, carrying dispatches to General McPherson, then in command at that point. He narrowly escaped capture as bearer of dispatches to General Smith at the beginning of the Red River campaign, ascending the river in a small steamer within a few miles of Fort De Russey before the expedition had made its start up the river, meeting General Smith the following morning with his command at the entrance to the river. On Oct. 27, 1863, he was commissioned First Lieutenant in the Forty-first Massachusetts Volunteers, and in Apr., 1864, visited the north with General Andrews, who was on sick leave. On July 12, 1864, was commissioned by President Lincoln as Paymaster of United States Army and ordered back to the Department of the Gulf with headquarters at New Orleans. On Oct. 1, 1864, he resigned his commission as Paymaster owing to ill health, and returned north; but owing to severe malaria contracted in the service, was obliged in Feb., 1866, to visit the Azores, and remained at Fayal, and St. Michaels at the Hot Springs until June, when he returned home. On his return he entered the employ of the Merchants' Union Express Company and during the last thirty years has remained in the same business, now the American Express Company, having had for several years during that period charge of Wells, Fargo & Co.'s banking business until they withdrew that part of their business from Boston. He is at the present time, and has been for many years, a member of the Massachusetts Commandery of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, and for several years past has been treasurer of the Parish of All Saints, Dorchester (Boston); res. Baker, dau. of John and Sally L. (Loring) Baker, b. Boston, Nov. 28, 1814. "Dr. Fiske was the son of the late Dr. Oliver Fiske, and was born in Worcester. He graduated at Harvard University in 1818, and after pursuing his studies for the practice of medicine, removed to the town of Hingham. His father will be remembered as the founder and proprietor of the first, and for many years the only, nursery of fruit and ornamental trees in the country, and to whom in the first instance, this city is indebted for so much of the rural beauty which distinguishes it. Dr. Fiske inherited his father's taste and passionate love of nature. Before leaving permanently his native place, he originated and helped to execute a work, for which present and future generations of our citizens will bless his memory, although few perhaps may know even the name of their benefactor. Those beautiful rows of shade trees which line and adorn our Main, Front and Park Streets, were chiefly planted by an association of young men, then pursuing their legal and medical studies in the town, among whom Dr. Fiske was the most active. Frequently in later years has he pointed out to the writer of this notice an elm or ash or maple which his own hands had planted, that others might enjoy the shade thereof. In his adopted home, the same refined taste and public spirit have ever characterized him. The conversion of the old neglected town burial ground, which had been used for more than 200 years, into a beautiful, romantic, well kept rural cemetery, a task so difficult of accomplishment that it has scarcely in any other instance been undertaken, the embellishment of his own home, furnishing motive and incentive to like efforts by others, the educational and other institutions of the town, the blessings of the poor to whom he ministered, and the respect of all, are proof of the good works, and monuments to the memory of the 'Good Physician.'" Y., to get into what was then called the west. He went without a penny and walked the last thirteen miles on a snowy, slushy day. He brought grain by wagon load down to Albany, traded for groceries and other commodities and sold them in Lenox to the Indians and settlers. Later he established a store, finally two stores, one at Oneida Lake. He formed a partnership with a Mr. Howland (Howland & Fiske), burned the woods in that section to procure the ashes to manufacture potash. He did a successful business for fifty years, and was known as Major Fiske, one of the Inspector-Generals of the State of New York. He was elected to several political offices, but the latter years of his life he was a private banker and broker, under the firm name of William E. Fiske & Son. He died at Canastota. William E. Fiske was a man of character and ability, of the strictest integrity; while delicate and modest he never failed to stand by his opinion. He was a strong anti-slavery man; his house was a station on the underground railroad. He was also a strong temperance man and organized the first temperance society in his county. He wrote and lectured for the cause, and his writings and lectures were pronounced fine. He died beloved and respected by all those who knew him. He d. Nov. 23, 1873; res. Lenox and Canastota, N. Y.

3747. CAPT. SEWALL FISKE (Nathan, Jonathan, Nathan, Nathan, Nathan, Nathaniel, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Weston, Sept. 8, 1792; m. Apr. 8, 1818, Martha Stearns, b. Oct. 19, 1787, dau. of Isaac, of Ashburnham; d. Oct. 2, 1868. Sewall Fiske was born on the old farm at Weston, and lived and died there. The old English custom has been observed by our ancestors from the first settlement at Weston of passing the land from father to son, and there has been no intervention. He was a farmer all his life, and in addition conducted upon the farm a store with a partner and employes, he buying all goods for the same. That was before the days of railroads, and they made a great deal of business by buying out countrymen who were on their way to Boston loaded down with poultry, turkeys, geese, ducks, chickens, etc. They came in droves in the winter time, utilizing the sleighing, and as the great highway through Massachusetts from Vermont and New Hampshire passed through the farm it gave many opportunities for speculation. In the fall he would remain in Boston from Monday morning to Saturday night engaged in disposing of this produce thus purchased from the northern farmers.

He commanded, in 1812, a company of infantry that, in connection with one other company, "The Ancient and Honorable Artillery of Boston," was called out by the State of Massachusetts to defend the arsenal at Watertown. The Boston company is still in existence. They both received their charter from George III, when Massachusetts was an English colony. He was a strong Whig. He was a delegate to the National Convention in Baltimore when Henry Clay was nominated. He and his wife were Congregationalists, members of the church in Lincoln, two and one-half miles from home. Every Sabbath two teams were employed in carrying the family to church, where the day was spent, and the long sermons of forenoon and afternoon listened to.

He was for many years prominent among his townsmen, and was many times elected as Selectman, Assessor and Tax Collector, as well as other town duties. He d. Mar. 1, 1872; res. Ashburnham, Mass.

He was graduated at Dartmouth in 1817, and had charge of an academy in Newcastle, Me., for a year. He was chosen tutor at Dartmouth in 1818, which post he held two years, and was graduated at Andover Theological Seminary in 1823. In November of that year he was ordained as an evangelist, and went to Savannah, Ga., to preach among the seamen and others not belonging to any church. In April, 1824, while yet in Savannah, he declined an invitation to supply the pastorate in Concord, N. H., during the session of the Legislature, and on the same day he declined the solicitation to represent the American Foreign Mission Board as a missionary to Palestine or to China. He was also offered the professorship of mathematics and natural philosophy in Middlebury College, Vt., but declined it, and became professor of Latin and Greek in Amherst in 1824,

He was transferred to the chair of intellectual and moral philosophy, and held it from 1836 till the time of his death. In 1846, on account of failing health, he visited Palestine, where he died, and was buried in Jerusalem on Mount Zion. He was the father of the author Helen Hunt Jackson (q. v.) He published a "Manual of Classical Literature," based upon the German work of J. J. Eschenburg, with additions and a supplemental volume of plates (Philadelphia, 1836; 4th ed., 1843); "Sermons" (1850); "Young Peter's Tour Around the World," and "Story of Aleck; or, The History of Pitcairn's Island." Fiske, of Amherst, and was educated at the Ipswich, Mass., female seminary. In October, 1852, she married Capt. Edward B. Hunt. She had become known as a contributor to periodical literature, under the signature of "H. H.," when in October, 1875, she married William S. Jackson, and thereafter spent much of her time in Colorado Springs, where her husband was a banker. She became actively interested in the treatment of the Indians by the U. S. Government in 1879, and strove to better the condition of that race. In 1883 she was appointed special commissioner to examine into the condition of the Mission Indians of California, and while thus engaged she studied the history of the early Spanish missions. From her death-bed she wrote to the President a pathetic appeal with reference to "righting the wrongs of the Indian race." Her published works include "Verses" (Boston, 1870; enlarged ed., 1874); "Bits of Travel" (1872); "Bits of Talk About Home Matters" (1873); "Bits of Talk for Young People" (1876); "Bits of Travel at Home" (1878); "Nelly's Silver Mine" (1878); "The Story of Boon" (1879); "Letters from a Cat" (1880); "A Century of Dishonor," referring to the Indians (New York, 1881); "Mammy Tittleback and Her Family" (1881); "The Training of Children" (1882); "The Hunter Cats of Connorloa" (1884); "Ramona" (1884); "Zeph" (1886); "Glimpses of Three Coasts" (1886); "Sonnets and Lyrics" (1886); "Between Whites" (1887); also "Mercy Philbrick's Choice" (1876) and "Hetty's Strange History" (1877), contributed to the "No-Name Series." There he continued to thrive and became the foremost citizen of that town, both in wealth and position. He married Eliza Stone, of that town, who was a most estimable lady. They had five children, Harriett, Arthur W., Henry, Catherine and Eliza. Mr. Fiske and his wife were both members of the Methodist Church in Marlow, and very active in its support. By his will he endowed this church, and after his decease his widow contributed largely to its support. Mr. Fiske held various town, county and State offices, the principal of which was State Senator, to which office he was twice elected, from 1863 to 1866. May 22, 1830, Hannah Rogers Bradford, b. July 7, 1810; d. Oct. 29, 1880. Augustus H. Fiske was born in Weston, Mass. His father was Isaac Fiske, and his mother Sukey (Hobbs) Fiske. He was educated at the Framingham Academy, and graduated from Harvard in 1825. He practiced law in Boston all his life. He lived in Boston until about 1848, when he moved back to Weston, still retaining his office in Boston. He was one of the leaders of the bar of his time. His wife was Hannah Rogers Bradford, a daughter of the late Capt. Gamaliel Bradford, of Boston, formerly of Duxbury, Mass. Mr. Fiske's learning as a lawyer was large and always ready for use, his judgment was prompt and sound, his instincts rarely at fault. His industry was untiring, and his executive talent so great that he despatched without aid and without apparent effort an amount of business detail which would seem incredible to any one who had not witnessed it. His sagacity in matters of business as well as in what pertained directly to his profession was remarkable. There are few of our merchants and business men who have not had occasion to appreciate and profit by it. With these qualities, and with a genial temper, a hearty manner, and a devotion to the interests of his clients, which even on his deathbed never let him spare himself, it is not surprising that he reached a position in his profession to which there are few parallels, and enjoyed more of the substantial fruits of success than has perhaps ever fallen to the lot of any other member of the Boston bar. He was a Mason in high standing and on his removal to Kentucky organized a blue lodge. He died of "milk sickness," a disease not known much nowadays. He was a very large man and weighed 260 pounds. He was brought up on a farm of thirty acres, in New York, till he was 20 years of age, then left for Wisconsin; worked there three years by the month; bought a yoke of oxen; took a pre-emption on 160 acres of land for one year, and hired the money to pay for it at 25 per cent. The two boys are living each on a farm, one on the homestead; the other has 163 acres in Richland Co., Wis. His daughter and youngest boy were playing around a burning stump, when she was 6 years old; she stooped down to pick up some brush with her back to the fire, her clothes caught fire and she ran about five rods before her father reached her. He was the second son in a list of eight brothers. At an early age he went with his father, Sylvanus Fisk, to Genesee County, N. Y. While a boy he learned the carpenter and joiner's trade but did not work at it more than a small portion of his early manhood. At the age of 19 he settled on a portion of what was known as the Poultney heirs' tract of land in the town of Stafford; married at 21 and lived on it or another tract adjoining which he came in possession of later, all his remaining days. Early he made an agreement—articled—for his holdings at $5 per acre, and for more than twenty years he labored under that article, paying six per cent. compound interest. In the meantime he had cleared it and so improved it that it would readily sell at about $100 per acre; besides he had cared well for his family and indulged his hospitality and generosity largely. He refused $100 per acre for his farm by telling the man who offered it, "If it is worth that to you it is to me. I made it to live on and die on," and he did, at the age of 86 years. SOLON FISK.

2d, Apr. 10, 1878, Ellen M. Frink, b. Apr. 12, 1850, in Urbana, Ohio. Solon Fisk was born in Albany, Orleans County, Vt. The first twenty years were spent in Vermont, living in Albany, Brookfield, Bethel (with his grandfather), Montpelier, Berlin, Royalton, Hancock and Castleton; taught school four successive winters, beginning with the winter of 1842-43. At the close of his fourth school, in the spring of 1846, he went to Massachusetts, learned trade of machinist, working in Lowell, Boston, Annam and Charlestown, mostly on locomotive engines. In 1849 he removed to Concord, N. H., working as machinist for Northern Railroad Company. In 1850 he became a locomotive engineer, and as such helped to build the Vermont & Canada Railroad, living in Milton and St. Albans, on the line of that road. In 1851 and 1852 he lived in Burlington, Vt., engineer of all passenger trains between Burlington and Essex Junction, six miles out. In 1853 he was employed on new locomotive engines by the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company, in Manchester, N. H. In 1854 went to Zanesville, Ohio, and was employed there for four years in various capacities on Central Ohio Railroad, Columbus to Bellaire, as assistant master of machinery (at Bellaire), conductor, engineer, and finally contractor, to furnish this Central Ohio Railroad with wood, at that time used exclusively as fuel for locomotives, which contract he held for two years (and more). Then quitting railroading forever, as he thought, he read law, and was admitted to practice at Newark, Ohio, but belonged to the bar of Zanesville; followed this and the mining of coal, in which he was interested, through the war, but having a hankering for running a locomotive again, took a position offered him in 1865 on the Chicago & Alton Railroad, living for two years in Alton, the rest of the time in Bloomington. He continued at this business much longer than he designed to. In Nov., 1876, he quit it and has since then lived retired, in Bloomington; res. Bloomington, Ill.

3959. REV. JOSIAH FISK (Nathan, Josiah, Nathan, William, Nathan, Nathan, Nathaniel, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Penfield, N. Y., Nov. 12, 1812; m. at Austin, Tex., Aug. 10, 1848, Narcissa L. White; d. Mar. 30, 1858; m. 2d, Oct. 10, 1860, Vashti Harkness, b. Mar. 4, 1821. He was born in Penfield, N. Y., and worked on the farm until his father's death in 1826. After doing various kinds of farm work and attending the district school, he went to Massachusetts to live with his father's brother. He attended the Cummington Academy, and later taught school in Yates, N. Y. One of his brothers was attending Hanover College in Indiana, and desiring a better education availed himself of an invitation to go there to school. At the commencement exercises he was chosen one of the speakers. After graduation he taught school in Gallatin Co., Ky., for a year and also began the study of law. Going to Jacksonville, Ill., he studied law with Hon. Stephen A. Douglas, and was later admitted to the bar and to practice in all the courts of the State. He opened an office in Hillsboro in 1835 and was at once elected Justice of the Peace, and in 1838 he was elected Representative to the Legislature, serving in the last session ever held in the old State House in Vandalia and the first in the new State House in Springfield, the present capital. Usher F. Linder, the Attorney-General of Illinois, was indicted for assault with intent to commit murder and suspended from office, and he acted as Attorney-General until Linder was tried and acquitted and resumed the office. In the fall of 1845 he removed to Texas. In 1846 he enlisted and served as Corporal in the war against Mexico. At the close of the war he engaged in the practice of law and in locating and buying and selling land. He owned 2,000 acres of land in Austin, Tex. When the Civil War broke out he was opposed to secession, and was obliged to flee to save his life. His property, which was quite valuable, was confiscated, and his adventures which he experienced while escaping to the south were very thrilling. On arriving in New Orleans he began the practice of law and acted as District Attorney of Jefferson Parish.

He has always believed in the Methodist Church since he can remember. He was licensed as an exorter, then as a local preacher and next admitted into the Louisiana Conference with an understanding that his appointment should be only nominal, and that he should be allowed to continue the practice of law and preach wherever called upon without any expense to the church. When the Constitutional Convention met and elected their officers the question came up for electing a chaplain. Several of the most eminent preachers of the United States were in the city. The members were divided in their choice. Mr. Wickliff, a delegate, arose and moved that Mr. Fisk be elected chaplain, for he could make the best prayer of any preacher in the city. One delegate arose and said: "Mr. President, the gentleman has made a very bold assertion. I would like for him to prove it." Mr. Wickliff arose and stated "Mr. Fisk can make the shortest prayer of any of the preachers here." That settled the question, and he was unanimously elected. He had not named the office to any person. He continued to practice law during the week and to preach Sundays until 1881, when he removed to Council Bluffs, Ia.

A Chicago paper recently published this:

"Council Bluffs, Ia., March 5, 1896.—Josiah Fisk today received notification that his claim against the city of New Orleans had been settled, and he will receive about $4,000.

"Fisk was a law student in the office of Abraham Lincoln. President Grant appointed him District Attorney for one of the branches of the city of New Orleans in 1868, and he served through the trying days of reconstruction. He was in office ten years. The Ku-Klux-Klan was active in that locality, and Fisk was equally active in running it down. He was finally advised to leave town, but declined.

"Soon after a man who resembled Fisk in appearance was killed by the Ku-klux, and Fisk had to leave. He subsequently sued the city for his salary. Every effort was made to evade payment. Fisk got judgment for $9,500, and finally settled for $4,000."

Y., May 19, 1807; m. at Bastrop, Tex., Mary A. Manlove, dau. of Col. Manlove; m. 2d, at Bastrop, Mrs. Mary (Piper) Hawkins, b. Feb. 25, 1833. Judge Greenleaf Fisk was born in New York State. At the age of 20 he professed Christ and united with the Presbyterian Church, and began to study for the ministry. He pursued his studies so far as to take one year in Lanes Theological Seminary, at Cincinnati. Leaving there, he studied a short time at Hanover College, Ind. After a time he and a companion embarked in a skiff on the Ohio River, and started for the west. He came to Texas while it was under Mexican rule. He married at Bastrop, Mary A., daughter of Col. Manlove. When the war of Texas Independence broke out, he enlisted and served through the entire war. He was present at the battle of San Jacinto, Apr. 21, 1836. Returning to his home, he found that his wife had been compelled by the Mexicans to seek safety in eastern Texas. He at length found her, having a child nearly a year old, which he had never seen. He was a member of Congress under the Republic of Texas. He afterwards moved to Williamson county, where his wife died, and he married Mrs. Mary Hawkins. From 1838 and onward, he made several trips to Brown county, in the capacity of surveyor, on one of which trips he was captured by the Indians, but afterwards released. He located most of the land since owned by him, in Brown county. In 1860 he moved to Brown county, and camped on the site of his rock residence in town. When the county was organized, in 1861, he was elected County Judge, and subsequently filled the office of District Clerk; County Clerk, County Treasurer, and Justice of the Peace. Since that time he has been closely identified with all the interests of Brown county. In Dec., 1886, he united with the Presbyterian Church. By failing strength, he was compelled to take his bed, and after five months of confinement, he passed peacefully away. The funeral services were conducted at the Presbyterian Church. In accordance with proclamation of the Mayor, all business houses in town were closed, and the church was packed to its uttermost capacity. Seldom has been expressed such a general sense of bereavement as well as sympathy for the afflicted family. The deceased had seven children by his first wife, two of whom still live. He had eight children by his second wife, all of whom live. He lived to see three great-grandchildren. Thus has passed away another of the old land marks. He d. Jan. 26, 1888; res. Brownwood, Tex.

Mar. 5, 1862; m. 2d, June 5, 1872, Esther Ann (Turner) Hall, s. p. Ralph Fiske spent all his life after coming to manhood, in the village of Whitefield, and all the active part of it in trade. For many years he kept the only store in the place, and when railroads and the lumber business stimulated its growth, he continued for some time to be one of its leading men of business, and accumulated considerable property. He often acted as executor, administrator or trustee, and was prominent in the public affairs of the town, serving it several times in local office and the State Legislature. Generally known as the "Squire," he was held in high esteem for his practical capacity and unswerving integrity. He was prominently connected with the Methodist Church. The last ten or fifteen years of his life were spent in quiet leisure. Mr. Fiske ever took a lively interest in the progress of the town, and had the confidence of his fellow citizens to a marked degree, so in the conduct of public affairs his judgment always, and his services often, were sought and obtained when the political party with which he was conscientiously allied was in the majority, and from 1836, the date of the first election to public service, for twenty-five years no name appears oftener in the civil list of the town than Ralph Fiske. He was of very positive nature; had his own ideas of right and justice, and never swerved from his own conceptions of duty. For fifty years he was an earnest, consistent member of the Methodist Church, and to his interest and encouragement does that society in Whitefield largely owe its present prosperity. His faith was not of that stern, unrelenting kind which we might expect, knowing that his early religious training was from a venerated mother, whose Calvinism was of the unmitigated sort. He d. Generally he lived on a farm, but in his earlier years he had worked at the trade of mason and bricklayer, and often took jobs of that kind in later life. He was married seven times and succeeded in leaving a widow, who is still living at Lyme. Like all others of that generation, he was held in high respect by all who knew him, and was of a rather more genial disposition than most of the family, which was rather given to austerity. He d. June 4, 1891; res. Bath and Lyme, N. H.

Frederick spent all his active life in the village of Lancaster, and for many years kept a hotel there known as the American House. It was a strictly temperance tavern, and at one time the leading hostelry of the place, and a resort of White Mountain travel in its earlier and simpler days. Selling the hotel property he engaged in the business of putting in drainage and water works in the growing village, partly by contract for the town and partly as a private undertaking. Charles had a store at Oldtown, Me., and he spent all his early manhood there, but he was taken with the early California "gold fever," and after some hesitation he sold out his business in Maine and emigrated to the Pacific coast about 1850 or soon after. He and his brother Royal freighted a vessel with sawed lumber and sent it "round the Horn," and when it got to San Francisco the cargo was worth less in the market there than it cost on the New England coast. He had less predilection for city life than his brother Royal and went into the mountains and mining regions. He finally seems to have become permanent at Murphy's Ranche, now known as "Murphy's," where he was still living at last accounts. Res. Murphy's, Cal.

H., Aug. 31, 1808; m. in Granby Feb. 2, 1832, Sarah Maria White, b. Dec. 7, 1814; d. June 20, 1886. When he was about 1 year of age his father removed to northern Vermont, settling at or near St. Albans. At the beginning of the war of 1812 the family returned to Chesterfield. Here his boyhood was spent. His educational advantages were limited to the district schools of that day with a term or two at the Chesterfield Academy. When about 20 years of age he accompanied the family in its removal to Skip-Muck, now Chicopee Falls, Mass. Here he found employment. He removed to Constantia, now West Monroe, Oneida Co., N. Y. After a residence of two years and a half here he returned to Massachusetts and again located at Chicopee Falls, being employed in the mills at that place. From this time (1835) until 1849 he was employed in the cotton mills a greater part of the time. In the spring of 1849 on account of ill health he removed to Granby, Mass., and began farming, which occupation he followed as long as his physical powers permitted. He suffered from deafness for many years, which increased with age. In June, 1886, his wife died, and during the remainder of his life he made his home with his youngest son (A. W. Fiske). Francis Fisk, son of Asa and Susanna (Partridge) Fisk, was born in Holliston, Mass., Feb. 26, 1807. At an early age he left the paternal farm, deciding, as he used to say, that "if the earth would let him alone he would never scratch her face any more." He went to Boston, and after many discouragements, found employment in the retail grocery business. He gradually rose until he became proprietor of the business, but at about the age of 35 he lost the sight of one eye, after an unsuccessful operation for cataract. The sight of the other gradually failing he was obliged to retire from business. In 1857 he removed to Charlestown, Mass., where he spent the remainder of his days. He married for his first wife, Mercy C. Cooper. Of this union no descendants survive. He married second, Anna Amy Aldrich, youngest daughter of Lyman and Anna (Bennett) Aldrich, of Northbridge, Mass. Of the five children by this marriage, all but two died young. The survivors are Lyman Beecher Fisk, of Cambridge, Mass., and Emma Augusta (Fisk) Green, of Westmoreland, N. H. Though a great sufferer from his eyes for more than half of his life, he bore it all with heroic fortitude until he passed away, beloved by his family and relatives, honored and respected by all who knew him. He entered Harvard College in 1869, and was graduated in 1873, with the degree A. B. cum laude. With the intention of finally entering the medical profession, he gave a few years to teaching, but while holding the position of principal of the high school at Keene, N. H., in 1876, his health failed so completely that he was obliged to resign, and for a number of years was unfitted to engage in active business of any kind. In 1882 he received from the corporation of Harvard University, an appointment as auditor of the Harvard Dining Association, and still holds (Dec. 1895) that position.

Mansfield, Mass., June 26, 1839, Chloe Catherine Stone, b. Feb. 20, 1817, Norton, Mass., d. Sept. 17, 1893. Their golden wedding was celebrated in Wilbraham, in June, 1889. Rev. Franklin Fisk, son of Moses Fisk and Sibella Jennison, was born in Framingham, Mass. He is next to the youngest of eight children, six brothers and two sisters, all of whom lived to be more than 64 years old. He was educated in the public schools of Natick, Mass., and at the Wesleyan Academy, Wilbraham, Mass., which he attended in 1832-3-4. During the years 1832-6 he taught several terms of school in various parts of Massachusetts, with great success. In 1836 he joined the New England Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, taking appointments in almost all parts of Massachusetts, and some in Connecticut, continuing in the active ministry for more than thirty years. He married Chloe Catharine Stone, who was a student with him at Wilbraham. To them were born eight children, four sons and four daughters, five of whom are still living. In 1867 he suffered a stroke of paralysis, which compelled him to leave the active work of the ministry. He settled at Wilbraham and became one of the well known residents. His beloved wife was taken from him by heart failure in 1893, after a happy union of fifty-four years. He has since resided with his children, under the shadows of Northwestern and Denver Universities, and Bates College. "Father" Fisk has been a famous character in connection with New England Methodism. Genial and social in temperament, keenly interested in all the affairs of the church, remarkably energetic in attendance upon camp meetings and religious assemblies far and near, he is very widely known and universally beloved. He and his wife were teachers. All his surviving children and all their wives and husbands have been teachers. The best known are Prof. Herbert F. Fisk, D. D., of Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., and Everett O. Fisk, A. M., a prominent layman of Boston. Res. Auburndale, Mass.

and was graduated in 1877, receiving the degree of A. B. In the fall of 1877 he went to Harvard Medical School, and was graduated, receiving the degree of M. D. in 1880. He received, in the spring of 1880, an appointment, as house officer, to the Massachusetts General Hospital, in Boston, but was obliged to forego his appointment in consequence of having contracted an acute pulmonary tuberculosis, which sent him to Colorado in the fall of that year. From that time until the spring of 1883, he knocked about Colorado in search of health, living a part of the time at Poncha Springs, on the very frontier, and practicing medicine in a desultory manner. In May, 1883, he located in Denver, and was stricken down in the fall of the same year with a severe attack of rheumatic fever, accompanied with diabetes insipidus, from the effects of which latter trouble he has since suffered continuously. In the spring of 1884 he was elected to a chair in the medical department of the University of Denver, and has occupied in succession the chairs of anatomy, nervous diseases, and the practice of medicine, in that university, which latter chair, as professor of the practice of medicine, he still holds. In 1884 he was made secretary of the faculty, and held that position until the spring of 1895, when they elected him dean. In June, 1884, his alma mater, Yale, gave him the degree of Master of Arts. In June, 1887, he joined the American Climatological Association; in 1888 he was elected president of the Colorado State Medical Society; in 1890 he was elected a member of the Association of American Physicians, and in 1894 a member of the American Public Health Association. He is also a member of the American Academy of Medicine, and belongs to the local medical societies. He was one of the founders of the Colorado State Meteorological Society, and he has interested himself to a considerable extent in the State Weather Bureau, and meteorological matters within the State. He is attending physician to the County and St. Luke's hospitals, and was on the staff of the Deaconesses' Home, in Denver, during its existence. He has published articles in the Popular Science Monthly, science and medical journals, bearing upon the climate of Colorado, with reference, especially, to its influence in pulmonary diseases, and has written on medical topics, principally typhoid fever, in medical journals. He belongs to the Chamber of Commerce, in Denver, and several clubs. He has been president of the Colorado Yale Alumni Association, and endeavors to interest himself in local matters. He is also the vice-president of the Alumni Association of the Harvard Medical School.

4145. REV. OLIVER J. FISKE (Isaac, Moses, Isaac, John, Nathaniel, Nathan, Nathaniel, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 24, 1809; m. Cumberland, R. I., May 26, 1839, Louisa Brown, of Lime Rock, b. Cumberland, R. I., Mar. 11, 1816. Oliver Johnson Fiske was born in the city of Nashville, Tenn., on the 24th day of January, 1809, and died in Crawfordsville, Ind., Jan. 8, 1886. He was the son of Isaac and Elizabeth (Johnson) Fiske, both of whom were from New England. Soon after the birth of Oliver they returned to Massachusetts and lived upon a farm in the town of Framingham in that State. The subject of our sketch was the second of five brothers. The common school education which he received in that village only gave him a keener appetite for acquiring a more extensive knowledge. To go away to attend school was out of the question, as his parents were poor. He determined, however, to overcome all obstacles and not allow the prize which he so much desired to slip away from him. Acting under the advice of some friend he arranged a course of study. Every moment when not at work on the farm he was mastering Latin and Greek. While his companions were at play he was at study, and oftentimes sitting up until after midnight pursuing the course he had marked out. During this time there was a revival of religion at the Baptist Church at Framingham. He attended the meetings and was converted. Soon after he became impressed with the desire to preach the gospel. At last a way was opened for him to attend school at South Reading, Mass., after which he went to the theological school at Newton, remaining there one year. He made up his mind that he would obtain a full collegiate education and entered Brown University in the junior class and graduated in the class of 1837. In 1838 he was duly ordained at the Baptist Church at Lime Rock, Smithfield, R. I., and became pastor of that church. His labors here were successful; many were added to the church and the older members were revived, and when he resigned his pastorate the church was in a strong, healthy condition. He accepted a position as principal of a young ladies' seminary at Stewart's Creek, County of Rutherford, Tenn. In 1839, before leaving Lime Rock, he married Miss Maria Louisa Brown, of Cumberland, R. I. She was a great help to him in his work as a teacher. Here he remained for about two years, and owing to the unhealthfulness of the place where the seminary was situated he was obliged to give up his school, and he accepted a situation to become principal of a boys' school in Robertson County, Tenn. So successful was he here as a teacher that he had many flattering inducements to go elsewhere to teach in different parts of the south. He accepted an offer to become principal of an academy at Nashville, Tenn. Here he prepared young men for college. He received many letters from the members of faculties and presidents of colleges complimenting him on the thorough manner in which his students were prepared to enter on their college course. In 1850 he was called to the presidency of Enon College, at Gallatin, Tenn., which position he accepted. Being connected with this institution brought him in touch with the denomination he so much loved. Almost every Sabbath he preached, sometimes going several hundred miles to preach at associations and large churches. Many of his sermons were printed in the Tennessee Baptist and other religious papers. In 1855, on account of his wife's health and desirous of bringing up his family in a free State, he removed to Bloomington, Ill., where for twenty years he was engaged in pastoral work and holding evangelistic meetings.

He did not keep a record of the number of persons converted under his preaching, but it would amount to hundreds. When completely worn out by hard work and failing health he went to live with his son Charles H. Fiske, at Crawfordsville, Ind. His last illness was a brief one, but it found him cheerful and bright and in a hope full of immortality. It was the peaceful end of a man whose whole life had been one of self-sacrificing devotion to the promotion of the interests of education and religion. Mr. Fiske had three children, Edwin B. Fiske, of Rochester, N. Y., lawyer; Oliver Edgar Fiske, who died of typhoid fever when 17 years of age, and Charles H. Fiske, who resides now in the city of Indianapolis, Ind. His wife is still living, though in feeble health. He d. Jan. 8, 1886; res. Nashville, Tenn., and Crawfordsville, Ind.

At the age of 21 he went to Waltham and engaged in business, when he was appointed deputy sheriff under Sheriff Hildreth, serving under both sheriffs, Keys and Kimball, and at the death of the latter, being senior deputy, he became acting sheriff. At the end of the year he was elected sheriff for three years, and his term would have expired the first of Jan., 1884. At the time of his succession to the office of high sheriff he had served as deputy thirty consecutive years. Mr. Fiske was always popular, running ahead of his ticket at elections. The members of the bar recognized in him a man who was eminently qualified for his office. He was often chosen moderator of the town meetings in Waltham, for a long time acted as coroner, had been justice of the peace, deputy collector of internal revenue, and assistant internal revenue assessor. He was a member of the board of water commissioners for Waltham one term of three years and declined re-election. Fiskburg, Ky., Aug. 31, 1843; m. at Lexington, Oct. 23, 1866, Margaret A. Emal, b. Feb. 3, 1848. Charles H. Fisk was born Aug. 31, 1843, at Fiskburg, Kenton County, Ky.; moved to Covington, Ky., in Oct., 1848; son of Hon. John F. and Elizabeth S. Fisk. His father was Lieutenant-Governor of Kentucky, and a strong union man during the War of the Rebellion. Chas. H. attended the public schools and graduated from the high school in 1858, but pursued his studies thereafter in that school in special classes; entered Miami University in Feb., 1860; graduated 1863. While in the university he was very popular with the great majority of the students, faculty and residents of Oxford. He became a member of Kappa Chapter of D. K. E. shortly after he entered college and was an ardent and devoted member of that fraternity. He was for a time the presiding officer in that chapter. He entered Miami Union Literary Society during his freshman year and became thoroughly identified with all the interests of that body. He was ambitious and successful in all of his efforts, and received at the hands of his fellow students and of the faculty more honors than were ever allotted to any other student at the university. He was chosen junior orator by his class; represented his college on celebration of Washington's birthday; was elected president of the Miami Union Literary Society in the last half of the junior year; chosen to deliver the address at the winter exhibition of Miami Union Literary Society in the first half of his senior year; was given the first honor in his class and delivered the valedictory on July 2, 1863. He was noted as the best foot ball kicker ever in the university. He was much inclined to mischief and in consequence was often in consultation with the faculty at the Friday afternoon meetings. After his graduation at Miami. Mr. Fisk entered the law office of his father and began seriously the study of the law. The father's partner died about six weeks later and Mr. Fisk began at once to assist his father in all matters. He attended the Cincinnati Law School and graduated therefrom with credit in the spring of 1864. He received his law license a few months before reaching his majority, but could not enter upon active practice until the fall of 1864. He practiced with his father till Feb., 1865, when he formed a partnership with Hon. John M. Scott and went to Lexington, Ky., to practice before the military courts and commissions. He was there during the remainder of 1865, in which brief period he defended thirty-three persons accused of murder with success and ability. In 1866 he returned to Covington and resumed the practice there with his father with whom he formed a partnership on Jan. 1, 1868, and the firm of John F. & Chas. H. Fisk has since continued. The senior, however, retired from active business in the spring of 1890. Mr. Fisk is an avowed Republican, but has not taken to political life as a business. He has devoted himself with untiring energy to the profession of his choice, and has been eminently successful. His clients have ever been among the best citizens and corporations in his vicinity. While in Lexington he became acquainted with the woman of his choice, and on Oct. 23, 1866, he was united in marriage to Miss Maggie Emmal, of that city. Three children have blessed this union, but the eldest child, a bright boy, was called hence in Jan., 1881, at the age of 13 years and 4 months. The second son, Otis H., graduated with honor from Yale University in 1892, and has been in Germany pursuing his studies since that time. He will remain there for a four years' course. The third child is Miss Elizabeth S., her grandmother's namesake, now (1894) in her 10th year. The subject of this sketch has been highly honored by the Masonic fraternity with which he has been intimately identified since 1877. He has been Grand Master of the Grand Lodge, Grand T. I. Master of the Grand Council, Grand High Priest of the Grand Chapter and Grand Commander of the Grand Commandery of Kentucky. He is a member of the Christian Church and prominent in all matters connected therewith. For about twenty-four years he has been superintendent of the Sunday school. In 1884 Mr. Fisk delivered a Masonic address on St. John's day in the college campus by invitation of the Masons of Oxford and vicinity. In 1890 he delivered the address to the alumni of Miami. He has filled two terms as president of the Miami University Association; res. 1017 Russell Ave., Covington, Ky.

5753. i. EMMAL, b. Sept. 3, 1867; d. Jan. 14, 1881. Emmal Fisk, the elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. H. Fisk, was a bright boy and perhaps the best known and most popular boy of his age ever in that city. He was unusually strong and active for his years, but was called away from his family and friends by that terrible disease peritonitis at the age of 13 years and 4 months. The esteem in which he was held was shown by the fact that his funeral was attended by the largest number of people ever present at the funeral of any young person in the city.
5754. ii. OTIS HARRISON, b. Mar. 5, 1870. He attended the public schools in Covington for some years, then spent two years in the school of Prof. Babbitt in Cincinnati, and thereafter was with Professor Wyckoff at Walnut Hills, where he was prepared for Yale College, in which he entered the freshman class in 1888. At the end of that year he accompanied his father on an extended trip to the old country, and visited points of interest in England, Scotland, France and Germany, and very thoroughly explored Belgium, Italy and Ireland. He graduated with "honor" in the class of 1892 at Yale. In the fall of that year he went to Germany for the purpose of studying law in the universities there and of becoming proficient in the German language, of which he had at all times been a student. He entered at Leipsic where he spent one year. The next semester was passed at Berlin. He then went to Heidelberg, where he expected to remain one year. While there, however, he conceived the idea of surprising his parents by taking, as he says, a degree for his father. He remained six months longer than he intended, and on Aug. 2, 1895, received at the hands of the celebrated university at Heidelberg the degree of "Doctor of Philosophy," "magnum cum laude." The essay submitted by him prior to his oral examination met with great favor, and two of the professors, Jellineck and Meyer, perhaps the most celebrated in their departments in Europe, who are issuing a series of Philosophical Works as part of the Heidelberg University Library series, have asked permission, which, of course, was granted, to publish the essay of Dr. Fisk as a portion of the first volume of said series. The laurel wreath with which he was crowned, and the "Dr's hat" from his "cake," he sent to his sister, by his father, who visited him last summer for the second time. He has returned to Leipsic, where he expects to receive the degree of Dr. de jura in 1896. He has traveled extensively on the continent during his vacations. He speaks and writes the German like a native. He proposes to practice law upon his return to his native land, but has not yet determined upon his location. He has just returned (1896) to Heidelberg for further degree.

4251. JUDGE ROBERT BROWN FISK (John F., David, Ebenezer, Ebenezer, Ebenezer, David, David, David, Jeffrey, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Covington, Ky., Mar. 2, 1852; m. at Logansport, Ind., Oct. 30, 1883. Julia Comly (Green) Ross, b. June 16, 1852. Robert Brown Fisk, son of John Flavell and Elizabeth Sarah Fisk, was born at Covington, Kenton County, Ky., on March 2, 1852, at the brick building, still standing, on the southeast corner of Scott Street, and the alley between Fifth and Sixth Streets. He was the fourth of seven children, there being a boy and two girls on each side of Robert. He attended the public schools in his native town, ultimately graduating from the high school there, after taking the first three years of a collegiate course, at the high school, under the able tutorship of Prof. John Wortham Hall, whose father, Dr. J. W. Hall, was for many years president of Miami University at Oxford, Ohio. At the high school he met Miss Julia Comly Green, sister-in-law of Professor Hall, who, subsequently, became Robert's wife, their engagement having been broken off, and, when Miss Green became a widow, renewed and their marriage resulting. Graduating with honors from this school, Robert immediately applied himself to the study of law, in the office of his father and brother, constituting the firm of J. F. & C. H. Fisk, in Covington. Robert was admitted to the practice of the law when not quite 20 years of age, and for several years continued in the office where he had studied, but never became a member of the firm. In 1880 he associated with himself Mr. William D. Brent, at that time a clerk in the office of J. F. & C. H. Fisk, and under the style of Fisk & Brent these two opened an office as attorneys, in the old Greer block, on Lower Market and Scott Street, Covington, Ky. Mr. Brent having been appointed city clerk to fill a vacancy, the partnership of Fisk & Brent was dissolved and Mr. Fisk after practicing in Covington for a time by himself, finally, in 1884, left his native city and located at Pierre in the then territory of Dakota, but now the capital of South Dakota. While living at Pierre, in 1885, Mr. Fisk was appointed by Hon. Gilbert A. Pierce, then Governor of the territory, as supervisor of the census taken of the territory in that year. The territory was divided, in this work, by an imaginary line, running about on the present line between North and South Dakota, Mr. Fisk having the supervision of the southern portion. This was a larger territory than ever before or since supervised by one person, it requiring a force of about four hundred enumerators to do the actual canvassing for returns, there being about 263,000 people in the district Mr. Fisk, however, was possessed of ambition to do well and an almost inexhaustible ability for work. He completed his work, returned his schedules, and for the first (and perhaps the only) time these returns were recognized and paid for by the National Government, in the proportion provided by law. The total expenses of the census for Mr. Fisk's district were about \$27,000, and every cent of it was properly accounted for. While acting as supervisor of this census, Mr. Fisk was a witness before the sub-committee of the Senatorial Committee, appointed to inquire into the condition of the settlers on the Crow Creek Indian reservation, opened to settlement by proclamation of President Arthur, at about the close of his term of office, and "closed," by proclamation of President Cleveland, shortly after his ascension to the Presidency. Mr. Fisk's testimony, before this committee, coupled with a very full exposition of the matter, tabulated, by Mr. Fisk, from his census schedules, had much to do with the subsequent action of Congress in recognizing the rights of these settlers and the congressional relief afforded them. This sub-committee was composed of Benjamin Harrison, of Indiana, John J. Ingalls of Kansas and Senator Jones of Arkansas. Just before leaving Covington, and just after going to Pierre, Mr. Fisk compiled, for the city of Covington, the statute laws of Kentucky, the ordinances of the city, and the decisions of the Court of Appeals of Kentucky, touching questions of importance to cities, a work which has received very high commendation from the bar of Kentucky. In 1884 Mr. Fisk made homestead filing on the S. W. $\frac{1}{4}$ of Section 6, Township 117, Range 75, in Potter County (now), South Dakota, and moved to that place. In 1890 he moved his residence to Gettysburg, the county seat of Potter County, where he had opened a law office in 1886, and where he still resides, engaged in the practice of law. In 1892 Mr. Fisk was secretary of the Volunteer World's Fair Commission of South Dakota, having been a delegate, sent by the Business Men's Association of Gettysburg, to the convention, at which that commission was formed. This commission afterward gave way to that appointed by the Governor of the State, with which Mr. Fisk was not connected. His wife is the great-granddaughter of Samuel Meredith, the first treasurer of the United States and a warm personal friend of Washington. Her father, Richard Green, was a native of Huddersfield, Yorkshire, England. He married Margaret Meredith, at Wilkes Barre, Pa., and was for many years a leading merchant of Dayton, Ohio, from which place he moved to near Logansport, Ind., where he died. Mrs. Fisk's mother is still living at the advanced age of 88 years, in the full possession of all her faculties, and having the appearance of a woman of not over 60. Mrs. Fisk is a woman of queenly form and face, a lady of rare accomplishments and noted for her domestic virtues. Mr. Fisk is counted a good lawyer and is ranked among the most eloquent and forcible speakers of South Dakota. He is a Republican in politics, a member of the Christian Church, and is now the County Judge of Potter County. His home is a model of combined southern and western hospitality; his married life has been unusually felicitous and happy; res. Gettysburg, So. Dak.

Y., Marie Antoinette Wolcott, b. May 8, 1844. He was born in Essex county, N. Y., in 1836, son of a lumberman, and his early years gave him a practical training in all that pertained to the life of a lumberman. When still young, being possessed of a desire to seek his fortune with the great throng then hurrying west, shortly after the discovery of gold in California, he crossed the plains long before a locomotive whistle was there heard, and then it was at the risk of one's life that such a venture was made. He arrived at Salt Lake City shortly after the famous Mountain Meadow massacre, and, as it soon became manifest to him that a man who did not intend to become a Mormon, and did not want to adopt polygamy, had little chance of success there, he hastened on to Nevada. Eleven years of the most eventful character were spent afterward, prospecting on the mountains of Nevada, Colorado, California, Idaho and Montana. At the outbreak of the Civil War, he joined a company of Rangers in Nevada, and they, starting east for the scene of hostilities, were recalled by the Governor to suppress an uprising in that State, and thereafter the Rangers were retained in Virginia City for the protection of property from Indians and outlaws. After the close of the war, Mr. Fisk returned east and decided to settle and enter into the lumber business in New York State. A few years of the quiet monotony of business life again brought on a desire for the rush and activity of the west, and he returned to Montana where he spent ten years in the lumber business and in railroad contracting. During this period he was one of the constructors of a branch of the Union Pacific Railroad, and he also built an hundred miles of the Northern Pacific Railroad. On the completion of the latter road, while on a visit east, circumstances brought him to Berkshire, and being pleased with the people and surroundings, he decided to retire from active business and enjoy the quiet of his present home, "Brookside," in Cheshire, which had been the home of his ancestors since the settlement of the Hoosac Valley. Mr. Fisk's education has been for the most part practical, having entered his father's mills after a few years' study in the public schools, though he later studied a year at Dickinson Academy, in Pennsylvania. Nevertheless the lessons taught him in the rough school of experience have served him best, and have made him one of those free, easy men of the western stamp who see the broad side of life, and overlook the petty differences so prevalent in the east. As a business man he has had experience enough to qualify him for most any position, and, coupled with this knowledge, has a keen insight of men and affairs that especially fits him as a legislator. With his home in the heart of a farming community, he is especially interested in all that concerns the farmer, and will no doubt prove of valuable service at the next session of the Legislature in the consideration of tuberculosis and bounty to farmers for cows killed. His large experience covers most any point on which he is liable to be sounded, and his residence here, coupled with his interest in his district, all make him the man for the place. There can be no doubt but Mr. Fisk will make us a most efficient and servicable Representative. He is not a politician, though he has always identified himself with the Republican party; res. Cheshire, Mass.

4420. DR. ANSEL JASON FISK (Lyman J., Eber, Nathaniel, Benjamin, Benjamin, John, John, Phineas, Thomas, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. June 16, 1829; m. Feb. 10, 1850, in Tioga, Pa., Jane E. Spencer. Ansel J. Fisk, M. D., son of Lyman and Betsey Fisk, was born at Schroon, Essex county, N. Y. At the age of 16 he came with his father to Tioga, Pa., where they engaged actively in lumbering, the young man attending to the financial part of the business, and keeping all the books and accounts. His school days were limited, his literary training meager, but he learned to be methodical in affairs, which was best evidenced in his career as a physician. Moved to Bellenart, Canada, in 1854, and by close attention to the manufacture of lumber, he soon acquired a fine competence. Returning to Tioga, in 1861, he purchased large tracts of forest land, and building mills, continued the lumbering business for some years. In 1873 he commenced the study of medicine with Dr. R. B. Smith, of Tioga, Pa. He attended his first course of lectures at Bellevue and graduated at Detroit Medical College, in 1876. He immediately entered upon practice at Farmington, Pa., and continued actively engaged in the duties of the profession until his health became so impaired that he could no longer labor in his chosen field. His boyhood days were spent amidst the scenes of the Great North woods, and the mountain ranges of the Adirondacks, where he became familiar with gun and rod and in mature years he ever enjoyed the recreation of hunting and fishing. Mr. Fisk was a born doctor and had a natural tendency toward medicine and surgery. At his lumber works in Canada, situated a long drive from a physician, he provided himself with a case of medicines and surgical instruments, and prescribed for his workmen, sewed up their cuts and dressed their injuries with excellent success. He had an intuitive faculty of diagnosis, and a quick perception at the bedside of fitting his medicine to the case in hand. Optimistic, of a hopeful temperament, cheerful and cheery in nature, he inspired his patients with confidence. Fertile in resources and of unlimited courage he never relaxed his efforts to save his patient. He was heroic in treatment and gave the maximum dose. The writer remembers prescribing 15 grains of potassium bromide, when Dr. Fisk, who was present, quietly remarked: "You are shooting bear with bird shot, give him 60," and Fisk was right. There was not a particle of jealousy in his nature, professional or otherwise. He was never known to utter a word in disparagement of a fellow physician, or to criticise the treatment of a case. He believed that there was room for all, and that the best interests of the profession could be attained by working in harmony. He soon after graduating became a member of this society and attended the meetings while his health permitted. In politics he was a Republican. After a painful illness of three years, during which time he made the same gallant fight for his own life, which he had always made for his patients, he died of Bright's disease on the 56th anniversary of his birth. Nov. 15, 1871; m. Frank L. Nerman, Oct. 26, 1890; add. Alva, Wood County, Oklahoma. In 1856 Isadore went to Iowa with her parents; and at the age of 15 was employed as a teacher. In the following May she was married to George Rogers. When she was 18 her first story was published, none but her closest friends surmising her literary aspirations. This story was accepted by none other than Datus E. Coon, afterward Minister to Cuba. She signed herself "Eugenia." In 1884 her husband's health became so poor that they concluded to settle up their affairs in Belmont and go to southern Kansas, hoping the climate would be beneficial. But he grew weaker and weaker, until he passed away, a few months later. Soon after her husband's death, her children were prostrated with malarial fever. There was no voice to soothe, no heart to sympathize. It was late in January before health was restored, and to use her own expression: "To retrieve my broken fortunes, I resolved to take a claim, and make a home for my children." She heard of a piece of land out thirty-five miles from Harper, that had once been taken, and then abandoned, by a Missourian. According to the law, a piece of land must be entered, then lived upon, and improved six months, before Uncle Sam would receive payment. She went by wagon to Wichita, a distance of ninety-five miles, in the dead of winter, and presented her claim under the pre-emption law. She sent out lumber for a shanty to be built, and followed in February with the children. The winter was bleak, desolate, and forbidding—with snow and freezing winds. Home-sickness and despondency weighed crushingly upon her; and the loneliness at Harper seemed to pale beside the utter loneliness here in this shanty. When night spread her pall over them, there was no sound save the moaning dirge of the wind and the howling of the hungry coyotes for company. Unexpectedly the Missourian's son returned and illegally filed upon the land. The father had plowed eighteen furrows, and had boarded up a shanty without door, floor or window. This was done to keep others away, but the fraud was so apparent, he had not dared to return, since actual settlers had come, and must discover his trickery. The Carlisle Cattle Company owned land adjoining, and these men took advantage of the prejudice against the company, to circulate a report to the effect that Mrs. Rogers was proving up land in their favor. This made her much trouble. There were six men against one woman, and when she made final proof, they contested her right. She secured a prominent lawyer from Wichita, and fought them. After four months' delay, decision was made in her favor by the registrar and receiver. The Missourians appealed, and after six months, the case went against her, the land commissioner deciding that she was in intrigue with the Cattle Company. It was now that she realized the truth of an assertion of Brick Pomeroy's, in a private letter to her: "If we work from principle, we must not expect—

To be carried through this world
On flowery beds of ease;
But we must ever limp along,
As though we walked on peas."

The matter was taken to Washington, D. C., and L. Q. C. Lamar, the Secretary of the Interior, decided in her favor after many months of delay. She sold her land for $1,400, and went to Colorado with her elder son, who was suffering with consumption. The time came when she had to lay her sons, side by side, in a beautiful valley, with only the towering mountains to guard their resting place. She was married to Mr. Notestine in Hardy, Ia., an early settler, a member of the M. E. Church, and an influential citizen of Humboldt County. He was a soldier in the War of the Rebellion, and it was exactly thirty years from the time he was taken captive, and placed in Libby Prison, that he was again taken captive—this time by a woman. As Mrs. Notestine sits in her comfortable home, and looks back over the past, she sees a golden thread, reaching through the warp of her life, which has kept its place midst the rougher woof, forming beautiful figures in life's tapestry—and this thread is her literary aspirations. She has had many flattering words from editors, but none she values more than those which came from T. S. Arthur, for whom she has written more than for all others: "Your articles sound womanly." Her years have been more or less overcast with clouds, but as she nears the afternoon of life, her skies appear very auspicious. May the morrow be a fair day for her.

MAJOR GEORGE AUGUSTUS FISK.

George Augustus Fisk was the third son of Daniel Fisk, born in Springfield, O., Aug. 5, 1831; he moved with his parents to Sparta, Wis., in the spring of 1852; was married to Catherine Eliza Walrath, Jan. 1, 1857. George Augustus Fisk was an affectionate husband and father, a true friend, and sometimes forgiving his foes; a Democrat of the old school, not like the present time; brave as a lion, always ready to help those in distress. At the breaking out of the war all the slumbering heroism of his ancestors broke out in him. He used to say: "I am going to help whip the rebels." "I want to see fair play." In 1861 he raised a company of volunteers, and was appointed Captain of Company D, Eighteenth Wisconsin Regiment; was taken prisoner at the battle of Shiloh, Apr. 6; was a prisoner of war eight months, suffering everything but death. After his release he rejoined his regiment; was with it until after the surrender of Vicksburg, then his health failed, and he was sent home to die. He was honorably discharged. After a severe illness of three months he recovered. Nothing daunted he raised another company, which was joined to the Thirty-sixth Regiment, Wisconsin Volunteers, Company C; was appointed Captain; was in all the battles, including the battles of Cold Harbor, Hatcher's Run, with the regiment. The following letter from Brigadier-General T. W. Egan is submitted:

"Headquarters Second Division, Second Army Corps, Nov. 1, 1865.

Excellency: At this first opportunity since the recent reconnoissance in force, I address you in approval of the performance of the Thirty-sixth Wisconsin Volunteers, during that movement; they being commanded through it all by Captain George A. Fisk. As your excellency knows, this regiment came here new. They were rushed into the breach untried, in a campaign which has been fiercer and more bloody than Napoleon's. The Thirty-sixth made its debut in a battle, of which the London Times says that England could not levy or lose one-tenth of number placed hors de combat. It was a contest of veteran Americans, and the comparison with them of inexperienced Americans is most unequal. On reaching the field the Thirty-sixth took up their positions as firmly and steadily as the oldest. In all operations in mass, they were undistinguishable for compactness and celerity, from the best, but soon they were given an opportunity for individual action. After several charges and countercharges, in which the advantage remained with us, I determined to take the enemy's position across Hatcher's Run. The order to charge had just been given, when the enemy opened heavily upon my right and rear, and advanced upon my main line in heavy masses. His forces enclosed three sides, and with worse troops, the situation would have been menacing. To crown all, a heavy body of rebels was thrown upon my rear (the fourth side), and occupied the Boydton road, making a complete surround. A swift face by the rear rank, and wheeling charge by the New Jersey bridge, cleared my right flank, but from the threatening body in my rear, it remained with the Thirty-sixth Wisconsin to relieve me. Captain Fisk threw them into line, and dashed at the enemy. It was a short fight; that rebel brigade was instantaneously crumbled and destroyed, being mostly captured, with arms, colors and officers, to a total number three times greater than the Thirty-sixth. Having cleared my rear, the regiment returned to its place in line, and behaved equally well until it returned to camp. If Napoleon's regiment faltered once, so did they conquer themselves and take place with his bravest, and so in this more bitter contest, if the Thirty-sixth had anything to redeem, do I now depend upon them with my veterans

I am your excellency's obedient servant,
 "T. W. Eagan, Brigadier-General Commanding Division."

He was commissioned as Major of the Thirty-sixth Regiment, Mar. 7, 1865. At the end of the war was offered a position in the United States Army as an officer, but instead came home, and in the fall of 1866 was elected Sheriff of Monroe county.

"Death of Major Fisk.—Still another of the old residents of Sparta has joined the silent majority. Major Geo. A. Fisk, who for two years past has been confined to his house, from a complication of ailments, breathed his last Friday morning, Aug. 13, 1886, at his residence in this city. Capt. Fisk was one of the very earliest residents of this vicinity, removing here with his father's family, in the spring of 1822. He was born in Springfield, O., Aug. 5, 1831, his age at death therefore being 56 years and nine days. His early residence in Sparta was marked by the usual incidents and vicissitudes of the Spartans in those days of the infant city, and he witnessed its growth from a hamlet in the wilderness, up to a thriving village. He had an active, courageous spirit, and at the breaking out of the war, was one of the first to spring to the front in his country's defense. He raised a company of volunteers, and was appointed Captain of Company D, Eighteenth Regiment, in 1861. He was captured by the enemy at Shiloh, Apr. 6, 1862, and was released Oct. 14, 1862. In 1864 he raised another company, which was joined to the Thirty-sixth Wisconsin Regiment as Company C, and of which he was appointed the Captain. This regiment was assigned to the First Brigade, Second Division, of the Second Army Corps, with which it served till the close of the war, seeing the severe service of the advance on Petersburg, and the siege of that place, from June 14, to Aug. 12, when it was removed down the James River, afterwards returning and participating in the fight at Reams' Station, on the 25th. Capt. Fisk took command of the regiment about this time. The Thirty-sixth and Capt. Fisk won especial praise for gallantry at the battle of Hatcher's Run, Oct. 27, where the Thirty-sixth was formed in line of battle, with the Second and Third Brigades on the right, and the Third Division in the rear. At 3 o'clock the enemy, in heavy force, charged the Third Division, causing it to break, thus cutting off all communication with the rear. Seeing the perilous condition, Captain Fisk ordered the regiment to face by the rear rank, fix bayonets and charge, which was handsomely executed, striking the rebels on the flank, doubling up their line, causing them to break and run, and capturing a large number of prisoners, with one stand of colors. In this engagement the casualties of the regiment were fifteen wounded and no missing. Brigadier-General Egan, commanding the Second Division, in his official report, speaks of the regiment in the highest terms, saying that "it captured a larger number of prisoners than it had men engaged," and refers especially to the gallant conduct and cool daring of Captain Fisk, commanding the regiment. Captain received an appointment as Major, Mar. 7, 1865. The regiment was mustered out July 12, 1865, and was disbanded at Madison on the 24th. Major Fisk served one term as Sheriff of the county, in 1866-68, subsequently engaging in selling farm machinery, in which he continued as long as his health permitted. His wife, Catherine E. Walrath, to whom he was married in 1857, survives him. The funeral took place Sunday afternoon from his residence, the Masonic fraternity conducting the obsequies, and John W. Lynn Post, G. A. R. and Spartan Lodge K. of P., of which he was also a member, escorting the remains. The interment took place in Woodlawn Cemetery." He d. Aug. 13, 1886; res. Sparta, Wis.

5878. iv. DANIEL AUGUSTUS, b. July 27, 1874. He is a student in Beloit College, and will graduate in June, 1897, an M. D. Daniel A. Fisk is a young man of quiet character. He completed the modern classical course in the Sparta High School, with the class of 1893. As a student he was patient and painstaking. Beneath his modest demeanor could be seen marks of strong character. He had a hearty admiration for the heroes of history, and took for the subject of his graduating oration, "The Men Who Never Die." At present Daniel is making a clean and creditable record in Beloit College.

4606. REV. RICHMOND FISK, D. D. (Richmond, Jeremiah, Job, Benjamin, John, John, Phinehas, Thomas, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Bennington, Vt., Feb. 23, 1836; m. at Newark, N. Y., May 8, 1861, Adelaide Bartle, b. May 30, 1840. Richmond Fisk, Jr., was born at Bennington Centre, Vt. Was fitted for college at Ball Seminary, Hoosick Falls, N. Y. Entered Williams College in 1854, spending two years there, and then two years at Union College, where he graduated in 1858. During three winters of his college course he taught school. On graduating he entered the law office of Hon. Stephen L. Magoun, of Hudson, N. Y., and had not a little experience in collecting rents on large estates of which Mr. Magoun was agent or administrator. Though a good and interested student of the law, his aptitude as developed by his favorite college studies of philosophy turned his mind more to the ministry than to the law as a calling. He entered the study of Rev. A. D. Mayo, then pastor of the Unitarian Church, Albany, N. Y., in 1859, and was ordained in 1861 as minister of the Universalist Church in Newark, Wayne County, N. Y. Was married to Adelaide Bartle, daughter of Col. James P. Bartle, of Newark, N. Y. Dr. Fisk has had settlements in Newark, N. Y., three years; Lockport, N. Y., three years, where he resigned, intending to accept a call to the professorship of Biblical languages in the Theological School of St. Lawrence University, Canton, N. Y., but was induced to take a pastorate at Auburn, N. Y., a large and important church, from which place, however, after three years, he was called to the presidency of the College of Science and Letters of St. Lawrence University. Here four years were spent in fostering the financial and educational interests of the college, his time divided between the duties of the professor's chair of mental and moral philosophy and the field seeking money and students. After nearly four years he accepted a call to Grand Rapids, and thence in three years to Sycamore, N. Y., where for ten years, from 1874 to 1884, he engaged, in connection with his church cares, in the charities of the city. He was instrumental in founding the Bureau of Labor and Charities of that city, and was its general secretary for seven years. He also established in connection with the bureau branches of the societies for the prevention of cruelty to children and to animals; also the Red Cross Society, of Miss Clara Barton, by which latter society thousands of dollars in clothing and money were sent to the flood sufferers of the South. He was also secretary of the Civil Service Society of Syracuse. He was obliged by over work to give up his manifold work in Syracuse, and, in 1884, accepted a call to Watertown, N. Y., where for eight years his ministry was prospered as in all his previous settlements, while for seven years of the time he was president of the Watertown Bureau of Charities, which he had aided in organizing while he was general secretary of the Syracuse Bureau. While located in Watertown, N. Y., he was appointed by Gov. Flower a trustee of the Asylum for Feeble Minded Women, at Newark, N. Y. He was one of the founders of the Jefferson County, N. Y., Historical Society, and its secretary for six years. In 1892 Dr. Fisk accepted a call to the Church of Our Father (Unitarian), of Boston (East), a large church and Sunday school, where his reputation as a charity worker preceding him has brought him actively in the great field of Boston charity work. He is vice-president of the Unitarian Sunday School Society, and of the East Boston Charity Organization Society, founder of the Starr King Unitarian Club, and is a member of the University Club of Boston. He has written much for the daily press in the cities where he has lived and contributed often to the magazines and papers of his church. He visited Europe in 1887, and spent three months with his daughter on the Continent and in England and Scotland and Ireland. He received the degree of D. D. from Taft's College in 1871. Dr. Fisk is a Mason, and is now prelate of William Parkman Com-mandery, of Boston; res. 251 Lexington St., East Boston, Mass.

Among the sons of the Green Mountain State who are residing there may be mentioned our esteemed townsman, Russell Fisk. Mr. Fisk came to Colorado twenty-three years ago, in May, 1870. For many years he resided at Livermore, where he conducted a hotel and a large general store, and was at the same time engaged in the stock business. Mr. Fisk is 67 years of age, having been born Mar. 22, 1827, at Shaftsbury, Vt. He was married at West Townsend, in that State, May 30, 1865, to Martha C. Ranney. Mr. Fisk is a veteran of the war of the Rebellion, and saw nearly four years of active service in the Vermont Brigade, Second Division, Sixth Army Corps. He is a member of the G. A. R. He always has been a most ardent and consistent Republican, and has always taken an active part in promoting the welfare of his party. Of late years Mr. Fisk has been engaged in the commission business on Jefferson Street in Fort Collins. He is a successful business man, and enjoys a wide reputation as a successful man in whatever enterprise he may undertake: res. Fort Collins, Colo.

Ames, b. Dec. 25, 1842; d. June 21, 1886; m. 2d, at Hoosick Falls, N. Y., Dec. 28, 1887, Katherine Lois Moody, b. Aug. 28, 1862. George Warren Fisk was born in Bennington, Vt., May 30, 1838. His early boyhood was uneventful, being spent on a farm; moved with his parents to Hoosick Falls, Rensselaer County, N. Y., in 1848. He attended school there at Ball Seminary until his 17th year; taught in district schools the five following winters. It was said of him that he was a good teacher; was married Jan. 23, 1861, to Lucy Elizabeth Ames, daughter of Lorenzo Ames, of Hudson, Mich. In May, 1861, he enlisted for three years, under Franklin M. Crossett, in the Band of the Second Regiment, Vermont Volunteers; was present at the first Bull Run battle, July 21, 1861, as well as at several other engagements of less note; discharged from service with the band Dec. 19, 1861; worked a number of years as pattern maker with "The Walter A. Wood Mowing & Reaping Machine Co.," of Hoosick Falls, N. Y. In the spring of 1870 he joined the famous Union Colony of Colorado, as one of the original members, which founded the city of Greeley, Colo. He was called home that summer because of an almost fatal accident to his wife; resumed work as a pattern maker. In the spring of 1876 returned to Greeley, Colo., which has been his home since, and the place where his reputation as an artistic violin maker has been earned. His work in this line has received the unstinted commendation of such celebrated violinists as August Wilhelmj, Edouard Remenyi, George Lehmann, Ferdinand Stark, and many others of note, who unhesitatingly tell him that he has no living superior in the world, as a maker of fine violins, and very few equals. Edouard Remenyi, the great violin virtuoso, says in the Denver Daily Tribune, Aug. 31, 1883. * * * * "Among the thousand of 'fiddle makers' in Europe and America, Mr. Geo. W. Fisk, of Greeley, Colo., is one out of only four real violin makers that I have found in my travels over the world. His workmanship is well nigh perfect. * * * The violin he made for me is a beauty, and has a grand, mellow, magnificent tone. Mr. Fisk will back up all I have stated of him." Mr. Fisk was married the second time, Dec. 28, 1887, to Katherine Lois Moody, daughter of Dr. Nathan J. Moody, of Madison, Wis. One child, Eugene Moody Fisk, was born to them Aug. 10, 1891; res. 4639. HON. WILLIAM JUSTAN FISK (Joel S., Solomon, Ichabod E., Ebenezer, Ebenezer, John, John, Phinehas, Thomas, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Brunswick, O., June 25, 1833; m. at Fond du Lac, Wis., Jan. 8, 1855, Mary J. Driggs, b. Dec. 6, 1834. The boyhood days of the subject of this memoir were passed in the manner of other boys. Attended such schools as the community afforded until he was 14 years of age, and from that time on through life he has earned his own living. His first work was performed in the land office in Green Bay in 1848, and while thus engaged he made the maps for the reservation of lands for the improvement of the Fox and Wisconsin Rivers. While an employe of the land office John Fitzgerald urged him to save his money and invest his savings in land. So thoroughly did Mr. Fitzgerald impress the matter upon his mind that the principle of economy was thoroughly ingrafted into him. Out of his first savings he purchased 120 acres of land, and thus became a property owner before he was 16. In 1849 he became an employe of a jeweler and watchmaker; the following year he obtained a position as clerk with a Fort Howard merchant at a salary of twenty-five dollars per month. At the end of two years, having saved some money and being desirous of improving his education, he attended the institute at Appleton, Wis., paying from his savings for his tuition and board. At the age of 20 years he returned to Fort Howard and at once began trading in the products brought into the town. Early in his boyhood days he had displayed his self-reliance, and his father encouraged him in the direction in which he had started by leaving him to his own resources. During his first year he entered into a contract with Chancy Lamb, of Clinton, Ia., to furnish him 400,000 shingles, at two dollars and a half a thousand. Mr. Lamb took a deep interest in the young man and encouraged him a great deal. He paid him in advance $1,000 in cash for the shingles; and Mr. Fisk now says that that was the largest amount of money he had ever seen at one time, and made him feel wealthier than he has ever felt since. In the fall of 1853 Mr. Fisk entered the mercantile business in Fort Howard, and in 1855 erected a shingle mill, being the second man to manufacture sawed shingles in the west. His business was prosperous and he was successful in outside trading, and felt that he was on the high road to permanent prosperity when the panic of 1857 paralyzed the industries of the country and badly crippled Mr. Fisk's financial operations, although he remained perfectly solvent. Among his possessions were 2,000,000 shingles; but there was no market for them. He therefore suggested to E. A. Goodrich, now the controlling spirit of the Goodrich Transportation Company, to carry them to Chicago, where they should await a sale. This was done, but it required two years' time before the shingles were finally sold. In 1862 Mr. Fisk sold out his mercantile establishment, and in that year canvassed the county in the interest of voting bonds for the construction of a railroad. Being well known throughout the county he assisted most materially in having the necessary aid voted. Some of his experiences were interesting and humorous. Few persons, indeed, knew what a railroad was, and some of their ideas, drawn entirely from imagination, displayed dense ignorance. One man said he would favor it if it were only a canal; others thought the company would get the money and not build the road; others, that the road would not be used after it was built; another man, from "York State," who owned forty acres of land, had seen railroads and knew all about them, said that if the company would run across the corner of his land and give him a side-track and buy all the wood it needed of him he would vote in favor of the bonds! After the bonds were voted Mr. Fisk took a contract to furnish the timber and ties used in constructing the road between Appleton and Fort Howard, and also for building the railroad company's docks and elevator. Since then he has been operating continually with the Northwestern Railroad, furnishing a large amount of timber and ties for the use of the various divisions of that road. In 1871 he furnished the material for the construction of the road to Marinette, and in the following year did the same for the extension from Menominee to Escanaba. After his elder sons had grown to manhood he admitted them into the business, and now the firm is known as W. D. Fisk & Co., composed of himself and W. D. and Harry W. Fisk, two of his sons. For nearly thirty years Mr. Fisk has been connected with the banking interests of Green Bay. In 1865 he became a stockholder and director in the First National Bank, of Green Bay; in 1870 he became president of the City National Bank, and in 1874, when that institution was succeeded by the Kellogg National Bank, he became vice-president of the last named institution. In 1891 Mr. Kellogg died, and Mr. Fisk was induced to accept the presidency, and this position he now occupies. As a financier he enjoys a high reputation, and as a conservative, far-seeing banker he enjoys the confidence of all classes in the community. He has been engaged in a great number of enterprises during his business life in Green Bay, all of which have been benefited by his business ability. Before the advent of the railroads, communication with the outside world was carried on by boats in summer and by stages in winter. One company was known as the Green Bay & Menominee Navigation Company, and he was largely interested in this corporation, acting as its superintendent during its existence. Mr. Fisk owned large tracts of timber lands, and at the time of the Peshtigo fire in 1871, some 10,000 acres of valuable timber belonging to him were devoured by the flames; and he also lost heavily in the Chicago fire at the same time. This was a severe blow to him, but, undiscouraged, he went manfully to work and soon retrieved his fortunes. Politically Mr. Fisk is of Democratic antecedents, but is now strongly Republican. In 1860 he voted for Abraham Lincoln, and ever since then he has been a firm believer in the doctrines of Republicanism. In the early years of his business life he was Alderman of the city, and at one time filled the position of City Treasurer; and from 1862 to 1865 he was also Postmaster. In 1875 he was elected a member of the State Legislature, and was re-elected in 1876 and 1877. He was active, in a quiet way, in opposition to the "Granger" legislation against railroads, and was chairman of the committee on railroads when the famous Potter railroad law was repealed. He has never sought political positions, and has no desire for honors of that kind. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, being now a Knight Templar. Mr. Fisk's career illustrates forcibly the power of steady application and grit. Very early in life he displayed a degree of self-reliance and business ability which alone would assure success to any boy. He has overcome all obstacles and earned for himself the title of "self-made" man in the fullest sense of that often misused term. He has led an honorable, straightforward life, aiding all feasible enterprises that would materially benefit the cities of Green Bay and Fort Howard, and giving from his store to religious and charitable institutions. He is a member of no church, but believes in the power of religion for good, and the Young Men's Christian Association has found in him a warm friend and a generous patron. His career should serve as an inspiration to the younger and convince them that steady application, energetic grit and honest and upright conduct are the principles on which true success is founded. Personally Mr. Fisk is courteous and a pleasant, social companion. All his acts show him to be a retiring, unostentatious gentleman, and he commands the honor and respect of the entire community; res. Green Bay, Wis.

4641. DR. MALANCTON HOGEBOOM FISK (Joel S., Solomon, Ichabod E., Ebenezer, Ebenezer, John, John, Phineas, Thomas, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. May 28, 1843, in De Pere, Wis.; m. there, Oct. 19, 1868, Mary J. Lawton, b. Apr. 15, 1844. The name Lawton was originally spelled Layton. One John Layton, who was born in 1630, in 1652 went with some twenty-seven others, mostly from Connecticut and other portions of New England colonies, settled in Newtown, Long Island, N. Y., and purchased farms direct from the Indian owners, although also purchasing titles from the government of New Netherlands, of which Peter Stuyvesant was then governor; and it is worthy of record that this purchase from the Indians was the only one of that kind made, excepting a similar transaction effected by William Penn, in Pennsylvania. During John Layton's residence in New Netherlands, that colony fell into the hands of the Duke of York, and on account of the active and prominent part he took against Governor Stuyvesant, Layton made many enemies among the Dutch colonists. Consequently he moved with his family to Suffield, Conn., where he died Sept., 1690, and was buried in the Presbyterian graveyard by the side of his wife, Benedicta. Their gravestones are still (1894) extant, and the name inscribed thereon is plainly "Lawton," so that the change of the spelling of the name presumably must have taken place some time in the latter part of the seventeenth century. John Layton married, Sept. 21, 1659, Johanna Williams, by whom he had one daughter, Mary. He married, 2d, at Portsmouth, R. He is a Mason of the 3d degree; is now nominated as the first Worshipful Master of the Wauwatosa Lodge, now making application for a charter. Politically he has held no office, though like his father, Joel S. Fisk, he is a pronounced Democrat. He has been a resident of Mil. County for eight years and now serves on the consulting staff of the Mil. County Hospital, the County Hospital for Insane, and is president of the board of visiting physicians for the Chronic Insane Asylum; res. Wauwatosa, Wis.

From there he went to New York City in 1873, where he has been ever since. His first five years' business experience was in the heavy hardware and ship chandlery line. For about a year and a half he went back to Chazy, then went into the roasted coffee business with the firm of Arbuckle Bros., of New York. For the last eight years he has been connected with and interested in the business of the Knapp Company, 52 to 58 Park Place, formerly Major & Knapp, lithographers, where he is still located. As to his success in life he has been fairly fortunate, having been blessed with a large portion of the good things of this life, social, financial, religious, and has a happy and comfortable home; res. 80 Rodney St., Brooklyn, N. 4647. DR. WILLIAM M. L. FISKE (Almond D., Solomon, Ichabod E., Ebenezer, Ebenezer, John, John, Phinehas, Thomas, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. May 10, 1841, in New York City; m. in Rochester, Oct. 11, 1865, Julia Pancost Sage, b. June 14, 1845. There are many men whose professional ability is considerable; and with that their usefulness and interest to other people end. While, as a surgeon, Dr. Wm. M. L. Fiske stands among the few leading homeopathic physicians of New York which he lives. For more than twenty-five years Dr. Fiske has been in active practice in Brooklyn, N. Y., and in that time he has been president of the New York State Homeopathic Medical Society and the Kings County Homeopathic Medical Society. He was one of the founders and organizers of the Brooklyn Homeopathic Hospital and the Brooklyn (E. D.) Homeopathic Dispensary, and he is ex-medical director of the former and consulting surgeon and trustee of the latter, and consulting surgeon to the Memorial Hospital, besides being connected with a large number of benevolent institutions of the city.

Dr. Fiske was born in New York City in 1841. His father was Almond D. Fiske, a well known inventor and manufacturer. He was a member of an old New England family, and through him Dr. Fiske is a direct descendant of Phineas Fiske, who came to America in one of the first four ships that brought the New England colonists, and settled Wenham, Mass. His ancestor, Symond Fiske, was Lord of the Manor of Shadhaugh, Suffolk, up to the time of the Wars of the Roses. Edward, second son of Dr. John, son of Phineas Fiske, the direct ancestor of Dr. Fiske, lived at the old homestead at Wenham, and died there in 1748. It is a fact worth notice that the first four graduates of Yale were descended from this Dr. John Fiske. His grandson and Dr. W. M. L. Fiske's great-grandfather, Ichabod Ebenezer Fiske, graduated from Yale in 1770, and became a preacher and scholar of some note. Dr. Fiske's mother was Phoebe Ann Raymond, daughter of Harvey Raymond, who moved to New York from Albany in 1830.

Dr. Fiske prepared for college at Champlain Academy, New York, and graduated from the Bellevue Medical College in 1863. Owing to a promise that he would investigate homeopathy, he afterward attended the New York Homeopathic Medical College, and thus he twice received the degree of M. D. He has also received the degree from the New York Board of Regents, which was until recently conferred annually upon one prominent member of the State Medical Society.

Soon after the war Dr. Fiske undertook the practice of medicine at Aurora, Ill., and later at Rochester, N. Y. He entered into partnership in 1870 with his old preceptor, Dr. Albert Wright, and after the latter's death continued the increasing practice. Dr. Fiske is the author of a number of monographs on Surgery, published in the "Transactions of the State and County Medical Societies." He has given much attention to the study of heredity, not only in diseases but in mental traits, and his semi-annual address as president of the State Society, in which he advocated the enforced celibacy of confirmed criminals, aroused marked attention and keen discussion. It is to be regretted that his medical practice prevents more active advocacy of his advanced ideas on this important subject.

Dr. Fiske is a Republican and a member of the Union League, Crescent, West Hampton Country, Lake Champlain Yacht, Hanover and New Manhattan Clubs.

In 1865 he married Miss Julia P. Sage, of Rochester. Of his three sons, two are graduates of Columbia and the second is about to become the fifth of the family to represent his generation in the profession of medicine. In spite of his incessant work Dr. Fiske knows how to thoroughly enjoy the comforts of life, and his hospitable home is filled with objects of art that he has collected. His only vacation this summer was a flying trip to Europe to attend a patient there.

In 1862 he enlisted in Company A, of the Forty-seventh Regiment New York State Militia, as a private soldier. After a month's service in the ranks he was appointed by General MORRIS as steward in the convalescent hospital, at Fort McHenry, and a few weeks later was promoted to acting assistant post surgeon, in charge of the post hospital, and served in that capacity until the expiration of the regiment's service; he then returned to Brooklyn, continued his studies at Bellevue Medical College, and was graduated in 1863. After a few months in private practice he again entered the service as acting assistant surgeon and remained until the close of the war. Res. 484 Bedford Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Early removing to Brooklyn, he followed his studies at the Polytechnic Institute of that city and entered Columbia College in 1886. He graduated from the latter institution in 1890. During his course he was active in the general work of the college, ranking high in his studies throughout all four years, receiving several honors, including the scholarship in Greek. He was president of the Barnard Literary Society, the leading organization of its kind in the university, and an editor of the Columbiad, the junior publication, besides holding several offices in his class. He was a leading member of the D. K. E. fraternity and, when graduated, became a member of I. B. K. After graduation he traveled in Europe for further study and recreation, and on his return in 1891 entered the banking and commission house of J. M. Throughout his course he received many honors because of high scholarship, notably in winning the prize in physics. He was president of the Barnard Literary Society, an editor of the Columbiad, held several positions of class distinction, and on graduation was made a member of I. B. K. He was also prominently connected with the D. K. E. fraternity. In 1892 he entered the New York Homeopathic Medical College, graduating in 1895, securing at that time the faculty prize for leading scholarship of his class during his three years' course and the alumni prize for the foremost student of the senior year. He was also valedictorian, the commencement orator and senior president of his class. Among class organizations he was prominent in the A. E. and Hahnemann societies. He also served in the New York (Chambers Street) and Lying-in Hospitals and Brooklyn Homeopathic Dispensary, and has taken the post-graduate course at the New York Ophthalmic College and Hospital. He is associated with his father in the practice of medicine in Brooklyn, and is a member of the American Institute of Homopathy and various city, county and state medical societies.

Aug. 31, 1840, of Augusta, N. Y. His early education was received in the district schools. He was thoroughly grounded in the principles of agriculture by his father who cultivated vast farms. To complete John's education a short time was spent at Cazenovia Seminary, which plan the father did not approve, as he believed all knowledge could be gained by observation and practice, and as he wanted his son to be a farmer, time at school was thrown away. At the age of 21 John married. One of the numerous farms was settled upon John at his marriage. The old Ford house on the Ford farm became the home of John and his lovely wife. After the father's death in Mar., 1866, John came into possession of the old Fiske homestead where he now resides and the Blair farm. John has been a very successful farmer; he has expended vast sums of money in his buildings. He rebuilt the old house, tore down the old barns and built a very large modern barn instead, with accommodations for fifty head of cattle as well as eight horses. Two large hop kilns were built with accommodation for curing fifty thousand pounds of hops. John has made a thorough study of the cultivation of small fruits. One year he marketed one hundred bushels of strawberries. He has also gone into grape culture. He has a fine vineyard containing over seven hundred vines. This present year he will market three thousand pounds of grapes. He has a fine cherry and pear orchard started. The subject of our sketch is an active member of the Congregational Church. He is a member of the Grangers' Lodge, of the Equitable Aid Union and of the Free Mason's Lodge. He is regarded by all who know him well a model of strict integrity; res. Lebanon, N. Y.

She graduated from Albany Jan. 23, 1885, with honors. She was chosen one of the essayists at the final exercises in one of the literary societies. President Cleveland conferred the diplomas at the commencement exercises which were held in the ——— Opera House. Since her graduations she has been actively engaged in the profession of teaching. She has taught in the intermediate department at the Fairport Union School, in the intermediate department of the Skaneateles Union School, at the Flushing High School, and at the present has charge of the first year work in the high school in the town of Union, N. J., which position she has held for six years. Miss Fiske is a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church. She has taught in Sunday school for the past six years, has been a member of the Altar Society, church guild, Parish Aid Society, and young people's society. Miss Fiske is also interested in a working girls' club of which she is president. She was one of the followers of Miss Grace Dodge in the movement and one of the organizers of the club in the town of Union. The said club is now five years old. It has a membership of fifty girls between the ages of 12 and 30. It is an acknowledged fact that the club has done a vast amount of good. The subject of this sketch is also interested in a boys' club, whose object is the same as the girls, i. e., the greatest possible development of character. She helped organize the club and directed the drawing up of the by-laws. She is also a member of an association whose aim is to found a home for old people. She is interested in all legitimate sports with the exception of riding a "wheel," which she does not approve for ladies.

COL. JAMES FISKE, JR.

8th St., South Boston, Mass. He was born near Battleboro, Vt.; was well educated; fitted for college, and it was his father's wish that he should enter "Williams," but all his tastes were for business, and after traveling with his father a year he went to Jordan & Marsh (Mr. Jordan being a friend of his father's) as a clerk. The second year he did so well and had so many original ideas that he was taken into the firm as an equal partner. Later he went to New York City, and for a time was the leading financier in that city, being largely interested with Jay Gould in the Erie Railway, until he was murdered by Stokes in 1872.

A person who knew him intimately writes as follows: "He never drank. On the contrary, he was elegant in manner, gentle and courtly, and had the most generous, unselfish heart of any person I ever knew. He was very fond of dress and display, but never of the vulgar sort; he had no low tastes and (like his father) was always temperate. I have often heard him say: 'Well, you may drink the wine if it pleases you, but give me my little cup of tea.' He was very fond of tea, and when he had any great 'deal' (as he was wont to call it) on the tapis, he would drink quantities of tea. He was the man who planned a great deal of the business for himself and Jay Gould when they were together. Mr. Gould was delicate and small while Mr. Fisk was the perfection of manly health and beauty. I have often heard him tell Mr. Gould to 'jump over in the sugar bowl and take a nap and let me do the hard work.' Every one who knew him loved him; he had the happiest, sweetest, and most unsuspecting disposition God ever gave to any living man. The day he was murdered by Stokes a friend went to him and said, 'Fisk, you will gain your suit today (he had a suit against Stokes for $60,000, money he had loaned him), but do I pray you look out for Stokes for he is a bad one.' Fisk replied: 'Oh! no, you are mistaken; he would no more harm me than I would him.' After Fisk's death his father was ill for a year; in fact insane, made so by the shock of his death. He (his father) was walking up Broadway and heard the news from boys crying it in the street. He fell unconscious and remained so twenty-four hours. He never saw his dearly loved boy again; he recovered his mind but his health never." He d. s. p. Jan. 7, 1872; res. New York, N. Y.

4740. WILLIAM HENRY FISKE (William H., Haley, Squire, John, Josiah, Samuel, William, William, John, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. New Brunswick, N. J., May 13, 1845; m. there Mar. 5, 1865, Mary Elizabeth Houghton, b. Mar. 5, 1843. W. H. Fisk, Jr., was educated in private and public schools in New Brunswick, N. J., and after clerking in New York for half a dozen years returned home and took a position in a wholesale liquor house as bookkeeper and head salesman. In 1884 he became reporter and afterward assistant editor of the Times, the leading Democratic paper in Middlesex County, N. J., and for a year or more—while Mr. A. E. Gordon, the proprietor, was United States Marshal, and afterward when he had a paralytic stroke—wrote all the editorials and did all the local work besides, sometimes working twenty hours a day and seldom less than fourteen. On one occasion he went sixty hours with only a couple of hours' sleep, and covered a report of a trip to Trenton and Bucks County, Pennsylvania, and an excursion of a local order to Keyport, getting up the editorials and most of the local matter besides. Singularly the work seemed to do him good, as he felt no fatigue and did not miss the loss of sleep. On one occasion, in 1887, he reported the proceedings of the State convention of the Knights of Pythias, there being over nine hundred delegates present and wrote the matter out in full while doing so in order to gain time to do other work. On his return home he found the report had been lost, but, nothing daunted, sat down and rewrote the matter while it was fresh in his memory. He was highly congratulated by many of the Knights who knew of the loss of the papers. In 1889 he started the first and only Sunday paper in New Brunswick or the county, or rather purchased the plant after it had run six months and was about to be discontinued. He ran this paper until the summer of 1895, when he stopped its publication, owing to a variety of causes, principally of a political nature. It was an independent paper but with Democratic tendencies; res. New Brunswick, N. J.

- 5981. iii. CHARLES, b. Mar. 16, 1868. He was born in New Brunswick, N. J., and received his preliminary education in the public schools, graduating in 1884, with high honors from the high school. While in the latter school he did some newspaper work on The Times, and continued it for some time as city editor, until he went to study law in the office of Arnoux, Ritch & Woodford, in New York City. He was also in Judge Cowenhoven's office. The study of law did not suit him and he returned to his first love and became city editor on the Home News. In 1889 he entered St. Stephen's College at Annandale, N. Y., taking a special course with the idea of entering the Episcopal ministry, and during the three years' course took all the first prizes and was congratulated publicly by one of the most eminent preachers in the country. In 1893 he entered the General Theological Seminary in New York City, and took the prize for an essay, two hundred college students competing. He also gained a scholarship but did not accept it, and has stood at the head of all the classes he has entered. During the second and third years of his course he acted as lay reader, and by special permission wrote his own sermons and had charge of a church in Rahway, N. J., in 1895. This he gave up in the fall and took charge of a Sunday school in New York City in the morning and another in Brooklyn, N. Y. He graduate in June, 1896, and his friends predict a brilliant future for him. His law and newspaper work has been of great benefit to him in his new sphere. He is a ready writer and a good speaker, is very affable in manners and makes friends easily.

Old Rutgers College has sent but few of her sons to the metropolis, but the proportion of those who have mapped out their life work and attained success there is very large in comparison with that of other colleges. Haley Fiske's rise in reputation and prosperity has been a continuous one since the day of his graduation at Rutgers in 1871. He was born in New Brunswick, N. J., Mar. 18, 1852. His parents, Wm. H. and Sarah H. Fiske, were born in Yonkers and New York City respectively, and settled for a time in New Brunswick, where Mr. Fiske was prepared for college in the school of Henry Waters, afterward well known as the Poughkeepsie school master. While in college Mr. Fiske was a member of the Philoclean Literary Society and the fraternity of Delta Phi. After leaving college he tried journalism for a year or two and then studied law with the firm of Arnoux, Ritch & Woodford, in which firm he subsequently became a partner. He remained such until his election as vice-president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, in Oct., 1891. He had previously for many years had special charge of the legal business of that corporation. During his career as a lawyer he was engaged in many notable cases, the last of which, just before his retirement, being the Fayerweather Will contest. He was largely concerned in the settlement of the probate contest, culminating in the deed of gift by which so many colleges throughout the country were benefited. In the present suits over this settlement, in which five colleges appear as plaintiffs, Mr. Fiske represents Yale University and Rutgers College, defending the will and the settlement. Mr. Fiske is a director in and counsel for the Duluth Manufacturing Company, the Iron Car Equipment Company, treasurer of the church of St. Mary the Virgin, in West 45th Street, now become a wealthy corporation, and is vice-president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. This company stood second among the great companies in the successful pursuit of business during the last fiscal year, and is now housed in its new building at 23d Street and Madison Avenue, a model of simplicity and elegance, built at a cost of nearly $2,000,000 by Napoleon Le Brun, the architect. He is a member of the Players', Grolier, Church and Delta Phi clubs and of the Bar Association. In politics he is allied to the Democratic party. It would be difficult to find in the whole range of the New York College Alumni Associations a more genial, delightful companion of equal ability. He is endowed by nature with those traits that make leaders among men; res. 1 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Susquehanna Co., Pa., Jan. 2, 1853; m. at Morrison, Ill., Mar. 1, 1880, Stella A. Martindale, b. Sept. 24, 1858. Calvin R. Fisk, M. D., son of Joseph W. and Rhoda E. (Strickland) Fisk, was born in Springville Township, Susquehanna Co., Pa. He is the fourth son of a family of twelve children. His eldest brother died in early infancy. There are still living six brothers and one sister of this large family, two sisters and three brothers with the parents having passed on to that unknown life, of which we hear so much and know so little. At about the close of the Civil War, in 1865, his parents moved from Pennsylvania to Illinois and located on a farm in Whiteside Co. Here the young doctor had the benefit of a country school in the winter and worked on the farm in the summer. In some mysterious manner he managed to get education enough so that he passed an examination and obtained a teacher's certificate and began teaching school in 1875. The following summer he visited his old home in Pennsylvania, and went on to Philadelphia to the Centennial Exposition, where he remained about two weeks. From there he went to Washington and visited the White House. Returning from Washington to Sterling, Ill., he attended the teachers' normal school and received his degree in the form of a first grade certificate for teaching school in Illinois, which vocation he followed for a short time. In the spring of 1878 he went west and spent a part of two years in Kansas and Nebraska. He was united in marriage to Stella A. Martindale in Morrison, Whiteside Co., Ill., soon after locating in Iowa. In 1882 he moved to Keokuk, Ia., and attended lectures at the College of Physicians and Surgeons and received the degree of M. D. on Feb. 26, 1884. Politically he has always voted with the reform movement on national questions, casting his first presidential vote for Peter Cooper. He was selected as a delegate-at-large to the National Convention held in

Dr. Fisk has five brothers and one sister living, viz.: Wilmot Fisk, Morrison, Ill.; Melvin Fisk, Curlew, Ia.; W. E. Fisk, Lily, S. D.; Theron S. Fisk, Fairmont, Minn.; Alfred L. Oct. 20, 1886, Ida M. Myers, b. Jan. 21, 1869, Sterling, Ill. Was born in Whiteside Co., Ill., in a car-roofed shanty. His parents were poor, and at the age of 11 years he commenced to earn his own livelihood by working out at farm work until he arrived at the age of 17, attending the common school winters. At the age of 17 he entered Northern Illinois College and Griffith's School of Oratory at Fulton, Ill., and at the end of the first year succeeded in procuring a teacher's certificate and thereafter taught school during the winters and attended college during vacations, also reading law as occasion permitted, until the spring of 1885, when he entered the law offices of Woodruff & Andrews, at Morrison, Ill., and read law until the following spring, at which time he went to Larimore, N. Dak., and continued the study of law in the office of Wm. H. Fellows, a former college classmate, and in the fall of 1886 was admitted to practice, and has been in active practice ever since. In 1889 he removed to Grand Forks and entered into partnership with Tracy R. Bangs, under the firm name of Bangs & Fisk, and their law business has been steadily increasing until their practice is now one of the largest in the State. Two years ago he was appointed as a member of a commission to revise, codify and compile the laws of this State into seven codes. The work has recently been completed and is considered a credit to the young State of North Dakota. He has served in several offices, among which is Assistant United States Attorney for the district of North Dakota, and Assistant State's Attorney; also City Attorney of Larimore, Grand Forks and East Grand Forks. He voted for Cleveland in 1884, and has been a Democrat ever since, but Democrats are scarce in this community. He ran for member of the Legislature last fall and was beaten by both the Republicans and Pops; res. Grand Forks, N. Dak.

5156. WILLIAM WARREN FISKE (Warren C., Stephen, Hezekiah, Asa, David, John, John, Nathaniel, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond),

b. Marlboro, Conn., June 6, 1857; m. Charlton, Mass., Nov. 25, 1880, Lida R. Seymour, b. Mar. 26, 1856. William was born in Marlboro, Conn., June 26, 1857, the youngest of four children. His father was a Congregational minister, and his mother daughter of a Congregational minister. He was therefore carefully reared and instructed in the Bible and catechism, and was peculiarly sensitive to and receptive of religious impressions. Failing health led his father six years later to a farm in East Haddam, Conn., where William was taught at home by his mother. For reading the Bible through in course when eight years old he was given his first Bible by his mother. The following year he united with the Congregational Church in Colchester, Conn., whither the family moved to educate the children at Bacon Academy. In 1869 he went to Wolcott, Conn., for three years, going to school winters and working on a farm summers. In 1872 the family removed to Charlton, Mass., when he went to Wilbraham to prepare at Wesleyan Academy to enter the senior class of the scientific course in Williston Seminary, Easthampton, Mass., graduating second in the class June 16, 1875. His first venture in business life was rewarded with fine success as general agent for New England of a firm in Bogota, South America. He represented the same firm at the Centennial in Philadelphia, 1876, and there first met the young lady from Ohio, who subsequently became his wife. Visiting Baltimore in 1877, he became acquainted with Mr. Henry W. Eastman, an inventor and a resident of Baltimore. With him he entered into partnership for the general introduction throughout the country of Eastman's Alterable Church Registers, a convenient directory of church services for hotels and public buildings. On Nov. 25, 1880, at Charlton, Mass., he married Miss Lida Robertson Seymour, of Oberlin, Ohio. Their first settlement and experience in housekeeping was in Cleveland, Ohio, during the summer of 1881. Finding the location unsuited to the best interests of the national character of the firm's business, Mr. Fiske decided, after visiting Washington, Baltimore, New York and Philadelphia to locate permanently in Philadelphia, which he did in Jan., 1882. The following May his first child, a son, was born who died the following November and was laid to rest in the family lot in Southington, Conn., on Thanksgiving day. In 1883 he bought out the interest of Mr. Eastman, of Baltimore, in the firm of Eastman & Fiske and continued the business and manufacture of hotel church directories under his own name as publisher. Mr. and Mrs. Fiske on making their home in Philadelphia at once identified themselves with the Northminster Presbyterian Church, of which Mr. Fiske was chosen a ruling elder in 1887, and has held this office for the past nine years; res. 3319 Hamilton St., Philadelphia, Pa.

McDermott, under the firm name of McDermott & Fisk; has been a member of the Board of Riparian Commissioners of New Jersey since 1890; a member of the Seventh Regiment, New York, since 1874, and has held in that organization commissions as a Second Lieutenant, First Lieutenant, Adjutant and Captain, which rank is now held, being in command of Company "D;" is a member of the New York Society Sons of the Revolution. He married Ida C. Earle, of Jersey City; had two children; res. 243 Washington St., Jersey City, N. J.

6124. ii. HARRISON OTIS, b. Dec. 6, 1886; d. Sept. 21, 1895. He met his death by drowning at Manasquan, N. J. The party which included Mrs. Willard Fiske and two sons set out for the beach late in the afternoon to enjoy their daily bath. The bathing grounds are near the Manasquan Inlet, and the tides create a current that at times is exceedingly dangerous. After disrobing at the bath houses the party walked down to the surf, and Mrs. Fisk and her two sons, Harrison Otis and Clinton, entered the water. The others of the party came in a few minutes later. All were bathing, as they thought, at a safe distance from the beach, and all went well, when a cry was heard for help. It was noticed that Harrison had ventured out beyond his depth and was struggling in the water. The little fellow's cries seemed to create a panic among the bathers. The elder son, Clinton, rushed to his brother's rescue, and it seemed that he, too, had gone beyond his depth and was in danger. At this instant all the ladies in the party seemed to realize the danger to the boys and all appeared to rush headlong into the foamy billows. In the excitement there were noticed two or three heavy cross seas racing up and down and a whirl in the foam that told the startled onlookers that the party was in the midst of a deadly whirlpool. Mrs. Fisk was seen floundering about in the water, and the young women made an attempt to reach her, but they were engulfed in the swiftly flowing tide and drowned. Some strollers on the beach made an effort to rescue the drowning women, but they only succeeded in bringing Mrs. Fisk to shore. She was unconscious, and was resuscitated with difficulty. The bodies of the other two women were recovered, but young Fisk's body was carried out to sea.

5184. HARRISON GREY FISKE (Lyman E., William H., Hezekiah, Asa, David, John, John, Nathaniel, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. New York City, July 30, 1861; m. Mar. 19, 1890, Minnie Maddern. Mrs. Fiske began to star at 15. If ever the American stage had a veritable enfant de la balle in its history that child was Minnie Maddern. Born of professional parents—for her mother, Lizzie Maddern, was an actress, and her father, Tom Davies, the pioneer circuit manager of the west—she was literally cradled in the theater, reared in the glare of the footlights, inoculated from her birth with the atmosphere of the theater and a mistress of the secrets of the playhouse even while her baby tongue could not yet distinctly speak her native language. By parentage she is English. Her maternal grandmother was a girl of good family, who, while still in her teens, eloped with her music master, a proceeding frowned upon by the family, who at once cast her off. Being very much enamored of her music lover, this did not trouble her at all, and the young people proceeded to be happy on nothing a year and to raise a large family. When the children were seven they thought of America as more roomy than England for a family that increased so rapidly, and they emigrated. All the children were musical, so the father formed a concert company, in which each of the youngsters played some instrument, and Lizzie Maddern (afterward the mother of Mimie), in a high comb

and queer pantalettes, at the age of 12, was the first cornet of the strolling band. It is a tradition in the family that Lizzie Maddern at that age could score the music for the orchestra, and did it. The Maddern family produced quite a number of respectable actors and actresses, while Tom Davies, who married Lizzie Maddern, is well remembered by those posted on theatrical affairs. He was a small, red-haired man of a temper as violent as his mind was erratic, and his escapades and his eccentricities were in his time the topic of many a strolling tale. Minnie Maddern inherited her father's red hair and something of his temperament. She began her professional career at the age of 3. At the age of 14 she had drifted into comic opera. At the age of 15 she became the star of a lurid melodrama. At the time the writer first saw her she was a slight girl, with the daintiest of hands and feet, and as sweet a voice as ever spoke across the footlights. She was a creature of suggestions, an unearthly sort of a girl, with her tousled red hair, her white face, her thin, nervous lips and her deep gray eyes. But she was only a girl, more remarkable for what she might become than for what she was. Her youth, her red hair, her dainty, girlish figure had suggested to a manager that here might be another mintmaker—another Lotta. Now, the antipodes are not wider apart than Minnie Maddern and Lotta, but the mistake was made and she was started wrong in her career. In her undeveloped mind were only dim ideas of her future, and so she drifted on the way that others marked out for her, doing the work allotted for her, indifferently going from one trifling play to another, perhaps dimly conscious of the mistake that had been made, possibly as dimly conscious that time alone would remedy the blunder. A brief review of Mrs. Fiske's more important associations will interest even the casual friend of the stage. She played the round of child's parts with Barry Sullivan, and later with Lucille Western. She was the original Little Fritz in J. K. Emmet's first productions at Wallack's and Niblo's; she appeared with Laura Keane in "Hunted Down" during the New York run of that play; she appeared as Prince Arthur in the notable revival of "King John" at Booth's Theater, with John McCullough, J. B. Booth and Agnes Booth; as Paul in "The Octoroon;" as Franko in "Guy Mannering," with Mrs. Waller; Sibyl in "A Wolf in Sheep's Clothing," with Charlotte le Clerq; Little Mary Morgan in "Ten Nights in a Barroom," with Yankee Locke; the child in "Across the Continent," with Oliver Dowd Byron; the child's parts with E. L. Davenport;

Minnie Maddern Fiske

Heinrich and Meenie in "Rip Van Winkle;" Adrienne in Daly's "Monsieur Alphonse," the boy's part in "The Bosom Friend;" Georgie in "Frou-Frou," with Mrs. Scott Siddons; Hilda in Emmet's "Karl and Hilda;" Ralph Rackstraw in Hooley's Juvenile Pinafore Company, and Clip in "A Messenger from Jarvis Section." At 10 years of age she acted the Sun God in David Bidwell's production of "The Ice Witch," and she also appeared in "Aladdin," "The White Fawn," and other spectacular pieces. Mrs. Fiske is a woman of intensely active intellectuality and her five years of comparative seclusion have been fruitful in more ways than one.

Harrison Grey Fiske, the editor and proprietor of The Mirror, was born in Harrison, Westchester County, N. Y. He attended private schools in New York, studied music and the languages for several years, acquired a knowledge of elocution and rhetoric from the late George Vandenhoff, when abroad, was prepared for college by a tutor, and finally entered the New York University. His tastes were essentially literary and artistic, and during his stay at college he wrote many sketches and short stories for the newspapers, and sent New York letters regularly to several southern and western dailies. He held his first staff position on the Jersey City Argus, writing editorials and dramatic criticisms. In July, 1879, he became attached to The Mirror, as a special contributor, and in the fall of the same year bought an interest in the stock company that then owned it. The following winter Mr. Fiske was selected by the company to take editorial charge. He was 18 years of age at the time, the youngest editor in the country. In spite of his youth he conceived and adopted a sagacious, independent and vigorous policy which speedily put The Mirror in the van of stage journals, bringing it influence, prosperity and the largest circulation ever achieved by any dramatic paper in the world. Five years ago Mr. Fiske obtained a controlling interest in The Mirror, but from the day he took charge of its destinies he had enjoyed sole power, acting upon such advice as commended itself to his judgment, but brooking no interference from stockholders or others in respect to the lines of his own journalistic policy. Last May he purchased the outstanding shares of stock and became the sole and responsible proprietor. Mr. Fiske does a vast amount of work and yet is accessible to a large number of visitors. He writes the editorials, the principal dramatic criticisms, "The Usher," special articles, paragraphs—in fact, his busy pen contributes to almost every department of the paper. On an average he turns out between ten and twelve columns during the working hours of the early days of the week. In addition to this he supervises every portion of the paper and keeps a strict watch on every line that goes into it. This latter duty is somewhat unusual among editors, but Mr. Fiske realizes the importance and never neglects it. He prefers to share personal knowledge of everything that he publishes with personal responsibility for it. And he likes work. For the past nine years he has never been absent from his post but once. On that occasion illness confined him to his home for a week. Even then, however, he had the "revises" brought to him and with the aid of a blue pencil transformed the sick chamber into a sanctum. At different times Mr. Fiske has been the dramatic critic of two New York daily papers and written editorials for another. But he relinquished outside work of every description two years ago in order to devote his whole time and energies to The Mirror. He is a member of the New York Press Club, the Fellowcraft Club, a yachting association, and several other social and literary institutions, but the only organization in which he takes an active personal interest is the Actor's Fund of America, of which he has been the secretary for several years. I., May 23, 1888, Bertha Lewis, b. Nov. 18, 1860. Walter Edward Fiske, son of Walter B. and Matilda H. Fiske, was born in Holyoke, Mass., Nov. 8, 1855. He grew up very much like other children where one's parents are in moderate circumstances. He was given a good common school education and graduated from Cady's Academy, in the town of Barrington, R. I. He entered Brown University in the fall of 1875. Owing to severe illness, on completing his freshman year he was compelled to leave the university. He engaged as clerk for two years with the Boston & Philadelphia S. S. Co. In Jan., 1879, he accepted a position with the Howard Sterling Company, silversmiths. He commenced at the lowest rung of the ladder. On Dec. 31, 1891, he was promoted as secretary of the company above mentioned, which position he occupies. While in Brown University he was first tenor in the Glee Club, and since then he has identified himself with several musical organizations in Providence. He has taken the role of the "Captain" in Pinafore, the "Major General" in the Pirates of Penzance, and the "Marquis" in Chimes of Normandy, with pronounced success in the Opera House of this city. He is a Congregationalist and has always taken an active part in church work. He has a pleasant home on Waterman Street, where with wife and two children he is enjoying the sunny side of life; res. After he became of age and married, he went out west to Iowa, where he remained until 1865, and meantime made quite a little fortune in the grain warehousing business and other ventures. He was then induced to come east and to go into the stock market, which resulted rather badly. Gradually he, being a staunch Republican, became more or less prominent in political life, and held important governmental positions and always with great credit. Under President Grant, he was United States Marshal for the Southern District of New York, succeeding Gen. Geo. H. Sharpe. His methods and office were examined by a Democratic State Committee and the result was a testimonial to his capability, etc., from the committee. Some years after this he was sent to the State Legislature as member of Assembly from Richmond County, which is noteworthy, as the county was then ordinarily Democratic, by twelve hundred to sixteen hundred majority. He has now retired from active life, and is in good health; res. New Brighton, N. Y.

5246. HENRY GUSTAVUS FISK (Sewall, Nathan, Jonathan, Nathan, Nathan, Nathaniel, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Weston, Mass., Apr. 13, 1827; m. California, Apr. 15, 1860, Elizabeth Wynekoop, b. Aug. 24, 1834. He was born in Weston, Apr. 13, 1827. Like all New England farmers' boys he worked on the farm in spring and summer and attended the district school in winter; also attended the high school in Weston. He lived two and one-half miles from the high school in Weston Centre, consequently it was too far to walk, and with three or four sisters, older than himself, rode to school, keeping horse and carriage until night to take them home. He afterward attended Phillips Academy in Andover. He has a vivid recollection of going from there to attend the Whig celebration at Bunker Hill in 1844; of meeting there his father and brother and many friends. At the age of 18 he left home and went to the city of Worcester to learn a trade, that of working in sheet metals. He spent two years there, then one year in the city of Nashua, N. H., after that one year in Clintonville, and the balance of the time, until going to California, in Boston, Waltham and Grafton. In 1851 his brother Edward and himself made arrangements to go to California. They had the usual experience of the California bound in those early days. That is, they were taken up the Chargees River in boats rowed by the natives, spent one night at Gorgona, and then mounted mules and rode to Panama. Here they found no boat to take them on the Pacific side. They remained in Panama nearly two months and took the first passage that could be obtained to San Francisco, where they arrived in good health and spirits. His brother Edward went up to the mines for a short time and he stopped in Sacramento. After a few months Edward came to Sacramento and they both went to San Francisco, where they succeeded in finding employment at their trade, which they followed diligently for nearly a year, then commenced business on their own account. This business was continued up to 1891. In 1856 he visited his old home. That was about the time the Free Soil party was started. Colonel Fremont was at that time in San Francisco, and they became acquainted with him and Mrs. Fremont through business relations. A few years after his return to San Francisco he chartered a large schooner, filled her with goods and shipped them to Mexico. He spent nearly a year in Mazatland, Tepic, San Blas

and other places in Mexico, while his brother attended to the business in San Francisco. He returned to San Francisco about the time of the breaking out of the Civil War, and shortly thereafter went to Virginia City, in Nevada. That was not long after the Comstock mines were discovered. He remained there twenty-one months, removed his family there and built a house for them. They sent over half a dozen of their best men and did a large roofing business as the town grew up. Spent much time also in mining operations, and lost a large amount of money also by them. Shortly after his return to San Francisco his brother died, and from that time to the present his home has been in San Francisco. He has done an extensive business on that coast, extending to the neighboring States and territories and employing many men. The season that the Palace Hotel was built they had in their employ over 175 men, about half that number employed on that building. Res. 710 Central Ave., San Francisco, Cal.

In 1880 the business was merged into a corporation, the Boston Fire Brick Company. The Boston Terra Cotta Company was also organized, Mr. Fiske taking the treasurership of the latter, and his firm the management of both corporations. In the rapid and remarkable development of the manufacture of architectural terra cotta, and of buff, mottled and other fancy colored building bricks, Mr. Fiske has been in the foremost ranks, and has become well known all over the country as a leader in his line of business; res. Feb. 1, 1866, Agnes Hosmer Andrews, b. Nov. 9, 1843. Wilbur Davis Fiske, born in Barkhamsted, Conn., June 7, 1841, and lived there, and at Pleasant Valley, Conn., until he was 7 years old, when his mother died, and his father took him to live with a man in Pleasant Valley, named Moses. Then, about one year after that, he took him to Springfield, Mass., and in a short time to Stafford, Conn. to live with his aunt, Mary E. Cushman. Some time after this his father married again, and resided at Springfield. Wilbur did not stay long, but went back to his Aunt Mary's. He stayed there a year or two, and worked for a neighbor, Mr. Cummings. Went back to Springfield on a visit, and went to work there for Edmund Bigelow, Esq., and was with him three or four years. He sent him to school winters at his home in Bennington, Vt., and he lived with his father, Dr. William Bigelow, one of God's noblemen. In the fall of 1857, his time at Springfield had expired with Edmund Bigelow, and he made arrangements with a doctor in Pittsfield, Mass., to go there and study medicine under him, but on account of the panic of 1857 did not go, but went to New Britain, Conn., with Buckley & Newton, to learn the machinist trade, and steam and hydraulic engineering. They built the gas works and water works for New Britain, and did work all about that section of country. The war broke out; he was then first assistant engineer of the New Britain fire department; he enlisted and helped raise a company for the Fourteenth Regiment Connecticut Volunteers. He was just then coming to be 21 years old, and before he left the State, was made a Freemason in the lodge at New Britain; went to war with the Fourteenth Regiment, Company F, and was attached to the Second Corps, Army of the Potomac. Antietam was his first real battle. At the battle of Fredericksburg, Va., he was in command of the company, and was dangerously wounded, Dec. 13, 1862. Doctors said he could not live but five or six hours; shot through the stomach. He went home, got better, went back, and was just on time to go through the Chancellorsville battle, under Gen. Joe Hooker; then he was soon off for Gettysburg campaign, and the battle of Gettysburg. The boys did themselves proud on that field. They helped stop Pickett's charge, and were just at the right of the bloody angle, and captured six stands of rebel colors in that charge, more than any other regiment got on that day. It was the grandest day he had ever seen in his whole life. When the fight was over that night, it was estimated that he weighed a little over 200 tons. On Oct. 14, 1863, he was wounded again, at the battle of Bristoe Station; then after that, had a beautiful typhoid fever that mustered him out of the service, and he has never seen a well day since; went home to Springfield, Mass., and worked for Mr. E. Bigelow again about six months, then engaged with Geo. Dwight, Jr., & Co., in steam and hydraulic engineering business, and the manufacture of steam pumps. They soon sent him to Boston, Mass., to open a warehouse there for them. He stayed there about one and a half years, and the company was changed to the Norwalk Iron Works. He then left them, and went to work for Knowles & Sibley, manufacturers of the Knowles steam pumps, with his headquarters in New York, and established a warehouse in New York for them. For nine or ten years, with headquarters in New York, he traveled all over the United States, sold pumping machinery for all purposes, and established agencies all over the country and Canada, and the company finally became the Knowles Steam Pump Works. After the great Boston fire he came to Boston to establish business on a better plan for the New England and Canadian trade, and opened a warehouse in Boston for this purpose, and in about six years thereafter the Knowles Steam Pump Works was sold to the Geo. F. Blake Manufacturing Company, who now run both concerns separately. Since that time he has been the general agent of both concerns for the New England States, and sometimes has been called out of the New England States, and has taken charge of all water works contracts in this territory, and the erection of the pumping machinery, and attended to the selling department in all of its multifarious variety for pumping air, gas, water, or any other liquids known, and to be actuated by steam, electricity, belt, or geared power for all purposes, and is still in this same concern and business with headquarters in Boston, Mass. He lives in Melrose, Mass., and belongs to the Wyoming Lodge, Waverly Chapter, Hugh de Payens Commandery, U. S. Grant Post No. 4 G. A. R., a member of the First Congregational Church, and in politics a black Republican. He has filled several town offices; was on the board of water commissioners about twelve years, and chairman five years, and is a member of the Association of the Fourteenth Regiment Connecticut Volunteers, and the Association of the Army of the Potomac. He enlisted as a private and obtained every position in the company up to a captaincy; res. Melrose, Mass.; Boston add. 185 Devonshire St.

5486. CAPT. SMITH WILBUR FISKE (Abram C., Nathan, Josiah, Nathan, William, Nathan, Nathan, Nathaniel, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Coldwater, Mich., Apr. 4, 1839; m. there May 7, 1863, Mary Northan Androus, b. Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 27, 1842. He was born in Coldwater, Mich., where he was raised on a farm until he was 18 years old. At that age he went to Albion, Mich., to college to finish his education, after which he was employed in the Coldwater postoffice and bank for several years, in 1859-60. In 1861 came the firing upon Fort Sumter, the tocsin of a "wicked and gigantic rebellion." The loyal young men of Michigan sprang to arms. Mr. Fiske was among the first to join the Coldwater cadets, a militia company already organized. Within a few hours after that eventful 12th of April, the cadets were drilling daily in the public square, cheered and encouraged by the admiring eyes of hundreds who gathered around them. The cadets were soon accepted and became Company C of the First Michigan Infantry. After a short stop in Detroit they were hurried on to Washington, which they reached May 16, where they were welcomed by the cheers of hundreds, as they were the first western regiment to reach the capitol. They made the first advance across the Long Bridge, driving in the rebel pickets.

of the fight and lost heavily. Many of the Coldwater boys were killed or missing. Clinton B. Fisk, afterward a well known General, wrote from Washington, on July 23, of saved and missing, and mentioned Smith Fiske as having a slight injury to one knee. Mr. Fiske became First Lieutenant in the Nineteenth Michigan Infantry early in 1862, but was obliged to resign June, 1863, on account of severe illness. But two months later we find him recruiting for the Ninth Michigan Cavalry, which was organized at Coldwater, Mich., and he became First Lieutenant of Company K. He left for Kentucky with his regiment May 20, having been married to Miss Mary N. Androus May 7. He left his bride with the promise that if possible he would send for her. They remained in camp near Hickman Bridge for three weeks, Mrs. Fiske reaching there a few hours before they broke camp. She saw him again for a few moments July 4 at Stamford. Then the regiment disappeared and their friends knew nothing of their whereabouts for nearly three weeks, except that they were in chase of General Morgan and his southern guerrillas, who were carrying terror into the homes of Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio. Mrs. Fiske not being able to hear from her husband, finally went on to Cincinnati, hoping that there she might gain news of his whereabouts. All was confusion, marshal law having been proclaimed, and many troops massed around the city. On July 24 the Ninth Regiment cavalry reached Covington and camped in pleasant quarters, and on that same Friday afternoon Mrs. Fiske found a boarding place within a short walk of camp, and they hoped now to be together for a few days at least. At 4 a. m., July 25, the regiment again departed, Lieutenant Fiske being in command of Company K, supposing they were going out on picket duty around Cincinnati. And that was the last Mrs. Fiske knew of their movements, until Sunday at 8 p. m. she received the following telegram from Surgeon Nash at Salineville, O.: "Lieutenant Smith Fiske is dangerously wounded. Come at once." Taking a train at Cincinnati that same evening at 10 Mrs. Fiske reached her husband's side on Monday at 6 p. m. But to go back to the regiment: When they left camp Saturday morning they were hurried into box cars and taken as rapidly as possible to northeast Ohio to cut off Morgan's retreat. Morgan, being tracked, was soon overtaken, when skirmishing commenced and continued until dark, with some loss in wounded, driving the enemy during the entire night. On the morning of the 26th, Morgan being flanked and taking possession of Alexandria May 24, the ill-fated Ellsworth reaching it by stream at about the same hour. After the shooting of Ellsworth, the Michigan men helped the enraged zouaves in despoiling the Marshall House, where the tragic affair occurred, and Mr. Fiske has still in his possession a piece of gilded frame of a mirror, which he carried away as a memento of the affair. July found the Michigan boys still at the front; and Mr. Fiske writes to the home folks from Little Rocky Run, Va., under date of July 20, "that they are only six miles from Manassas Junction, within two and a half miles from the enemy's strongest fortification, that they are expecting orders to move at any moment, and all are in readiness. They would probably go forward that night, and the supposition was that a great battle would soon take place." He was right. They did move that night, and when daylight came, it was the morning of that terrible Sunday, July 21, when our newly united troops fought the great battle of Manassas, or Bull Run, which ended in a complete panic and rout of the Union forces and a retreat on Washington. The First Michigan was in the thickest hard pressed, was forced into an engagement, which resulted, after a severe fight of an hour and a half, in the complete rout of his forces, with a loss of 23 killed, 44 wounded and 305 prisoners, while the detachment of the Ninth lost in wounded Lieutenant Fiske and 7 men. The pursuit was continued, Morgan flying in confusion, until, meeting with the forces under General Shackelford a few hours later, he surrendered. Lieutenant Fiske was shot in the breast about 8 a. m., the bullet going through the body, stopping just below the skin, where it was cut out. It missed his heart by half an inch, passing through the lower part of the lung. He was soon carried to a neighboring farm house, and the wound dressed by the Surgeon, he being the only officer injured in the skirmish. Surgeon Nash met Mrs. Fiske Monday evening at the station and took her out to Mr. Sharp's farm. As they reached the locality of the fight it seemed like a gala day, as hundreds had come from near and far to see what was to be seen. As one of them said, he never had a chance to see a wounded man before—and he an officer. There were at least two or three hundred men, women and children crowded around the house, pressing into doors and windows. It was a terribly hot July day. The Lieutenant was lying in the wing of a log house, the room and yard full. The bed itself was surrounded by a number of young girls busy fanning and waiting upon him, while he was gasping for want of air. Six long weeks they remained in that log house. The hot, dusty August days were very trying, with no blinds or shades to the widows, and the walls and bedstead filled with bed bugs. It was not until six weeks that Lieutenant Fiske began to improve, in spite of the doctors, who insisted that he would not live, and the middle of September found him strong enough to be put on a bed and carried to the town, four miles away, where he was gladly welcomed to the best house in the village, the home of Mr. Nickerson. They gave up the parlor for their use, and showered upon them kindnesses of all kinds. Mrs. Fiske says she will never forget how good that first supper tasted, the first good meal she had had in many weeks. When Mr. Fiske was able to talk he had many visitors from the surrounding farms, all anxious to see and hear him tell of his experiences. He vividly remembers one man who spent an hour or two in telling him how he appreciated his bravery, and finally, on his leaving, presenting him with a silver half dollar as a token of his regard. Bread and cake were brought from twenty and thirty miles, and at one time Mrs. Fiske said she had the bureau drawer full of such tokens. The days passed swiftly, and late in September they were able to reach Cleveland and take the boat for Detroit, from whence by rail to Coldwater, which they reached early in October. In November, 1863, on account of disability he resigned, and was then appointed postmaster in Coldwater, Mich., which he held until the Democratic administration took charge, after which he was a merchant in the boot and shoe business until 1877 at Coldwater, Mich., when he sold out and afterward went into the wholesale boot and shoe business at Sherman, Tex., remaining there two years, selling out in 1879. In 1880 he moved to Minneapolis, Minn., with his family, where he connected himself with the W. S. Nott Company, wholesale rubber boot, shoe, belting and clothing business, remaining up to the present time; res. Minneapolis, Minn.

AMOS KIDDER FISKE.

Amos Kidder Fiske was born in Whitefield, N. H., May 12, 1842. His early years were spent partly on a rough farm in Whitefield and partly in the factory village of Peterboro, N. H., in poverty and hard work. At the age of 16 he found himself without parents or guardian and without a dollar, but with much ambition and little education. He worked in a cotton mill in Peterboro in order to earn money to go to school, and in the spring of 1860 went to Appleton Academy, New Ipswich, N. H. By dint of hard work and study, and extreme energy, earning most of his expenses, was prepared for college in two years; entered Harvard in 1862, borrowing $50 to go to Cambridge, and get a foothold; got through with help of scholarships and other aids with a little borrowing, and was graduated in 1866 summa cum laude, being also class poet of the year. In the autumn of 1866 came to New York, with borrowed money and letters of introduction, including one from George Ticknor to George Ticknor Curtis. Spent first year mostly in private tutoring and got even with the world; then entered law office of Sargent T. Fay, with which Mr. Curtis was connected as counsel; was admitted to the bar in a year, in the meantime and for a year afterward assisting Mr. Curtis in the preparation of his life of Daniel Webster; did all the collecting, sifting and arranging of material, and preparing it to the hand of the author, etc.; also became contributor the same year (1867) to the Annual Cyclopaedia, and kept it up for fifteen years or so. In 1869 abandoned law for journalism and entered the office of the New York Times in September, during brief reign of John Bigelow, after the death of Raymond. He was married, Oct. 27, 1870, to Caroline Child, of Cambridge, Mass., youngest sister of Prof. Francis J. Child. At the beginning of 1872 he went to the Evening Mail as associate editor, under the late J. M. Bundy, and in the spring of 1874 to Boston, as leading editorial writer on the Daily Globe. In 1878 he returned to New York and joined the staff of the Times, where he has been ever since, writing editorials. He has contributed occasionally to Harper's Weekly, and had two or three articles in the Forum, one on the "Remedies of Municipal Misgovernment." He has also written two books, "Midnight Talks at the Club" (Fords, Howard & Hulbert, 1890), and "Beyond the Bourne" (same publishers, 1891). His children were educated in private schools in New York City until 1888, when his son, Philip Sidney, b. Sept. 7, 1872, was ready for college. The family then went to Cambridge to live. The girls entered "Cambridge school," a private institution in charge of Arthur Gilmer, and devoted to preparing students for the "Harvard Annex," now Radcliffe College. His son's health broke down in the fall of 1891, and he took him on a three months' trip to the south, Cuba, Mexico, and the Pacific coast, after which he served an apprenticeship in journalism, as a reporter in the Times office until the summer of 1893, when he returned to college, and completed his course in June, 1894. For the year past has been working on newspapers in Boston, but is not definitely settled. His daughter, Annette, born Oct. 13, 1873, entered the "Annex" (society for the collegiate instruction of women, which became Radcliffe College in 1893-4) in 1890, graduated 1894, magna cum laude, but continued there as a graduate student and intends to remain another year. His daughter Marguerite, born Jan. 28, 1876, entered "Annex" as "special student" in 1892, devoting herself chiefly to modern languages, and will continue another year on same footing. Special students do not take regular degree. Res. New York, N. Y., care The Century, 7 W. 43d St.

Returning to Vermont he remained a short time, and in the spring of 1857 started west and located in Minnesota. In 1865, in February, he enlisted in the First Minnesota Heavy Artillery, and went to Chattanooga, Tenn., where he was stationed; was mustered out of the service at Nashville the last of September the same year, and was discharged at Fort Snelling Oct. 9, 1865. He located a claim near Stillwater, Minn., when he first went west, and on his return from the war went back on his farm where he has since resided. Nov., 1871, Mary Augusta Fielding, b. May 8, 1848; d. Apr. 19, 1876; m. 2d, June, 1882, Mrs. Fox; res. Saratoga, N. Y. William Oscar Fiske was son of William Fiske. The brick house in which he was born was built by his father and is still standing at the corner of Andover and Fayette Streets. He was educated in the Lowell schools and at the Merrimack Normal Institute at Reeds Ferry, N. H. His first business experience was with the produce firm of A. L. Waite & Co., of which he became a member. Subsequently he engaged in similar business in Boston, and it was in this pursuit that the Civil War found him in 1861. He entered the service as First Lieutenant on the 16th of April of that year, on the staff of Gen. B. F. Butler, and served during the three months' campaign in the vicinity of Fortress Monroe, and took part in the engagements at Big Bethel and Hatteras Inlet. The unfortunate differences between Governor Andrew and General Butler during the war will be well remembered by all who were not in their infancy in those days. The Governor refused to recognize General Butler's appointments and consequently the commission of First Lieutenant of a company, which the deceased was then given by General Butler was not recognized by the State; and in the official report of the affair at Hatteras Inlet, where Captain Fiske swam ashore from the vessel to carry a despatch from General Butler to the commander of the land forces, he is mentioned with approbation as "Mr. Fiske of Massachusetts." A contemporary edition of Harper's Weekly contained an account, with illustration, of this exploit, and the young hero was thenceforth famous. The papers of that time mention him as the most distinguished of the Massachusetts men, save Gen. Butler. Returning to Massachusetts with General Butler, he was appointed Assistant Quartermaster-General, for the department of New England, with headquarters at Camp Chase (fair grounds, Lowell). While at home he was presented with a regulation sword, belt and saddle by his grateful fellow-citizens. Here he remained till the command was ordered south to the Department of the Gulf. At Ship Island he was transferred to the command of Gen. George F. Shepley, as Commissary of Subsistence with the rank of Captain, which was his first recognized commission, after having served nine months without pay. In this capacity he acted a portion of the time while General Shepley was Military Governor of Louisiana. During his official career he was under a West Point officer, who was noted rather for querulousness than ability, and Captain Fiske, with other officers of the department, was subject to an investigation, which, in his case, resulted in bringing him very high commendation instead of censure. When General Butler received authority to recruit and raise troops in Louisiana, Captain Fiske was assigned to the United States barracks, in New Orleans, as Quartermaster and Commissary for that post, which was the recruiting station of the department. He was subsequently commissioned as Major of the First Louisiana Regiment, which was the first Union white regiment raised in any of the Confederate States. The regiment took an active part in most of the engagements in that department. Donaldsonville, Irish Bend, Port Hudson, Cox's Plantation, Mansura, Francesville, and the battlefields of the Red River campaign—all were crimsoned with their blood. He was wounded in the leg while engaged in forcing a landing in the engagement at Irish Bend, Grand Lake, near Bayou Teche, during the first advance on Port Hudson under General Banks. Against the advice of the surgeon he left the hospital and went on to the field. Almost the first thing that met his eye was the dead body of Colonel Holcomb, of Connecticut, his own commanding officer, who had been killed while leading his troops in the brave and famous attempt that was made to storm the enemy's works that day. Colonel Fiske's brother, Maj. E. A. Fiske, of Lawrence, took part in same engagement. After this (June 15, 1863) the Lowell boy was commissioned Colonel, and during the Red River campaign, he commanded the Second Brigade, Nineteenth Army Corps, a part of the time. An act of special importance and bravery was his recapture of guns from Gen. Dick Taylor. During his long service he was absent from duty but thirty days. March 13, 1865, he was breveted Brigadier-General of volunteers for gallant and meritorious conduct.

In all these years of military service his bearing was such as to command the love of his soldiers and respect of all officers. When he returned to New Orleans on business after the close of the war he was tendered a banquet at the St. Charles Hotel, with every mark of respect due to a distinguished person. When he was mustered out he returned to Lowell and as soon as the congratulations of his rejoicing friends would allow him, he engaged in business, his first venture being the southern lumber business, in which the late Josiah B. Fielding was his partner. The firm name was "Fielding & Fiske." This, however, was short-lived, for in June, 1871, Mr. Fielding having died, the old firm of J. B. Fielding & Co. was succeeded by the present well-known house of Fiske & Spalding. General Fiske was a very public-spirited man, though the only civil office he ever held was that of Councilman in 1869 and 1870. His first rate executive ability made him always in demand whenever any charitable or social enterprise or public demonstration of any magnitude was proposed. Besides being a member of Kilwinning Lodge, F. & A. M., and Pilgrim Commandery, K. T., and of the Loyal Legion, he was one of the charter members of B. F. Butler Post, No. 42, G. A. R., and was commander of the post. In 1870 he was junior vice-commander of the department of Massachusetts, G. A. R. He was appointed Assistant Quartermaster-General on the staff of Governor Talbot in 1879, and aide-de-camp to Governor Long in 1880, each time with the rank of Colonel. In society he was a favorite, where his modesty, urbanity, good fellowship and probity were appreciated. Even the above meager account of his military exploits proves that his was not an ordinary career. He was born a soldier, and gave ample evidence of all those qualities which go to make up a successful commander. He won every title that was bestowed upon him, and that of Brigadier-General is no meaningless compliment. Those who were in the war will remember with what frequency his name appeared in print in those days. In his private life he was upright and honorable, and in business he has been blessed with the same success which characterized his operations upon the field of battle. He d. Feb. 2, 1886; res. 5535. MAJOR EDWARD AMBROSE FISKE (William, Aaron, Aaron, Asa, Nathaniel, Nathaniel, Nathan, Nathaniel, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Lowell, Mass., Nov. 22, 1838; m. at Lawrence, June 20, 1883, Lizzie Crosby Dana, b. Jan. 11, 1855. Major Fiske was born in Lowell and there spent his early days. He was the son of William Fiske, of that city, and a brother of Gen. W. O. Fiske. When the Civil War broke out deceased was 23 years old, and was exploring timber lands in Canada, one hundred miles north of Montreal. Hearing that his country's flag had been assailed by traitor's hands, he set out at once for home and arriving in Lowell at noon time of a September day, 1861, he made his way at once to the recruiting office. Here he was rejected, as he was below the required height. That night he sought out a shoemaker and ordered two thicknesses of leather to be placed on his shoes. Returning next day to the recruiting office, he was again rejected, but seemed so anxious to go to the front that after a while he was passed and sent to Camp Chase with the nucleus of a regiment, Company B, to which Private Fiske was attached, had been recruited by Captain Blanchard. On Sept. 5, 1861, the company was mustered in. Deceased was elected Second Lieutenant Nov. 27, 1861, and advanced to First Lieutenant Aug. 21, 1862. The company was made a part of the Thirtieth Massachusetts Regiment and was dispatched with that regiment for service on the Gulf. On Oct. 21, 1862, Lieutenant Fiske was promoted to Captain and with his company engaged in service at New Orleans, and subsequently was ordered up the river to Baton Rouge. During the siege of Vicksburg his regiment did duty on the river. The rebel gunboat Arkansas was near by and doing a great deal of damage. Two Union gunboats were ordered in pursuit and Captain Fiske had charge of one. A conflict resulted and raged for six hours. During that time the Captain, pistol in hand, stood by the pilot house, directing the movement of the gunboat. Men were falling on all sides, but he bravely held his position until the battle closed. Later his regiment was ordered up the Red River to join Gen. Banks' expedition. He was placed in charge of the commissary department but as he was anxious to get to the front he was placed on General Berge's staff. During the campaign two horses were shot from beneath him. On the last occasion his horse fell upon his sword and pinned down, he was compelled to cut his straps and flee for his life. Being sent to Washington on business, he was granted a furlough home and was presented by friends with two beautiful swords. Returning to his regiment he took an active part in the closing engagements of the war, and on Feb. 17, 1865, was breveted Major for gallant services on the field. His term of services lasted four years and four months. At the close of the war the Major leased a plantation in South Carolina, investing several thousand dollars. Sectional hatred was rampant in that locality, and before the first crop was harvested he sought more peaceful quarters in the north, being threatened with death if he persisted in remaining. He left for Pennsylvania and in 1868 came to Lawrence, where he engaged in the business, which he conducted in person until disease, which has now caused his death, fastened upon him two years before. He was a member of the Loyal Legion of Massachusetts, of Bethany Commandery Knights Templar, and Tuscan Lodge of Masons. He was commander of Needham Post, Grand Army, in 1870, and was instrumental, more than any other man, in raising funds for and erecting the beautiful soldiers' monument on the common. No braver soldier, more discreet and capable officer went from Massachusetts into the service of the country; no truer comrade of the Grand Army, with deeper, more constant devotion to the interests of all who had defended the flag, ever lived in that city; no more generous hearted, open handed, public spirited citizen, has blessed any community; a more unselfish, steadfast, self-sacrificing friend, has not been born or lived in this generation than Major Edward A. Fiske. He d. Dec. 28, 1887; res. s. p. 7 East Haverhill St., Lawrence, Mass.

M. Perry, b. May 17, 1836, dau. of Abel H. Dea. Geo. Batchelder Fiske, the third son of Timothy and Lucretia Batchelder, born in Holliston, Mass. His early life was spent on the farm, with the usual benefits of the public schools, and by his personal efforts was enabled to pursue a higher education at Mt. Hollis Seminary, thus fitting himself for active mercantile life, which he commenced at the age of 18, with good success. In 1856 he married Ada M. Perry, a successful teacher in the public schools, and had two sons and two daughters. Mr. Fiske pursued the study of engraving and printing of bank notes, and being skilled in the art, he was engaged in teaching and instructing the bankers and business men of the cities and towns of New England in the art of detecting counterfeit and altered bank notes at sight. Mr. Fiske has been a member of the Congregational Church for many years, and served on all of its official boards with satisfaction and esteem. In politics Mr. Fiske has always been a Republican, and deeply interested in good government in all things. Early in life was a strong advocate of the largest liberty of speech and action to promote the best results. A strong friend and admirer of Abraham Lincoln for President; he was appointed as postmaster, and served two terms, and was elected by the town as treasurer and collector, serving seven years, with a grand record. As his town recognized good abilities, they elected him as town clerk, and he served them as such for fifteen years, many times receiving a unanimous vote. Mr. Fiske was elected a Representative from this district to the general court, 1880, redeeming the district from his political opponents, and was re-elected the next year by an increased majority, when he served both years as clerk of important committees, also using his knowledge of the business of insurance (which he had acquired from many years of actual practice) in improving the insurance laws of the State and enacting and establishing a long needed uniform policy of insurance for all companies doing business in this State. Mr. Fiske has been a member of the school board for many years, and served as clerk. Also a member of the Holliston, Medway and Millis School Union for the employment and supervision of it; superintendent of the schools in said towns, he having been one of the promoters of this excellent plan of providing a better system of graded schools for the small towns. During the spare hours of Mr. Fiske's busy life he introduced the business of knitting by machinery in a small way, which grew to large proportions, employing at times sixty hands in manufacturing seamless hosiery (the first in this State), knitted goods, and a specialty of infants' underwear, all of which found ready and profitable sales. Holliston being an enterprising and progressive town, concluded to advocate and encourage the building of an electric railway to its larger neighbors, and thus called a town meeting and elected a committee to proceed for the best interests of the town, and Mr. Fiske was chosen on the committee and elected as its clerk, on whom fell the responsible duties of formulating a contract for the town, also supervising the survey and location of the railway tracks, locating and building car houses, and whatever was of interest to his town. Mr. Fiske being of a genial social bearing, a promoter of the good and true, assisted in encouraging the institution of Mt. Hollis Masonic Lodge, and in 1865 was the first regularly raised Mason in that lodge, and also proceeded until he became a Sir Knight in the Milford Commandery, of Massachusetts. Mr. Fiske is a member of the Holliston Lodge of the Knights of Honor, and a firm believer in great good that has been done and is being accomplished by this noble order to the widows and families of its members. Mr. and Mrs. Fiske being firm believers in a higher education for those who deserve it, that the better the education the better citizen, that the educated man or woman can obtain a higher position in society and a more lucrative situation in the business world, and acting on that line, have educated their children accordingly. Mr. Fiske was this year (1896) elected chairman of the school board by a full vote; res. Holliston, Mass.

In 1883 entered Harvard Medical School, of Harvard University, from which he obtained his degree of M. D., in 1886. The summer of that year was appointed assistant resident physician of Adams Asylum, at Jamaica Plain, Mass., which position he occupied two years. He then began active general practice of medicine and surgery in Fitchburg, Mass., and still remains there. He is a member of Massachusetts Medical Society; treasurer of Worcester North District Medical Society, and has held the same position in Fitchburg Society for Medical Improvement. 5674. GEORGE C. FISK (Thomas T., Thomas, John, Isaac, John, Nathaniel, Nathan, Nathaniel, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Mar. 4, 1831, Hinsdale, N. H.; m. June 7, 1853, Maria E. Ripley, b. Sept. 6, 1835, at Winchester, N. H.. The president and superintendent of the Wason Manufacturing Company, George C. Fisk, exemplifies in his career the possibilities of every young man who sets out early in life to accomplish whatever he undertakes and to pursue that which has in it something worth striving for. Mr. Fisk was born in Hinsdale, N. H., and he began work in a country store at Hinsdale, kept by E. W. Hunt and by Amidon & Holland. But selling dry goods and drawing molasses did not suit his taste as well as working in a shop, so he concluded to try his fortune elsewhere. At 20 years of age, in 1851, he left Hinsdale for Springfield, carrying with him $15 as his total cash capital with which to buffet what might prove to be "the shafts of outrageous fortune." Not meeting with just what he first desired to engage in, he entered here a dry goods store, but left that, and tried for a time work in a grocery store. That did not promise to be any more congenial than what he had experienced at Hinsdale, and not many months afterward he went west. At Cleveland, O., he stopped to renew the acquaintance of a friend. He had some rather indefinite promises as to work, but as it was not forthcoming he turned book agent, and commenced selling Mrs. Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin." That venture flourished until a crabbed old fellow threatened to kick him out of his house if he ever caught him selling any more books to his family, and that suggested to him the propriety of still going farther west. He went to Beloit, Wis., and looked about the town; but the slipshod way of conducting business, then characteristic of all new towns in the west, turned his thoughts backward to New England. He found that to succeed in the west capital was just as necessary as in the east, and the next thing he did was to return to Springfield. Eleazer Ripley was about to begin the manufacture of locomotives, and he wanted a bookkeeper. While the machinery was being put in he went home to Hinsdale to make a desk. Two weeks later Mr. Ripley sent for him to return. Mr. Wason was about to go west on a business trip, and he wanted Mr. Fisk to act temporarily as bookkeeper for him in his absence. Mr. Ripley consented, and what was intended only as a temporary engagement resulted in permanent employment. It may be interesting to know that he commenced with Mr. Wason on a salary of $1 a day. From his first employment he rose to paymaster as well as bookkeeper, and in 1854 to a partnership interest. When the company was incorporated, he was made treasurer, and later still vice-president, and president and general manager on the death of Mr. Wason, which positions he continues to hold. Few men have shown such tireless energy in the pursuit of business, from the early beginning of the company up to its complete triumph, and have seen so much coming back in return. Through summer and winter for many years Mr. Fisk was the first man at the shop, fully knowing that the eye of the master inspired close attention to the work in hand. If there was a contract to be had, he was off for it, and back again as quickly as possible, to see that the work was speedily finished. Wherever he went he carried a tabulated form of cost of work with him, and if any one wanted an estimate in the middle of the night, he could give it to him at once. It was this promptness, and giving each what he agreed to give in the way of finished work, that brought him many thousands of dollars when some other concerns were running short time. After the shops were located at Brightwood—a name given to the locality in honor of Dr. Holland's "Brightwood," which is perched upon the eminence to the east of it—Mr. Fisk bought "Brightwood" itself of Dr. Holland, who had gone to New York to edit Scribner's Monthly, now the Century—a home that the genial doctor left with many regrets, and which Mr. Fisk succeeded to with as lively feelings of personal satisfaction. It was near his work, and it has a charming outlook among the trees—conspicuous, and often noticed by travelers up and down the Connecticut valley—in its bright and tasteful colors, harmonizing so completely with the deep green of surrounding foliage of summer months. To give a summary in chronological order of Mr. Fisk's connection and promotion with the Wason Company it would read: Entered the office of T. W. Wason, Sept. 8, 1852, at $1 a day; admitted to the firm, Dec., 1854; elected treasurer, Jan. 17, 1862; elected vice-president, Apr. 14, 1869; elected president, Feb. 6, 1871. Mr. Fisk has been a hard worker in every sense, but of late years he has found more time for recreation, though always keeping a close watch on his large and increasing business. He has given some attention to the rearing of Holstein stock, and is interested in other kinds of manufacturing, holding an interest in the Fisk Soap Works, the Springfield Power Company, and is the owner of a mill for the manufacture of paper at Hinsdale. Some years since he conceived the plan of building a place for entertainment in Brightwood, and Fisk's Casino is the result. It was dedicated in 1885, and has since furnished a place for amateur theatricals, conducted entirely by home talent. It was built entirely by Mr. Fisk, and it is, indeed, a charming place, and which is highly appreciated. The

The Casino stands at the corner of Main street and Wason avenue, and is sixty-six by thirty-seven feet. The interior is finished in hard wood and pleasingly ornamented by tasteful decorations; res. May 10, 1842. He was born in Hinsdale, N. H., and while a small boy assisted his father in the manufacture of soaps. Later he clerked in a country store in his native town. He remained there four years, and went to Northampton and kept books for Thayer & Sargent. While in Northampton he was taken sick and obliged to go home and remain about a year. In the meantime his eldest brother, George C. Fisk, now president of the Wason Manufacturing Company, had come to Springfield and was a member of the car manufacturing firm of Thomas W. Wason & Co., and as soon as Noyes W. was able he came to Springfield and entered the office of Wason & Co. as bookkeeper. After a year or so his place there was taken by Henry S. Hyde, now treasurer of the Wason Manufacturing Company, and he became bookkeeper for E. B. Haskell & Sons, grocers, and remained with them until he enlisted, in 1862, in Company A, of the Forty-sixth regiment. When he had served out the term as a private, he returned to Springfield and started for himself in the grocery and provision business. In 1867 he sold out and went into the manufacture of lamp black on the corner of Chestnut and Ringgold streets. He had hardly got well started in his new venture, when he woke up one morning in Feb., 1868, to find that all his buildings, except one had been burned and he then sold out what remained of his business, and May 15, 1868, went into the soap business. This was started in Hinsdale, in 1857, by Mr. Fisk's father and brother. In 1861, the senior Mr. Fisk died and William Smith bought his interest in the business. The removal of the business was then determined upon, and in the spring of 1861, the business was established. A year or two after the removal Mr. Smith died. The principal markets for the Fisk Manufacturing Company's goods are in New England, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Ohio, and steady and gratifying growth of the business is the best possible evidence of the estimation in which the company's goods are held. Mr. Fisk was for seven years a member of the common council and has for eleven years been a member of the water commissioners and the only man connected with the water department who has no salary. He is a director in the Chicopee National Bank, the Springfield Woodworking Company, the Hampden Paint Works, and the Masonic Mutual Insurance Company, and is a trustee of the School for Christian Workers, the Winthrop Club, and Springfield Commandery of Knights Templar. These positions of public and financial trust show the estimation in which Mr. Fisk is held by the general and business community. Mr. and Mrs. Fisk are members of Memorial Church, but since their removal to Ward Five have attended the First Church, where they are valued workers; res. Springfield, Mass.

July 14, 1880, Jennie McGraw, d. Sept. 30, 1881, s. p. When very young he disclosed an uncommon aptitude for the acquisition of languages, and a precocious interest in both literature and politics. He pursued his school education at Cazenovia Seminary and at Hamilton College, but left that institution in his sophomore year to go abroad and study the Scandinavian languages. At Copenhagen he enjoyed the friendship of Prof. Raft, the distinguished Danish archaeologist. With little aid except some occasional correspondence with the New York Tribune, he sustained himself during 1849-52, passing two years in the University of Upsala, giving lessons in English and lecturing on American literature, and speaking Swedish so well that he commonly passed with the students for a Swede. In 1852 he returned to New York and took a place in the Astor Library, where he remained as assistant until 1859, still pursuing his studies in languages, and in making a collection of Icelandic books, which soon became the most considerable in this country. So enthusiastically had he directed his attention to that enlightened island that it was said that few natives were more familiar with its geography, history, politics, and literature than he. In 1859-60 he was general secretary of the American Geographical Society. In 1861-2 he was again abroad, and attached to the American legation at Vienna, under Minister John Lotthrop Motley. Returning, he was editor of the Daily Journal, of Syracuse, N. Y., in 1864-6, and through 1867 had charge of the Hartford (Conn.) Courant, from which he was called in 1868, after another extensive tour abroad, which embraced Egypt and Palestine, to the professorship of the north European languages, and the place of chief librarian, at Cornell University. In his unremitting labors for years in the classroom, as librarian, and as director of the university press, no inconsiderable degree of the success of the institution is due. During this time he took a deep interest in the reform of the civil service, and was a most influential writer and lecturer in its behalf. In 1879 he was again abroad for five months, and visited Iceland. He had been a principal promoter in this country of the contribution of a library on the celebration of the national millennium, and upon his arrival he was the guest of the nation and accorded honors seldom, if ever, given before by one nation to a private citizen of another. His health failing from his severe application to college duties, he went abroad again in 1880. In that year, in Berlin, he married Miss Jennie Mc-Graw, of Ithaca, N. Y., who died in Sept., 1881. In 1881 he resigned his offices at Cornell and took up his permanent residence in Florence, Italy. Although his chief work had been that of a scholar and bibliophile, he has been a voluminous contributor to various Swedish, Icelandic and German journals, and to the American press. He was one of the famous chess tournament of 1857, and in conjunction with Paul Morphy, edited the "American Chess Monthly" in 1857-60, and compiled the "Book of the American Chess Congress" (New York, 1859). He has edited various university publications, such as the "Ten-Year Book of Cornell," the "Register," etc., and many bibliographical publications, such as the "University Library Bulletin," the "Bibliographia Psiupsionica," etc. He was one of the chief promoters of the chapter-house system in the Greek letters societies. He is now engaged in completing his two private book collections, one relating to Petrarch, the other to Icelandic history and literature—the most considerable collections in existence relating to those subjects—and is printing privately a series of "Bibliographical Notices" illustrating his collections. 5689. CAPT. JOHN MURRAY FISK (Moses M., Isaac, Moses, Isaac, John, Nathaniel, Nathan, Nathaniel, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Framingham, Mass., Sept. 28, 1838; m. at West Dedham, Oct. 22, 1861, Carrie E. Morgan, b. Aug. 25, 1837. John M. Fisk was born in Framingham, and was the son of Moses M. and Harriet H. Fisk of that town. He was one of a family of eight children. But two of these survive him—Mrs. Horatio Gardner, of East Holliston, and Mrs. Willard Howe, of South Framingham. As a boy Capt. Fisk was a hard worker. He graduated from the Framingham high school, and in 1860 went to work for William H. Brackett, at Newton, Mass., in the provision business. Soon after he was elected constable of the town. He was the only policeman in Newton at that time, and was the first man to hold such a position there. He lived in Newton twenty-four years. In 1872 he was appointed deputy sheriff, which position he held for twelve years. In May, 1884 he was appointed special sheriff for High Sheriff Cushing, and placed in charge of the Middlesex county house of correction, East Cambridge, which position he held until his death. Capt. Fisk married Caroline E. Morgan, daughter of John Morgan, of West Dedham. She survives him. One child was born to them. She is Mrs. George D. Ford, wife of Capt. Fisk's able assistant. Capt. Fisk was a thirty-second degree Mason, and a member of many secret societies, among them Newton Blue Lodge, Royal Arch, Cambridge Commandery, Royal Arcanum, Ancient and Honorable Artillery and Mystic Shrine. He was also a member of the Colonial Club. By his death Middlesex county loses one of the most efficient officers it has ever had and the prisoners who have come under his charge will miss a good friend. The sentiment of the whole community is expressed in the tribute paid Capt. Fisk recently by Representative John H. Ponce, who said to a Globe reporter: "As a deputy sheriff Capt. Fisk was a universal favorite with the lawyers of Middlesex county. He was prompt and reliable in the service of the processes of the courts, and was looked upon as authority on many mooted questions. He was especially kind and helpful to young attorneys. Since he has been master of the house of correction there has been no word of complaint as to the management of the institution or the treatment of prisoners. While keeping them in the closest custody, he has been most humane in his treatment of them. He was highly respected by the judges of the county. His acts of private charity among the poor in East Cambridge were numerous, and his death is spoken of with great sorrow by the people in his district." He d. May 3, 1896; res. East Cambridge, Mass.

Fiske and Maria L. (Brown) Fiske. The subject of our sketch was born in Rutherford County and in the State of Tennessee. At the age of 14 his parents removed to Bloomington, Ill. He worked on his father's farm during the summer and in the winter went to school. When the State Normal University was located at Bloomington he was one of the first to enroll his name as a student in that institution. Before graduating he made up his mind that he would obtain a collegiate education and went to Providence, R. I., and entered the high school in that city, from which he graduated. He then entered Brown University; while there the War of the Rebellion broke out and he enlisted in Company B, Tenth Regiment Rhode Island Volunteers. His health broke down and he was honorably discharged and entered college again, but owing to ill health contracted while in the army he was not able to continue his studies and went to Chicago, where he found a position in the employ of William B. Keen & Co., as a commercial traveler. On the restoration of his health he entered the Law School at Albany, N. Y., and graduated from that school in May, 1865. He then commenced the practice of law in the city of Syracuse, N. Y., in partnership with Irving G. Vann, who is now a Judge of the Court of Appeals in that State. While in that city he married Frances J. Price, of Avon, N. Y. His practice in the law was quite lucrative, but owing to close application to business his health became once more impaired and he removed to Perry, N. Y. His practice here was not so lucrative as it was in the city, but it was far more beneficial to his health. While in Perry his wife died (Mar. 19, 1873). In the following fall he removed to Rochester, N. Y., where he now resides. In 1875 he married Priscilla M. Westlake, of Perry, N. Y. He has one son by his second wife. Edwin Westlake Fiske, born on the 19th day of Dec., 1876, and who is now attending Rochester University. Mr. Fiske has always taken quite an interest in politics, though not a politician in the strict sense of the word. An ardent Republican and in every presidential campaign takes the stump for the nominees of that party. He is a member of the Baptist Church and held quite a number of offices in that church Superintendent of the Sunday school; deacon and trustee—the last two he now holds in the Lyell Avenue Baptist Church at Rochester. He is interested in quite a number of enterprises of a local character and also in mining operations in British Columbia; res. Rochester, N. Y.; add. 32 Smith's Arcade.

6272. HON. CHARLES H. FISK (Henry C., John, Rufus, Rufus, Stephen, William, Nathan, Nathan, Nathaniel, William, Robert, Simon, Simon, William, Symond), b. Manchester, Mich., June 19, 1858; m. at Clinton, Oct. 3, 1882, Ida J. Dorr, b. Nov. 20, 1858. His mother was a daughter of Job Graves, a native of Deerfield, Franklin County, Mass., and a descendant of the early settlers in the colonies. Therefore his ancestors were strictly of New England descent and of the oldest families of New England, and his grandfathers both partook of the characteristics of the New England people. He has often made the statement that of all the men he has ever known, he has not known of better men than his grandfathers. After his father was killed in the army, with his mother and younger brother he removed to Franklin Township, Lenawee County, Mich., where he attended country schools. These, supplemented by two years in the village schools at Clinton, in the same county, and one year at Adrian College, in the same county, completed his preparatory education. He taught country schools for three years, and afterward, at the age of 20, entered the law office of Alfred Russell, of Detroit, Mich. After eighteen months' study he was admitted to the bar and practiced common law for five years, after which he took up the study and later the practice of patent law, of which he now makes a specialty. In the fall of 1894 he was nominated by the Republican party in Detroit as one of ten Representatives from the city at large in the State Legislature; he was recognized as one of the leaders of the House, and his services to his constituents is indicated in the newspaper notices of the day. He is about five feet ten inches in height, and weighs about 250 pounds. He has always been a Republican in politics, as were his father and grandfather before him. His grandfather had liberal ideas in religious matters. His father was a member of the Congregational Church, but he has never affiliated with any church, and has been considered liberal in his views. One of the Detroit papers in referring to the Representatives in the Legislature said of Hon. Chas. H. Fisk: "Fisk bore himself all through as the opponent of such methods as those which led to the eternal disgrace of that body, and he took the side of the people as against that of the corporations. In all things he acted well, but he was only a drop in an ocean most of the time. A really strong man, an honest man, a man of good information and some undoubted ambition to occupy higher political station, he was the one member of the delegation from Detroit who can be said to have made the most favorable impression at the capital." Res. Detroit, Mich.; add. 42 Hodges Block.

Case, b. July 28, 1878. The earlier part of his life while a boy was spent on old homestead, four miles from Huntington, in Chester. He left home when about 15 years old; went to Springfield, engaged to work one year at meat business and here continued for one year. At the end of year the proprietor sold out and he engaged next store in bakery business; had been there only three months when sickness compelled him to retire from this business, and he was unable to do much for a year. Then worked at the lumber and grain business with his father at Huntington, continuing until Nov., 1888, when he began for himself in same business. In 1889 he sold out and went to Kearney City, Neb., where he remained four months; when he returned and began a year of study at Childs Business College, finishing in July, 1890. He then engaged with F. W. Tucker as Fisk & Tucker, to carry on meat business on State Street, Springfield, but sold out in about three months to Mr. Tucker, as business was very dull. He next went to Huntington, where he was married Dec. 10, 1890, and again began with his father in the lumber and feed business, which he continued until Sept. 1891, when he began in the meat business, which he has since carried on together with apples and fruit of all kinds. In 1895 he shipped about forty car loads of apples. In 1894 he bought a small place three-fourths of a mile from Huntington, where he and family live. He has two children, a boy and a girl; res.
